CHICAGO

What We Claim for Our New Red Rose

RICHMOND

That it is the best red forcing variety yet produced because

1st. It is of strong and rapid growth, more vigorous than any other forcing variety in commerce.
2nd. It comes to perfection without special care or culture and can be grown in the same soil and temperature and with the same treatment given to Bride and Maid.
3rd. It ships perfectly, as it can be cut very tight and developes as well off as on the bush.
4th. Has very near the same tone of color as Liberty, with more scarlet and does not blue with age.
5th. This variety is nearly a pure tea, being seeded from LADY BATTERSEA, fertilized by LIBERTY, and as a result has shown no tendency toward going dormant in mid-winter, at which time the variety is at its very best.
6th. Produces freely throughout the year, long pointed buds on tall straight stems with elegant dark foliage.
7th. Is as easy to root, and grafts as readily as Bride or Maid.
8th. Has as delicious a fragrance as American Beauty.

Was awarded the silver cup at the World's Fair for best seedling rose and a special silver cup at Chicago for best seedling. Prices, own root—100 plants for $30; 250 for $70; 1000 for $250. 500 at 1000 rate.

ROSALIND ORR ENGLISH

Our pink seedling from Mme. Chatenay is unapproached in color; the bud is pointed, quite full, borne on long slender stems, beautifully set with foliage, free in growth and bloom; the flower is very beautiful from its earliest bud form till fully expanded. Was awarded certificate of merit at the Chicago Show. $25.00 per 100; $200 per 1000.

BOTH THESE VARIETIES ARE EASY TO PROPAGATE AND EASY TO GROW. COME AND SEE THEM AT HOME.

Carnations

The best big-flowered, general purpose scarlet carnation now before the trade is CARDINAL. Color superb, texture perfect, in vigorous health and of splendid habit. Also FIANCEE and F. BURKI. All three at $12 per 100; $100 per 1000.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Among the new varieties which we had on trial for this year are some magnificent sorts, 9 of which have been awarded certificates, viz.:

CLEMENTINE TOUSET, the big early white Chadwick, Oct. 8.
DR. GALLOWAY, mid-season incurving white.
MLLE. JEANNIE NONIN, very late white, winner of the sweepstakes and silver cup at Chicago as best new 'mum of the year. These three sorts are marvelously fine commercial varieties in pure white, NONIN probably ranking as the finest 'mum extant, regardless of date of blooming. Besides these are REVEIL de BEGLES, early commercial yellow.

ROI d' ITALIE, early commercial yellow.
ANNA DEBONO, MME. E. LEMOINE, PREFET BONCOURT, SOUV. d' CALVAT PERE, } Four grand exhibition Whites.

Besides these we have
THE WELLS-POCKETT Set for 1905.
THE AUSTRALIANS of the year.
THE MARQUIS OF PINS SET.
M. CALVAT'S FINE SORTS.
The best of NONIN'S, BRUANT'S and ROZAIN'S.

All at 50c each; $5 per doz.; $35 per 100, except Mrs. Wm. Duckham which is 75c each; $7.50 per doz.; $50 per 100.

THE CHICAGO EXHIBITION

The attendance at the Chicago exhibition increased steadily toward the end of the week and Saturday night brought a crowd which packed the halls to their fullest capacity. The attendance has been, on the whole, fully up to the expectations of the management and, coupled with expenses below those of recent years, has made the show a financial success. Artistically the exhibition was very good indeed in point of arrangement, Manager George Asmus being entitled to the highest commendation for the very excellent disposition made of so great a quantity of material that it was all the more to his credit that the several halls appeared so well. Much of the stock failed of the display necessary to bring out its good points, but this was wholly due to lack of space. This is resulting in an agitation which it is to be hoped will take form in Chicago having a real flower show next year. Chicago had a real show this year except for space. The same material, and the same good work, with the Coliseum next year will result in the greatest flower show ever held in this country, and with a popular price and favorable weather like that of last week the attendance should run far into the tens of thousands.

The table decorations proved to be one of the most attractive features of the show, but here, too, the effect was somewhat impaired by lack of space, necessitating smaller tables than the exhibitors had expected to use. These decorations were all of the very highest quality, including chrysanthemums, roses, carnations, orchids, sweet peas, etc., and probably do as much if not more than any other feature of the show to stimulate the people who attend to buy flowers.

The carnation display staged on Thursday was one of unusual extent and quality. At the close of the week the professional interest centered in the seedlings exhibited. In chrysanthemums the growers took an instant liking to Mlle. Jeannie Nonin, exhibited by the E. G. Hill Co. It was easily ahead of everything else in the seedling classes. It is a very large round white bloom on a strong stem, stiff necked and with foliage right up to the bloom. The center is perfectly full. The flower is of the Timothy Eaton character, but the exhibitor stated that Eaton is well past before this variety is ready to cut.

Of the seedling carnations, No. 93, exhibited by the Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association, attracted the most attention. It is in the Scott shade of pink, just a shade darker than Fiancee, well formed and very promising. My Maryland, white, exhibited by H. Weber & Sons, attracted much favorable comment. Another sort which impressed the growers very favorably was Victory, exhibited by Guttman & Weber. The flowers came all the way from Long Island to be staged on Thursday and were as fresh as anything in the hall when the show closed Saturday night. Fred Burki, the new white exhibited by John Murchie and S. S. Skidelsky, was also well thought of by the growers. It maintains its reputation earned last season. Eclipse, shown by Dorner & Sons Co., was also well liked and promises to be largely planted next year, with that firm's last season's introductions, The Belle and Lady Bountiful, which have come to be the leading whites. Dorner & Sons also brought a number of seedlings, among which were several which will be given a thorough trying out. One of them is a scarlet and another a light pink of the Enchantress order. W. C. Hill, of Streator, brought a vase of his light pink sport of Lawson, which a great many liked. J. E. Haines, of Bethlehem, Pa., sent fine blooms of the scarlet named for himself and of Imperial, a very long-stemmed variegated sort. The Chicago Carnation Co. showed Illinois, a scarlet raised by W. N. Rudd, which has stems of exceptional length. Geo. Von Qualen, of East Orange, N. J., also sent a vase of seedlings and there were a number of other exhibits, including several seedlings raised by Bassett & Washburn.

One exhibit which was a winner without being entered for competition was the mirror pond bordered with pansies put up by A. A. Sawyer, of Oak Park. Another was E. Wienhoeber Co.'s vase of Fiancee staged to show the color under artificial light. F. R. Pierson Co.'s exhibit of the Tarrytown fern also attracted much comment from the ladies. Mr. Fotheringham, who was present, was kept busy answering questions about it.

In the carnation classes for fifty blooms the awards were as follows:

White Cloud, Emil Buettner first, Poehlmann Bros Co. second.

Lorna, Poehlmann Bros. Co. second; no first.

Norway, Bassett & Washburn first.

Wolcott, E. Buettner first, J. D. Thompson Carnation Co. second.

"Any other white," F. Dorner & Sons Co. first, Thompson Carnation Co. second, each with Lady Bountiful.

Adonis, Wietor Bros. first, Thompson Carnation Co. second.

Estelle, Wietor Bros. first, Thompson Carnation Co. second.

"Any other red." Chicago Carnation Co. first, with Cardinal; Thompson Carnation Co. second, with Flamingo.

Harlowarden, Chicago Carnation Co. first, Poehlmann Bros. Co. second.

Harry Fenn, E. T. Grave first, Thompson Carnation Co. second.

Enchantress, E. T. Grave first, Chicago Carnation Co. second.

Lawson, Chicago Carnation Co. first, Poehlmann Bros. Co. second.

Fair Maid, Chicago Carnation Co. first.

Mrs. E. A. Nelson, Thompson Carnation Co. first, W. J. & M. S. Vesey, second.

Morning Glory, E. Buettner first, Bassett & Washburn second.

"Any other" pink of Daybreak class, M. Winandy second, on Higinbotham; no first.

"Any other" pink of Scott class, Chicago Carnation Co. first, with Fiancee; E. T. Grave second, with Dorothy.

"Any other" pink of Lawson class, Thompson Carnation Co. first, with Nelson Fisher; W. J. & M. S. Vesey, second, also with Fisher.

Mrs. Bradt, Poehlmann Bros. Co. first.

Prosperity, Poehlmann Bros. Co. first, W. J. & M. S. Vesey second.

"Any other" striped, Thompson Carnation Co. first, W. J. & M. S. Vesey second, each with Mrs. M. A. Patten.

Dorothy Whitney, Chicago Carnation Co. first.

"Any other" yellow, Chicago Carnation Co. second, with No. 5; no first.

The following are the awards for twenty-five blooms of introductions of 1904:

White, Thompson Carnation Co. first, on The Belle; E. Buettner second, on Lady Bountiful.

Pink of Scott class, E. Buettner second, on Indianapolis; no first.

Pink of Lawson class, Thompson Carnation Co. first, W. J. & M. S. Vesey second, each with Nelson Fisher.

Red, Anton Then first, with Crusader; Henry Wehrmann second, with Flamingo.

"Any other color," Thompson Carnation Co. first, with Mrs. Patten.

A first was also awarded to the Thompson Carnation Co. in class 104 for Enchantress, the list not stating "introduction of 1904," but this was palpably an error, the group being headed "new varieties."

In the classes for 100 blooms the awards were as follows:

White, Chicago Carnation Co. first, with Lady Bountiful; John Breitmeyer's Sons, Detroit, second, with White Lawson.

Pink of Daybreak class, Thompson Carnation Co. first, Poehlmann Bros. Co. second, each with Enchantress.

Pink of Scott class, Chicago Carnation Co. first, with Fiancee; M. Winandy second, with Guardian Angel.

Pink of Lawson class, Poehlmann Bros. Co. first, Chicago Carnation Co. second, each with Lawson.

Crimson, Chicago Carnation Co. first, with Harlowarden; Thompson Carnation Co. second, with President.

Red, Thompson Carnation Co. first, with Robert Craig; E. G. Hill Co. second, with Cardinal.

Variegated. W. J. & M. S. Vesey first, with Glendale; Thompson Carnation Co. second, with Mrs. Patten.

Sweepstakes for best 100 blooms of above, first to Chicago Carnation Co. for Fiancee; Poehlmann Bros. Co. second, for Lawson.

The seedlings were shown on Friday. The awards were:

Best white, My Maryland, exhibited by H. Weber & Sons, Oakland.

Best red, Robert Craig, exhibited by Thompson Carnation Co.

Best pink, No. 93, exhibited by Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association.

Best "other color," Glendale, exhibited by W. J. & M. S. Vesey.

Sweepstakes, best of above, No. 93.

Some of seedlings were scored as follows: My Maryland, 85; No. 93, 87; Glendale, 85.

In the classes for seedling mums, the premium for white and the sweepstakes were awarded to the E. G. Hill Co. for a very fine variety of Eaton type but later, Mlle. Jeannie Nonin. H. W. Buckbee was given first for a yellow, No. 5.

Eli Cross made the only exhibit of violets and was awarded first premium.

On Saturday floral arrangements were shown. H. G. Selfridge was first for basket of orchids, W. J. Smyth second. H. C. Rowe was given a special prize. All three were superb.

Muir was first for bride's bouquet, H. E. Klunder second.

Muir was first for basket of roses, H. C. Rowe second.

E. Wienhoeber was first for basket of carnations, H. C. Rowe second.

H. E. Klunder was first for corsage bouquet, H. C. Rowe second.

Henry Wittbold was first for fern filled jardiniere.

The judges made the following special awards:

To Guttman & Weber, a certificate of merit for Carnation Victory.

To F. Dorner & Sons Co., honorable mention for seedling carnations.

To W. J. Palmer & Son, Buffalo, for Carnation Red Lawson.

To Muir, C. A. Samuelson, W. J. Smyth, Joseph Curran and Mangel, honorable mention for the table decorations which were a feature of the show.

To F. R. Pierson Co., certificate of merit for Piersoni elegantissima.

To John Scott, certificate of merit for Nephrolepis Scottii and also for display of decorative plants.

To Mrs. Pullman, certificate of merit for group of decorative plants.

To the West Parks, certificate of merit for group of decorative plants.

To Lincoln Park, certificate of merit for Boston fern and for Polypodium subauriculatum; honorable mention for cyclamen.

NEW YORK SHOW NOTES.

Dr. Hexamer, of the American Institute, was the happiest man at the close of the big show, November 17. He had orders in his pocket for over half of the entire space for exhibits at the New York flower show of 1905, which he declares will be "double that of the present year" and this was "the finest ever held in this country." This was the verdict of F. R. Pierson, Arthur Herrington and several others who attended the World's Fair show and returned in time to make just comparisons.

W. E. Maynard is the secretary of the new society, which is to be known as the National Association of Gardeners. He announces forty charter members and prophesies a membership before spring of over four hundred. The members will include superintendents of conservatories and cemeteries, gardeners, trade florists and amateurs and great enthusiasm is felt concerning the organization and its future.

Next year's flower show will exceed anything ever attempted in America. It will be held earlier, larger prizes will be given, immense exhibits of roses and carnations are assured and no expense or effort will be spared to make it the greatest in the country's history.

The fine display of carnations made at the New York Florists' Club's meeting Monday evening was transferred to the American Institute exhibition on Tuesday and added greatly to the interest of the last two days of the flower show.

The judges awarded a diploma to C. W. Ward's Carnation Robert Craig and a certificate to Lieut. Peary. A diploma was also awarded to Fiancee, from the Chicago Carnation Co., which arrived late.

Arthur Herrington blew in from St. Louis and Chicago just in time to "speed the parting guest" and to announce that even those giant exhibitions of the west could not approach the New York flower show of 1904.

J. Austin Shaw.

Chrysanthemum Easigold.

TORONTO.

The great fruit, flower and honey show of which much has been written, more has been said and for the success of which the various committees of management have exerted every effort, has come to a close and as far as the floral department of the work is concerned their efforts were not in vain. In many respects, from the florists' standpoint, this has been the most successful exhibition held in Toronto for a number of years, and from the first day until the close sensations grew fast and furious upon one another. The judges for chrysanthemums were Jos. Bennett and J. Robinson, of Montreal. Many of the classes had a large number of entries and the stock was of very uniform high quality, necessitating very close judging. Many awards were given on half points. This caused some of the exhibitors, who did not receive prizes, to feel that their stock was not fairly judged. Especially was this the case in the competition for the challenge cup offered by the Supreme Chief of the Foresters, Dr. Oronhyatekha, for a vase of thirty blooms of the variety named for him, or, as it is better known, the Yellow Eaton. The competition was between W. J. Lawrence, of Eglinton, and Miller & Son, of Bracondale, and the award being given to W. J. Lawrence, Mr. Miller vigorously protested against the judging and took so much exception that Wednesday morning he took a force of men to the hall and removed his whole exhibit.

The manager of the floral department of the T. Eaton Co., imported from the United States a quantity of mums and roses and exhibited them in competition with home-grown stock. It has always been a rule that stock must be exhibited by the grower only, except in two or three open classes, but this rule was, through some oversight, left out of the premium list this year. So vigorous have been the kicks against it that it will not likely occur again.

In the carnations the number of first prizes won by Chas. Turp, a new exhibitor, caused some surprise but the stock exhibited was worth all it got, and it is freely conceded that the carnations were the finest exhibit ever put up in Toronto at this time of the year. In the roses the Dale Estate showed some exceptionally fine stock, and as usual Fendley's violets showed up to good advantage.

In design work W. Sewell, foreman and designer for J. S. Simmons, entered in his own name and beat his employer for the coveted red ticket for the special design of the show. The anchor was an ideal ship anchor with chain and was a very fine piece. In the baskets and table pieces the competition was keen and much was left to the taste of the judge. J. McKenna, of Montreal, acted as judge of the roses, carnations, and design work. In plants the display was not as large as was hoped for but the quality of the exhibits made up the deficiency in number. Three beautiful displays of orchids were much admired. In the fruit and honey section the display was large and the demonstrations and lectures given in connection therewith were most interesting and instructive. The show was well attended by out-of-town visitors.

The following is the full list of first awards:

On chrysanthemum plants, Exhibition park was first for one specimen, Allan Gardens for one standard, for three specimen yellow, twelve single stems, twenty-five single stems, Steele, Briggs Seed Co. for three specimens white and three pink. Manton Bros., Grsinger Bros. and E. B. Osler won the seconds with the above.

On miscellaneous plants Allan Gardens won first for group of plants, and for six flowering plants, Exhibition park for group including mums, for display of orchids, for three orchids and one orchid in flower, for palm and for twelve palms. Manton Bros. were first for fifty ferns, twenty-five ferns, six callas, six ferns and one fern. T. Eaton Co. was first for six cyclamen. Gammage & Son were first for six begonias. Other premium winners in these classes were Grainger Bros., W. Jay & Son, W. Rook, E. B. Osler, W. Hill and H. H. Fudger.

On cut chrysanthemum blooms the awards were: Twenty-five varieties, first, Gammage & Son; second, Manton Bros.; third, J. H. Dunlop; fourth, Miller & Son. Twelve varieties, first, Gammage & Son; W. INDIANAPOLIS.

The Indiana State Florists' Association held its monthly meeting November 15 and in connection therewith gave a chrysanthemum show which was free to the public. The stock shown in mums, roses and carnations was of a very high quality and those winning the premiums deserved them fully.

The E. G. Hill Company sent over two of their new roses, Richmond and Rosalind English, which showed up very well and were awarded certificates of merit. Certificates of merit were also awarded to Baur & Smith for a fine vase of 100 Carnation Indiana Market, a vase of fifty Beatrice and a vase of fifty Flambeau. To R. Witterstaetter on Carnation Mrs. J. A. Valentine and No. 1021 B; to the E. G. Hill Company on Carnation Cardinal. All the above attracted much attention.

On twelve white mums the E. G. Hill Company took first with grand Eatons, E. A. Nelson second. On twelve yellow Baur & Smith took first with Appleton, which were very finely finished and of good size; J. Grande second. On twelve pink G. Teilmann took first with Dr. Enguehard; N. Smith & Son second. On twelve red E. A. Nelson took first, no second. On twelve novelty the E. G. Hill Company took first with a fine high built white.

In the rose classes for twenty-five blooms J. A. Rieman took first on white. E. A. Nelson took first on pink, J. Rieman second. J. Rieman took first on red. E. A. Nelson took first on "any other color" with Gate. F. Harritt took first on ten American Beauty.

In the carnation classes, twenty-five blooms, the Chicago Carnation Company took first on pink with Fiancee, W. W. Coles second. On light pink Mr. Coles was first, no second. On red Mr. Coles was first, Mr. Nelson second. The premium on white was withheld.

On 100 double violets Smith & Young took first with a fine lot of Marie Louise. On 100 single violets Stuart & Haugh took first and J. Hartje second. The best display of blooming pot plants was put up by Henry Rieman, his Lorraines being very fine indeed. A. B.

DOBBS FERRY, N. Y.

The fifth annual exhibition of the Dobb's Ferry Horticultural Association was held in the old Catholic church Friday and Saturday, November 11 and 12, and proved a great success. The competitions were more numerous than ever and the exhibits were of the highest quality. Wm. McFarland, of Scarboro, and Peter McDonald, of Yonkers, were the judges and the exhibitors were well pleased with their work. The following is a list of some of the prize winners:

Three decorative plants, first Stephen Bradley, second Henry Kastberg. Twelve mums, four varieties, first Joseph Howarth, second Thomas A. Lee. Six mums, three varieties, first John Henry, second Anthony Fallon. Twelve mums, twelve varieties, first Joseph Howarth, second Robert Boreham. Six mums, six varieties, first T. A. Lee, second Claud Wilson. Three yellow, first Joseph Howarth, second Robert Boreham. White, first Joseph Money, second Joseph Bradley. Pink, first Joseph Bradley. Red, first Mr. McCrea, second Anthony Fallon. Collection of pompons, first Henry Kastberg. Vase of twelve blooms, first Joseph Bradley, second L. A. Martin. Six plants chrysanthemums grown to single stem, first T. A. Lee, second H. Kastberg.

Table of foliage plants, first Stephen Bradley, second Robert Boreham. Best fern, first R. Boreham, second John Fisher. Palm, group of foliage plants, and Asparagus Sprengeri, first Joseph Bradley. Group of chrysanthemums, first Henry Kastberg, second T. A. Lee.

Six pink roses, first L. A. Martin, second

John F. Dorsey. Yellow, first J. F. Dorsey, second Stephen Bradley. Red, first J. F Dorsey, second L. A. Martin.

Three flowering plants, first H. Kastberg, second Claud Wilson. Six white carnations, first W. R. Rapp, second A. Fallon. Variegated, first John Henry, second F. Reynolds. Pink, first Alfred Kneifel, second F. Reynolds. Scarlet, first John Henry, second A. Fallon. "Any other color," first G. McCrea, second A. Fallon.

Fifty single violets, first A. Kneifel, second H. Kastberg. Fifty double violets, first Claud Wilson, second R. Boreham. Table decoration, first Joseph Bradley, second Claud Wilson.

John Breitmeyer's Sons, Detroit, staged two new chrysanthemums, Adelia and Majestic, both whites, and were awarded a certificate of merit for each. John Cook staged a pink variety which was admired by all who saw it, not named. F. R. Pierson Co., of Tarrytown, staged the new fern, Tarrytown, and were awarded a certificate of merit.

There was also a large display of vegetables. J. Bradley.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.

The flower show given by the Dutchess County Horticultural Society at the State Armory outclassed all previous exhibitions in beauty and variety and still it was not a financial success, as the management reported a loss of about $300. The cut flowers and plants were arranged with much taste and judgment and the scene as a whole elicited unqualified praise from spectators. One of the features that was most admired was the decoration of three dinner tables. Smith Bros. and W. G. Saltford had fine centerpieces.

The carnations shown by Valentine Burgevin were extra fine. The prize for best violets went to Benjamin Willig. John Scott was given a certificate for Nephrolepis Scottii and the F. R. Pierson Co. for Nephrolepis Piersoni elegantissima. T. De Voy & Son were recognized for their new geranium. Most of the exhibits were from, and the awards to, the private growers of the neighborhood.

PROPAGATING.

The Choice of Wood.

To the careful and intelligent selection of wood suitable for propagating purposes can be ascribed much of the success attending the efforts of our most successful growers. That the blooming qualities, vitality and other characteristics of the plant can be perpetuated and largely improved by careful and discriminate selection of the wood used is beyond the question of a doubt and when this system is rigidly adhered to from year to year the stock, instead of deteriorating, all other conditions being equal, is certain to improve and this often constitutes the difference between success and failure.

The question of using flowering stems for propagation has yet many advocates but, while seemingly possessing some merits, is at least a very expensive method, as few of us would care to sacrifice so much bloom at the season when prices are at their best.

Having for years practiced taking a part of my wood from flower stems in order to compare it with stock propagated from blind wood and persisted in always taking the flower stems from those plants propagated from such I found that after the second propagation that such varieties as Meteor, Perle and Kaiserin refused to make sufficient wood to be designated a "bush," merely throwing up a strong stem and when that was cut, producing just such another without the slightest tendency to develop more than one eye at a time.

By selecting good, stout blind wood from the upper part of the bush, where it is exposed to sunshine and the free circulation of air, we have an article which, if it is of the proper condition of ripeness, will root easily and under ordinary treatment make a plant which no grower need be in the least afraid to handle.

When taking the wood great care should be used so that no wood may be cut from any plant the leaves of which are off color or which in any way shows signs of weakness, avoiding also those plants which are in hot corners or in shady places, as the wood from such stock is weak and is certain to bring trouble.

Immediately after being cut the wood should be immersed in water to prevent wilting, as the least wilt is almost fatal, for even if the cutting does root it will take a much longer time and consequently lose in vitality.

The style of cutting likely to form roots in the shortest time and make the thriftiest bush is also a matter of consequence and deserves a deal of consideration, the different varieties according to their habit of growth requiring special styles of cuttings. Bride, Maid and varieties of like habit do well from a cutting with three eyes, one of which should be at the heel, thus giving one strong cane from as near the root as possible. Meteor and Liberty should also be encouraged to produce canes from such an eye, as after being once cut these canes produce the best flowering stems.

Such varieties as Perle and Sunrise, if treated in a similar way, are apt to produce plants which give crops of bullheads, so that in selecting wood for propagating these varieties a less robust growth is desirable. In making the cutting there is no necessity to retain the eye at the heel and to prevent an extra strong development of any eye it is better to have at least three on each cutting.

Ivory, Golden Gate and Chatenay, which possess the character of sending up strong root canes, should be treated in a similar way as that recommended for Meteor and Liberty. Ribes.

CHRYSANTHEMUM EASIGOLD.

The illustration on page 6 shows Chrysanthemum Easigold, raised by F. W. Fletcher, Auburndale, Mass. It is a seedling of J. E. Lager and looks like a yellow J. H. White. It is in season October 8 to 12, takes the market well and is likely to be a valuable commercial sort. The name is certainly all right for such a variety. W. N. C.

A DIAGNOSIS.

We have sent you some chrysanthemum plants which are diseased. We should be very glad to be told what is the matter with them and what to do, or not to do, in the future to avoid the trouble. M. & C.

The plants reached me in poor condition and I imagined that they had been fed with a heavy dose of fertilizer. The grower will know from the system of culture whether I am right in the diagnosis. The leaves of the plants looked as though they were scorched, a condition I have noticed on plants after they have had a strong dose of chemical fertilizer like sulphate of ammonia. If the trouble has not been caused by feeding it is one of the different forms of leaf spot which is due primarily to an atmosphere overcharged with moisture. This can be held in check in the early stages by careful watching and spraying affected plants with Bordeaux mixture or potassium sulphide. Brian Boru.

TROUBLE WITH VARIETIES.

Can you give me the reason why Timothy Eaton came so flat on top? Mildred Ware has come very loose and poor that year and Mary Inglis would resemble a big sunflower. Can you give reasons?

X. L. A.

Timothy Eaton comes quite flat on top very frequently when the crown bud is taken. On a late crown or terminal bud the center builds up much better and the flower is neater in appearance though not so large in size.

Mildred Ware has been a disappointing variety this year and I am afraid it will not develop into a useful variety. It is one of the very best Japanese in England, but that seems no indication as to its value here. Difference in climatic conditions is undoubtedly responsible.

I am surprised to hear of Mary Inglis coming single. Any flowers I have seen set up of this variety have been very fine with no indication of an eye. I am inclined to think that this grower took a late bud. Try it on a crown bud, as near the middle of August as you can get it, and I think there will be no trouble with it. Brian Boru.

JAMES WHEELER.

James Wheeler, the new vice-president of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, was born at Britford, near Salisbury, Wiltshire, England, in a district famous for high-class hams and bacon as well as for good gardens, on February 7, 1865. In November, 1876, when only a boy of twelve, he commenced his horticultural career in the well known gardens of Longford Castle, the property of the Earl of Radnor, first working for three years under his father, who was foreman of the extensive flower garden and pleasure grounds for twenty-seven years. He next worked in the kitchen garden for one and a half years, following this with an apprenticeship of two years in the greenhouses under H. W. Ward, one of the best practitioners of that day and now an extensive market grower for the London market.

After leaving Longford Castle, he went north and worked for two years under John McIntyre, Woodside, Darlington, in the county of Durham on the estate of Mrs. Gurney Pease. Mr. McIntyre was one of the best growers of specimen plants in the north and won many prizes at the exhibitions. After leaving Darlington, he sailed for America, arriving at Boston in March, 1885. He worked at the one-time famed estate of S. R. Payson, Belmont, for two years as foreman, and for eight months as head gardener, leaving there in October, 1887, to take the superintendency of the Joseph H. White estate, Brookline, Mass., where he is still located

Mr. Wheeler has been a member of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society for a number of years and has been a member of the plant and flower committee for several years. He is also a member of the committee of arrangements, in which capacity he renders the society much valuable service. He has been one of the largest and most successful exhibitors of cut flowers and plants during the greater part of his stay in Brookline. He has served on the Boston committee of the C. S. A. since its inception. As a seedling raiser he has been quits successful, J. H. White, a good white variety, and Mrs. J. H. White, crimson, being two of his best.

The Boston Gardeners' and Florists' Club has always found a staunch supporter, even in its darkest days, in Mr. Wheeler and will undoubtedly prosper under his presidency, to which he was elected November 15. Perhaps it may interest some to know that the subject of this sketch is both a total abstainer and a non-smoker, as well as a good churchman. We do not believe he is given to athletics, bowling or shooting and cannot be in any sense classed as a "sport"; he is a good family man, a good gardener and a credit to his calling.

CARNATIONS

RAISING SEEDLINGS.

Is it Profitable?

I have been asked many times by visitors at our greenhouses, after looking over the beds of seedlings in their various stages, whether it really pays to raise seedlings, and often we are asked as to how the fertilizing is done, etc. To the first question we always answer, "Yes and no." If you raise a ten-thousand-dollar variety every few years and a few of lesser value between, then it pays handsomely, but if you raise a lot of seedlings haphazard and save every one that is not absolutely worthless and fill your beds with them year after year you will most certainly lose money on the operation. That it pays those who go at it systematically and with perseverance no one can deny. As you can see if you look about, nearly every leading variety we have today was raised by some grower who makes a specialty of seedlings. Now and again we get a fine variety from some grower who hit it by chance, but they are few when compared with those offered by the specialists who raise seedlings each year and cross fertilize with a definite end in view.

That it is expensive, besides requiring unlimited patience and work, these men can tell you. They earn all they get out of it. Seedling raising, while it is fascinating is a nerve racking business. No grower meets with as many disappointments as the hybridizer and certainly no calling could require more conscientiousness nor a stronger heart than his. If you will stop to consider what a small proportion of the seedlings that are raised find their way onto the market and how few of these again prove worth growing for profit you will get an idea of what it costs to produce a first-class variety.

Few Are Meritorious.

I am sure that I am very conservative when I say that at least 100,000 seedlings are raised each year from carefully hand-fertilized seed. Out of these perhaps one-third will be housed and given room and care the first winter, enough to plant a good-sized range of houses. About three-fourths of these are dumped and about one-fourth are tried the second year, from six to twenty of each kind, taking up more room than the first year. For the third season's trial the number of varieties is again cut down to about one-tenth while the quantity of each is greatly increased, using up at least as much room as the year before. By the fourth year, when the varieties have been thoroughly tested, it will be found that out of all those seedlings there are perhaps twenty-five that are worth disseminating and out of these perhaps one-half will be found really improvements over existing sorts. That means that perhaps one out of every 4,000 seedlings finds its way onto the market and one out of about every 8,000 is found to be really first-class. I have known men who raised many thousands of seedlings but have to their credit only one or two varieties disseminated, but I also know of men who have raised only a few hundreds with one or more standard varieties to their credit. In fact, I know of an instance where only one seed pod was raised and one of the leading varieties for several years in its class was the result. On the other hand, one very prominent hybridizer told me recently that out of between 8,000 and 10,000 seedlings raised in 1901 he has not one that is worth growing.

Not a Small Grower's Work.

To the small grower who needs a revenue from every foot of space on his place I would say, let seedlings alone. If you can spare a few feet of space it is all right as a pastime, and it is fascinating, but unless you go into hybridizing systematically, and unless you are able and willing to devote time and space to the seedlings, you would better not dabble in them. You will not be likely to get much out of it. Then, again, the small grower is not in shape to reap his full reward, even if he does happen to strike a really fine variety, as it takes room to grow enough stock to propagate cuttings enough to be profitable. The best he can do is to sell it to some large disseminator who will usually get more out of it than the raiser. I have not written the above with a view to discourage seedling raising, but rather to show the inexperienced that seedling raising is not the bonanza that many picture it to themselves. It is pleasant to read that the stock of a certain variety was sold for $5,000 or $10,000, but when you know what amount of work and room and patience it took to get that variety it does not look so big.

A Corner in the New Store of Gude & Bro., Washington, D. C.

No Magic in Hybridizing.

There is no special trick or secret about the operation of fertilizing the bloom, as some imagine. To hybridize a bloom you merely transfer the pollen from one flower onto the pistil of another flower. In a day or two the fertilized bloom will wilt, which indicates that fertilization has taken place. Experience alone will teach you the more important points, which are the best varieties to use for seeding, what varieties will not bear seed, what varieties to use together, etc. Any bright day between now and March is suitable for the work, as there is little danger of interference from bees. After fertilizing a bloom tie it to a stake so it will not be picked or broken off and to keep it dry. After the bloom wilts split the calyx down to the stem to prevent moisture from collecting around the pod and rotting it. You will find some varieties which will not bear seed, such as Wm. Scott, Albertina, Mrs. Joost and Crocker, while others will not produce any pollen, such as Daybreak, Lorna, America and Adonis, while still a few others will be found entirely barren of either of these two qualities.

Influence of Parents.

Sometimes we read or hear it said that the one parent will have more influence on the color, while the other will influence the habit of the plants, etc., but we find that no rule can be laid down in regard to that. Some varieties have a stronger constitution than others and naturally the strong will have more influence on the seedlings than the weaker variety. For instance, two years ago we fertilized a number of blooms of a light red seedling with pollen from Gov. Roosevelt and nearly all the seedlings came crimson. The same season we fertilized a number of blooms of a light pink seedling we named Beatrice with various shades of pink and nearly all of them came light pink.

When it is possible we prefer to use varieties of the same line of color together, but of course it is not always possible. For instance, we do not like to use crimson and pink, or red and white or light pink in combination, as such crosses are apt to bring too many off colors. Sometimes, however, we run across a variety which has a fine habit and we do not hesitate to use it with varieties of all colors.

Mark the cross on a little tag and tie it to the bloom, so you will know what you have when you sow the seed. These records will also help you in selecting your crosses in the future. The seed will ripen in from six weeks to two months, according to the weather, and it can be sown as soon as it is gathered. You will notice the shell enclosing the seed turn brown when the seed is ripe. Sow the seed by the first of March, if possible, so as to have nice plants in 2-inch pots by the end of April. If you raise a large number you would best plant them in the field and lift only those that produce promising blooms, but if you have only a few hundred you can pot them into 4-inch pots about May and bloom them inside in the fall. We prefer the latter way, but if you have several thousand they would take up too much room in the fall.

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

Complaints.

Under this head I may make what some consider very plain statements, but it is hoped they will be taken in the spirit in which they are written, as it is not the intention to berate anyone but to caution all against careless practices and help lessen the chances of misunderstanding and strained relations between grower, commission man and retailer. Complaints are very often greatly exaggerated. If care be taken to follow them up and learn the true cause the trouble appears less than on first knowledge.

Every year one hears more or less about sleepy blooms and, as a rule, report has it that the grower is at fault when, as a matter of fact, there is no proof that he is to blame, as there are many chances of injury being done between time of shipping and placing on sale. Flowers may be ever so well packed but the rough usage the packages often receive in the hands of carriers and others is sufficient to seriously impair the value of the contents. Exposure to extremes of heat or cold while en route must be taken into account but I believe careless unpacking and handling in general by those ignorant of the delicate nature of the goods has caused more trouble than is generally admitted. The same rule that applies to the placing of stems in water when cutting, should be followed at the time of unpacking and if the shipment has been over long on the road about a quarter of an inch of stem should be cut off, but not with the scissors, as has been seen done. Use a sharp knife.

Instead of selling at once, the stock should be stored for a short time in a cool, dry place free from draughts. Even an hour of this as a breathing spell is very beneficial. Some of these costly ice boxes are perfect suffocators, either having no ventilation or using the same air over and over again.

Every grower should, if possible, occasionally visit his point of outlet and acquaint himself with the manner in which his product is handled. Often a suggestion from him will prove valuable to all parties concerned.

These are a few points on one side of the question but there is another which will be treated later.

Geo. S. Osborn.

LATE PLANTED LAWSON.

We are sending a sample plant of some Lawsons that we bought and planted in September. We are at a loss to account for the foliage drying up. In fact, they have not made the least bit of growth since they were planted, none of them any more than two or three weak shoots around the stem just above the soil. We should like to have your opinion as to what is the matter with these plants. The lower branches of the plants were in this condition when they arrived but we thought they would outgrow that. We cleaned them thoroughly of all the buds and diseased foliage before we planted them, but they continued to get worse all the time. L. F. C.

At Gimbel Bros'., Philadelphia, During Fall Opening.

The plant you sent showed plainly the trouble you complain of. While the plant showed several leaf spots, yet there were not enough of them to cause this drying of the foliage. I am inclined to think the primary cause is the late planting. Mrs. Lawson is a variety that is very partial to extra early planting. It does not seem to take hold and recover as readily as most varieties when it is planted late. The plants do not die outright, but they dry up like yours and possibly break at the bottom later on. These breaks, if husbanded carefully, might make strong shoots after a time, but it would be very late in the season and it would hardly pay you to trouble with them. If the beds are as bad all over as this plant I would advise you to throw them out at once and make use of the room as best you can until next April or May.

If you want to grow Lawson next season, buy strong cuttings from some grower who you feel sure will give you healthy stock about the middle of January. Pot these in thumb pots and repot into 2½-inch or 3-inch pots early in March. Between April 20 and May 10 plant them in the beds and you will be starting in to grow Lawson right.

I have repeated several times in these notes that Lawson seems to enjoy indoor culture better than any other method. I know full well that there are many growers who plant it in the field with good success, but you will find that those who do it successfully plant it very early, before August 1. It requires more care even then than most varieties during the first month to persuade it to start into strong growth. I am convniced that the best way for the average grower to grow Lawson is to plant it inside in May from pots and on a bed that gets plenty of air.

WORLD'S FAIR FLOWER SHOW.

While all accounts for the World's Fair flower show are not yet in the hands of the executive committee, the bookkeeping has progressed sufficiently far to show that the exhibition was a most pronounced success, financially as well as otherwise. Not only will the first assessment be returned to guarantors, but it will be accompanied by a dividend of possibly as much as the amount paid on the assessment. The best feature of this is the effect it will have when it again becomes desirable to secure the united support of the trade for another undertaking of this character.

CURRENT COMMENT.

John Bertermann, of Indianapolis, who was at the World's Fair flower show and was one of those who followed the troupe to the Chicago stand, advocates a national circuit of flower shows. The only objection seems to be the short season.

C. C. Pollworth, of Milwaukee, says that he notes considerable increase in the demand for palms of sizes for growing on. He says the Boston fern is a better seller this fall than ever before. Next year he will grow a big lot of Scottii.

At the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor, which opened at San Francisco last week, there was a hot fight over seating John Mangan, who had credentials of the Gardeners' and Florists' Union, of Chicago. It was not contended, however, that the gardeners were not entitled to representation, but that Mangan is a steamfitter, not a florist, and works for the City of Chicago.

E. G. Hill has renamed his red rose, Etna, which he has decided to send out next spring under the name of Richmond. It won the silver cup at the World's Fair show as the best new rose, but was debarred from entry for the cup at Chicago by the clause in the premium list, which limited the class to varieties "never before exhibited." Obviously the interest would have been much greater if the list read "open to varieties not in American commerce." A fine vase was set up for the delectation of the growers. Mr. Hill states that his first order for stock was from his neighbors, the South Park Floral Co., New Castle, for 5,000 plants.

Peter Reinberg has two roses not known in this country. Both were from Peter Lambert. Perle von Godesberg was a Schneider introduction of 1902 and Lambert catalogues it in 1904 as "a sport from Kaiserin, blooms somewhat looser filled, center golden yellow, edge lighter; growth good, bushy; good climber and cut rose; variegates and returns to original form." The identity of the other, No. 51, pink, which was given a silver cup at the Chicago show, has been lost. Weiland & Risch are also growing Perle von Godesberg.

Late reports from London indicate that never before have chrysanthemum blooms sold at such low prices at Covent Garden. It is on record that exhibition flowers have sold for sixpence per dozen!

One of Wm. Duckham's greatest disappointments on his trip to St. Louis and Chicago was at the way the chrysanthemum which bears his name is grown in the west. He says that western growers of the variety would not recognize it as the same if they were to see it as done by good growers in the east. Dailledouze Bros., Flatbush, sold it wholesale on the New York market this season as high as $9 per dozen.

At Gimbel Bros'., Philadelphia, During Fall Opening.
(Showing amount of stock used by Hugh Graham, the decorator.)

The trade visitors at flower shows should refrain from smoking in the exhibition hall, even though the management be a little lax in enforcing this rule. We of the trade are usually the only offenders in this respect and it is a distinct injury to our shows and our business.

HORTICULTURE'S INTERESTS.

By Wm. Falconer, Pittsburg, Pa.

[A paper read at St. Louis, November 10, 1904, at the inception of the National Council of Horticulture.]

I will not touch advanced horticulture but strike directly at the foundation, that is, the beginners, for it is here, I am satisfied, that the greatest necessity prevails.

We should endeavor to convert to horticulture every person in this broad land of liberty who owns a home or lives in one, whose garden may be an acre patch or a simple windowsill in a back alley. Every living person has flowers in his or her heart and would grow them in their homes if they knew what would grow there and how easily these plants can be cultivated. Help these people and you help yourselves and you brighten and glorify this country. Our minds revert to the lovely flower-filled cottage and window gardens of England, France, Germany and other old country homes, and the question strikes us—why not the same here, and more so than there, for means are more ample and prosperity broader here than there? Your association can help this. Reach those people and show them how. The results will stimulate the florist business by creating a greater demand.

My long and intimate connection with decorative gardening and acquaintance with amateurs who would, if they could, have beautiful gardens, convinces me that in this line the greatest need of the American people is brief, pointed, reliable, practical information respecting their gardens and what to plant in them and how and when to plant it. This does not appeal to public parks or pretentious private properties where landscape or professional gardeners are employed, but to the small country and suburban yards and town lots of the vast multitude of our busy citizens who do their own work or have the occassional help of a hired man. The horticultural press scarcely at all reaches these people.

Every person who has a home lot wants to beautify it and would do it if he knew how, but the great majority of them do not know anything about trees, shrubs or garden flowers and don't pretend to, but they are aching for reliable help or advice. Your association can give it to them. And in helping these people you are helping yourselves, you are creating a demand for your supply.

In an amateur who begins aright and whose garden lot has been designed conveniently and appropriately, and whose plants are pleasing and thriving, the spirit of gardening is insatiable; he wants more and more, and the contagion of experiment seizes him and he becomes a living impetus to your business. And emulation seizes his neighbors and friends; they behold in his garden the proof of what can be done and what will grow and they too endeavor after similar results.

But let an amateur start in wrong and botch his place and plant unsuitable material and in an improper manner, the results are displeasing and unsatisfactory and he gets disheartened or disgusted, his interest flags and he and his place become a horticultural frost at home and abroad. Now a little plain, practical, trustworthy advice to this man to begin with would have obviated all this and turned the tide from woe to joy and his home would have been a glowing tribute to horticulture instead of a cloud upon it.

Voluminous advice to a beginner is a mistake; so, too, are long lists of plants for any purpose. Let simplicity and brevity prevail in all your teachings. Don't advise a client unless he has absolute confidence in you; then don't give him the option of selection; you just tell him pointedly what to do and what to plant; you know, he doesn't, and you'll lift a mighty weight off of his mind and the work that to him would have been bothersome and laborious is plain sailing and pleasure and doesn't cost him a thought.

Aquatics at Cedar Court, Morristown, N. J.

Different places, considering latitude, location and environment may require different treatments and different plants for shade, use and ornament, but a few general principles are applicable in all cases: All trees, shrubs, roses, vines and perennials recommended for a certain locality should be beautiful in themselves and easy to grow. Every outdoor garden, large or small, should have interest and beauty from frost in spring until frost in fall, and selections for its furnishment, even if only a dozen kinds, should be chosen with this end in view. And as all people yearn for cut flowers in their dwellings, the blossoms of their gardens, like peonies and lilies, should be such as are adapted for this purpose. Avoid expensive plants, miffy plants, weedy plants, and such as have inconspicuous flowers, but give them the good old-fashioned favorites, irises, bleeding heart, pinks, bell-flowers and the like, and be sure to include some vigorous, floriferous roses, of which Crimson Rambler shall be one.

Don't decry "bedding" plants, because to do so may be a modern fad. Remember the scarlet geranium is the most universally grown and popular garden plant on earth; it prevails in the tin cans of our poorest tenement windows and adorns the painted parterres of our palace gardens. A flower bed is intuitive in the first gardener's heart, and that's all right, but tell him where to put it—never in the middle of his lawn.

Encourage poor people who cannot afford to buy plants; show them what can be done with a few cents' worth of seeds, say nasturtiums, zinneas, Drummond phlox and mignonette.

Because a man planted Carolina poplars as shade trees and the borers riddled and destroyed them, or horse chestnuts and the larvae of the tussock moth defoliated them, or a group of lilacs and the borers infested them and bark scale killed them, don't let him get discouraged; you can help him. Some affluent men want and get and plant the finest varieties of rhododendrons obtainable and they are charmed with the vivid gorgeousness and profusion of these shrubs the first year, and they are exultant in their success and the envy of their neighbors, but alas, the following year their rhododendrons are dead or dying and all of their happy hopes are blasted and they become disgusted with gardening. Now, expert advice would have saved them from this mortification; it would have named absolutely hardy sorts, less brilliant in hue maybe, but year after year they would have gone on increasing in size and glory and exerting a proud and exhilarating influence in the gardening sphere of their owner and he'd want more of them and his neighbors would want some, too.

The vital question now is—how can we best reach these people? My own experience is: Through our schools, village improvement societies, practical men, our churches, the daily press and local country weekly newspapers, and our commercial horticulturists.

In the Phipps Botanical School at Pittsburg 700 children of the public schools are being instructed in botany. The material used in their work is living plants from the parks and conservatories, and they also have field days in the parks and woods. It is their favorite study. And it is delightful to see how eagerly and carefully they save their unused flowers, slips, bulbs, roots or seeds and take them home with them. Everyone of these children is a horticultural missionary. All school children should be taught to know our common wood, field and wayside trees, shrubs and flowers, and encouraged to know and grow the commoner garden plants, and I would approve giving them seeds to grow at home and prizes for the best results of their cultivation.

Arbor day planting is a most laudable feature in our school work, it is a gala day for the children, and earnestly do they enter into its spirit and heartily enjoy it. It familiarizes them with trees and the importance of forestry.

There should be a village improvement society in every town to encourage and advise in the beautifying of the home grounds and the systematic planting of street trees. Many practical men, for the asking, would most gladly advise them in this matter. In fact these practical talks by practical horticulturists should be sought and encouraged by social clubs, boards of trade and village societies, and they should be free to everybody. And a most educating influence are village or town flower shows and exhibits of window plants. And my experience in this line is emphatically in favor of these shows and exhibits being gotten up at the expense of the town, and free to everybody, and no prizes given. Make it a social affair and have good music.

Our churches can do much good work. A Sunday in June is children's day and it is a perfect flower feast. In many of our churches every child in the Sunday school is presented with a potted plant to take home and grow. And thus the seeds of floriculture are being sown.

Our daily press and too our local country weekly newspapers can do a great deal in disseminating useful horticultural knowledge and reach people that neither agricultural nor horticultural periodicals ever get to, but it is right here where the eyes of your association must be the sharpest. You should prepare the matter for these papers, or have it gotten up by competent men, so that it shall be the concise, plain, helpful truth.

And our seedsmen, florists and nurserymen can help most mightily. If they prepare leaflets giving the proper cultural treatment of the several plants or seeds they sell, and enclose or pack these with the goods, what an aid it would be to their customers!

A JERSEY ESTATE.

Cedar Court, Morristown, N. J., is one of the most beautiful estates in America. It is the property of Otto H. Kahn, of the firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., the bankers who financed the late Japanese war loan, and some idea of its value may be realized when it is known that Mr. Kahn has refused a million dollars for the property. It consists of 200 acres of rolling land, of which fifty acres are utilized entirely as a lawn, its natural beauty in hill and dale faithfully preserved. One hundred acres of natural forest remain. mansion is one of the finest in the country and from its portals the vista stretches for forty miles. An Italian garden is in process of construction that will not be completed until 1905. An eighteen-hole golf course is a part of the unique addenda to the lawn and a perfectly equipped modern farm with dairy and all conveniences adds to the interest of the whole.

All this has been accomplished within six years, with an uncultivated farm as the basis. A range of orchid, rose, carnation and 'mum houses was erected in 1903 and the stock in them is in splendid condition. The chrysanthemums were especially good and captured many premiums at the recent exhibitions. The illustrations accompanying this brief note show the sunken flower garden with 40,000 plants and the courtyard and lily pond.

James Fraser has been superintendent of the estate since 1900 and under his direction the work has been successfully completed. Mr. Fraser has had a horticultural experience of many years with some of the nobility of Scotland and England and comes of a race of Scottish gardeners dating back to the time of the French revolution. He has four sons in the profession and is still a young and vigorous man, in love with his work, devoted to its development and known among his confreres as "Pater Gardeniensis," the father of gardeners. CYCLAMEN.

Please outline the best treatment for cyclamen in bud. C. P. N.

If your cyclamen are throwing up healthy buds, there is nothing to do but keep them free of aphis by frequent light fumigating and tobacco stems among the pots. Give them a night temperature of 50 to 55 degrees, a light spraying on every bright morning and the fullest light. If your plants are in 5-inch or 6-inch pots and the buds are forward enough to be in bloom in a month or so, then don't attempt to shift them. If in 4-inch pots and the buds only just appearing, you can shift into 5-inch or 6-inch pots if they need a larger pot. W. S.

it as done by good growers in the east. Dailledouze Bros., Flatbush, sold it wholesale on the New York market this season as high as $9 per dozen.

The trade visitors at flower shows should refrain from smoking in the exhibition hall, even though the management be a little lax in enforcing this rule. We of the trade are usually the only offenders in this respect and it is a distinct injury to our shows and our business.

HORTICULTURE'S INTERESTS.

By Wm. Falconer, Pittsburg, Pa.

[A paper read at St. Louis, November 10, 1904, at the inception of the National Council of Horticulture.]

I will not touch advanced horticulture but strike directly at the foundation, that is, the beginners, for it is here, I am satisfied, that the greatest necessity prevails.

We should endeavor to convert to horticulture every person in this broad land of liberty who owns a home or lives in one, whose garden may be an acre patch or a simple windowsill in a back alley. Every living person has flowers in his or her heart and would grow them in their homes if they knew what would grow there and how easily these plants can be cultivated. Help these people and you help yourselves and you brighten and glorify this country. Our minds revert to the lovely flower-filled cottage and window gardens of England, France, Germany and other old country homes, and the question strikes us why not the same here, and more so than there, for means are more ample and prosperity broader here than there? Your association can help this. Reach those people and show them how. The results will stimulate the florist business by creating a greater demand.

My long and intimate connection with decorative gardening and acquaintance with amateurs who would, if they could, have beautiful gardens, convinces me that in this line the greatest need of the American people is brief, pointed, reliable, practical information respecting their gardens and what to plant in them and how and when to plant it. This does not appeal to public parks or pretentious private properties where landscape or professional gardeners are employed, but to the small country and suburban yards and town lots of the vast multitude of our busy citizens who do their own work or have the occassional help of a hired man. The horticultural press scarcely at all reaches these people.

BOSTON.

The Market.

With the lessening receipts of chrysanthemums the market continues to show a distinct improvement and there is little likelihood of any congestion from now onwards. The smaller sizes of chrysanthemums, selling at from $4 to $8 per hundred, are in active demand. The large specimen blooms are hard to move. Occasional lots sell at $3 per dozen, but more frequently have to be cleared at half that figure. There is no mistaking the fact that large blooms, however handsome they may be for window decorations, are not as popular with buyers as they were a few years ago. This is not due to any desire for cheaper flowers, but to a growing distaste for large blooms. Growers who have large lots of such kinds as Ivory, Bonnaffon, Wanamaker (now coming in extra good) and White Bonaffon have no trouble in disposing of their cuts.

American Beauties are making rather better prices. Brides are in brisk demand and rather short supply. Bridesmaids are in heavy oversupply. While the best bring fair prices, short-stemmed stock is hard to move and the fakirs secure large quantities, which they sell at "six for a dime." Liberty is selling higher, the best reaching $12.50 per hundred. Small lots of Bon Silene, Saffano, Chatenay, Kaiserin and Meteor come in.

Carnations show a hardening tendency. Select stock brought $3 to $4 the past week, ordinary grades $1.50 to $2. A few very poor flowers sold as low as $1. The Harvard-Yale foot ball game stimulated the demand for violets, prices on singles on November 18 and 19 going as high as $1.25 per hundred. First-class flowers still bring $1 and the supply seems inadequate. Stevia is coming in and sells at 25 cents per bunch. Paper White narcissus is druggy. Cypripedium insigne brings $12.50 per hundred. Short fronds of adiantum sell at 50 cents and the best grade at $1 per hundred. There is a good demand for Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri.

There was a very poor demand for crimson chrysanthemums for the Harvard-Yale foot ball game last week. Large quantities of Shrimpton and Cullingfordii were in ice chests on November 19. Harvard's expectation of defeat apparently affected the purchases of its supporters.

Horticultural Society.

The annual election of officers of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society was held on November 19. Voting was by Australian ballot, polls being open from 12 to 4. The following officers were elected: President, A. F. Estabrook; vice-president, Dr. R. T. Jackson; treasurer, C. E. Richardson; secretary, W. P. Rich; trustee for two years, Arthur D. Hill; for three years, Geo. F. Fabyan, Warren Fenno, J. Woodward Manning, J. A. Pettigrew; nominating committee, O. B. Hadwen, Henry S. Hunnewell, John Lawrence, Dr. H. P. Wolcott and James Wheeler.

President-elect Estabrook reconsidered his earlier decision not to run and Messrs. W. W. Rawson and W. H. Spooner, the other two candidates, practically retired in his favor. Mr. Estabrook is a well known banker and a member of the Boston Stock Exchange. He has been a member of the society for a number of years and has served on the trustee board. From his fine summer residence at Swampscott, he sends numerous exhibits to the society's shows and captures many premiums. Being an ardent patron of horticulture as well as a first-class business man, Mr. Estabrook should prove just such a leader as the society needs.

At the business meeting held prior to the polling, various reports were read and accepted. The trustees recommended that the sum of $6,506 be appropriated for prizes next year and this was done. The trustees also recommended the election of the secretary and treasurer by the trustees instead of by the society in future. A motion to ask the state legislature to so amend the charter as to permit of this being done was adopted.

James Garthley, gardener to H. H. Rogers, Fairhaven, showed a plant of Chrysanthemum Victoria, a cross between Daisy and Garza, most nearly resembling the latter parent. This received a certificate of merit and should prove desirable for pot culture.

Gardeners' and Florists' Club.

The meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club November 15 was well attended. Seven new members were elected, including some of the most prominent florists near Boston. J. K. M. L. Farquhar reported that a balance approximating $250 remained from the entertainment of the C. S. A. This will probably be used in March in connection with the visit of the American Rose Society.

The annual election of officers resulted as follows: President, James Wheeler; vice-president, M. A. Patten; secretary, W. N. Craig; treasurer, Edward Hatch; executive committee, J. A. Pettigrew, Patrick Welch, Harry Wilde and Samuel J. Goddard. Regret was expressed that President Pettigrew would not serve for another term. During his tenure of office a wonderful change for the better has come over the status of the club.

Robert Marshall gave an interesting account of the recent New York show and Robert Cameron described the exhibition at New Haven. W. N. Craig gave an account of a visit made with the garden committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society to the new estate of Commodore M. F. Plant, Groton, Conn. Remarks anent the coming visit of the American Rose Society were made by Fred R. Mathison, W. W. Edgar and J. K. M. L. Farquhar.

A discussion arose as to the size of chrysanthemum blooms in which J. W. Duncan, James Wheeler and other members took part. It seemed to be the general opinion that large blooms are not now popular either in the Boston market or on private estates. Smaller and more refined flowers are desired. While the big blooms continue to be popular at exhibitions, there can be no mistaking the fact that they have been overdone, as is evidenced by the increasing popularity of anemone, single and other neglected sections.

James Wheeler, the new president, being called upon, made a neat speech, thanking the members for the honor accorded him and predicting a grand future for the club if they would continue to pull together and give him their support.

Various Notes.

On the next field day of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club the establishments of Wm. Nicholson, S. J. Goddard and J. T. Butterworth, of Framingham, will be visited.

Wm. F. Hunter, gardener for Henry S. Hunnewell, of Wellesley, died on November 8 in his forty-fourth year. Mr. Hunter was a native of Scotland and much respected by his confreres, many of whom were present to pay their last sad respects to him at the interment on November 10.

Chrysanthemum Mlle. Jeannie Nonin, shown before the Boston committee on November 19, by the E. G. Hill Co., was much admired and has all the ear-marks of a fine commercial white. Its size should also make it valuable as an exhibition variety.

Herbert T. Capers is acting as salesman for Wilfred Wheeler at the new market.

William Sim, of Cliftondale, reports a big demand for violets. In fact he cannot fill his orders. In late chrysanthemums he considers the old Wanamaker, which he grows largely, still one of the best. White Bonnaffon he finds bruises rather easily.

Thanksgiving day, while less important than the other great holidays, occasions a good demand for flowers and prospects at time of writing are for better prices, especially in violets, carnations and red roses.

Copley Square, Boston's finest open space in the Back Bay section, is threatened with extinction so far as any further bedding out is concerned, and perpetual disfigurement, unless immediate action is taken to prevent the Boston elevated railroad from securing the space for one of its new subway stations.

Professor C. S. Sargent, through his gardener, Charles Sander, has on exhibition at Horticultural Hall this week an agave carrying a flower spike some thirty feet high which attracts considerable attention.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine seems to be the most popular of flowering plants in pots to judge from the numbers seen in nearly all store windows. Plants retailing at $1 to $1.50 seem to be in the best demand.

W. B. Arnold, of Rockland, has invited the garden committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society to inspect his house of striped Lawson carnation.

In the report of the flower show Wm. Anderson, gardener to H. Dumaresq, Esq., should have been given credit for the first premium on eight specimen plants, his exhibit being especially fine. Robert Marshall was first for three specimens Japanese incurved with a splendid entry.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

There is not much to say regarding the market the past week, although trade in the retail circles has been fairly active, at least so say those in the west end, who do large decorative work for weddings and receptions. Mrs. Ayers reported six decorations the past week, while her neighbors were also busy with that kind of work. World's Fair orders for cut flowers and decorations have dropped off considerably and another week will see the close of the great exposition, which brought a great deal of work of all kinds to the local florists during the seven months of its existence.

The wholesale market the past week had good supplies of almost everything in season. There was a good shipping trade, with big business for Thanksgiving day. The stock on Monday was somewhat limited, most of the growers holding off for Thursday, the big day in the cut flower line.

The Beauty crop has fallen off considerably of late and fancy stock is very scarce with orders in for more than can be supplied. The stock in other roses, such as Brides, Maids, Meteors, Liberty, Perles, Ivory and Gates the stock is looking much better than it has been, with less mildew. The demand for these is good and enough are in for the local trade.

Chrysanthemums seem on the down grade and not near as many as formerly are coming in. Fancy stock in these is becoming very scarce and another ten days will see them out of the market. Then the rose and carnation growers will be happy once more and their stock will bring a better price.

Carnations are becoming extra in quality and the demand so good as to clean up the consignments each day at fairly good prices. Some fine Enchantress, Wolcott, Joost, Estelle and Boston Market were seen Monday morning.

Violets are now in great demand and not near enough are received to supply the local florists who have standing orders. Romans, Paper Whites and lily of the valley are the only bulbous flowers in at present and they find a clear market, as demands are good for this stock. Plenty of good smilax is to be had, with demand light.

The prospects for Thanksgiving are very good at this writing, but stock is likely to be scarce, so the wholesalers say. The growers were early advised not to hold back but to ship stock right along, as prices early in the week were about as good as they will be at any time.

Various Notes.

There is every evidence of a hot time at the next meeting of the Florists' Club. The business to be transacted is of great importance to every member of the club. President Juengel will make a personal appeal to every member to be present. The membership of the club is 103. The meeting will take place on Thursday afternoon, December 10, at 2 o'clock, in Odd Fellow's building, hall No. 2.

Ostertag Bros. furnished the decorations for the big Krenning-Sutter wedding the past week. This was one of the fashionable events of the season. Henry Ostertag reports two more for this week, for which a large amount of stock will be used.

Henry Felter, on Lexington avenue, has had some extra fine chrysanthemums in pots of fine quality. Among them were Major Bonnaffon, White Bonnaffon and Mrs. Jerome Jones, which had an active demand.

John Connon, of Webster Groves, is sending in some good stock in roses and carnations.

A. Berdan, of Kirkwood, had a fine lot of Romans, Paper Whites and lily of the valley for Thanksgiving trade.

W. J. Pilcher, T. W. Ude, Sr., Charles Ude, Hugo Gross and other Kirkwood florists are sending in a good supply of California violets, for which there is a heavy demand at present.

It has been reported that Robert Tesson will again start in the growing business after the World's Fair officials vacate his greenhouses, which they have used the past eighteen months. Robert at present is working his farm in Clayton. This news will be welcome, as Robert always grew first-class stock, especially in roses.

Mr. Kalisch, who was hurt recently by the street cars, is, from last accounts, progressing nicely and expects to be out in a few days.

The Florists' Bowling Club members seem to have lost interest in the game of late and the bowling on Monday night has stopped until the busy season is over, at least until after the holidays. Messrs. Kuehn, Ellison and Beneke are rolling in the Palace league and Carl Beyer with the Western league. J. J. B.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Business last week was excellent, especially on the last two days, for chrysanthemums and violets but poor for roses. There were a number of weddings but transient trade was dull and prices drooped at times. This week has opened well, with prices advancing, especially on Beauties, carnations and violets, which are scarce. Thanksgiving orders, both in the city and out of town, are very heavy. There is an immense lot of stock in the market. The growers have learned how to do chrysanthemums at the end of November despite the mild weather. Timothy Eaton, Major Bonnaffon, Mrs. Jerome Jones, all three both in yellow and in white; Maud Dean, pink; Golden Wedding, yellow, and a few others make up the list. To these must be added the snowy white Dorothy Faust, a large, incurved, globular, Japanese variety of exquisite finish which Fred Ehret has been receiving since Monday. The Leo Niessen Co. reports heavy orders for chrysanthemums, also for carnations, of which they handle an immense number. Prices on tea roses, especially the poorer grades, are lower than in former years at this time. The scarcity of violets is most unfortunate. Many more could have been used to advantage, both Thursday of last week, when New Haven wanted more, and on Thursday of this week. Gardenias and cattleyas are both scarce. S. S. Pennock has an abundance of white orchids and some fine long stemmed heliotrope. The Cut Flower Co. has a nice lot of mignonette, which is in demand. The Leo Niessen Co. is again making a specialty of pansies, of which a great many are sold. Valley and white violets have sold well.

Business Instinct.

One of our leading commission men, commenting on the want of business instinct or sagacity displayed by many growers at a time like the present, when flowers are in demand, said that the difficulty of securing buyers for the flowers in times of plenty is forgotten and the flowers are held back just before a holiday, compelling the wholesaler to waste precious time, to say nothing of money, telephoning and sending for stock when he should be filling his orders. The wholesalers are the growers' representatives. They understand how to sell flowers better than the growers do, just as the growers understand how to grow flowers better than the wholesalers do. Every grower should keep his wholesaler posted on what stock he is to have and ship it as required.

Various Notes.

Charles F. Edgar will next Monday commence work with Berger Bros.

The trio of bowlers with Samuel S. Pennock, C. J. Watson, R. G. Sheigley and Charles Gray, again defeated the trio with J. J. Habermehl's Sons, last week, winning three games out of four on uptown alleys.

The scene at Bayersdorfer & Co.'s this week is full of animation. In the courtyard large drays loaded with cases, clerks hurrying about selecting stock for orders, customers coming and going, the members of the firm taking and filling orders and directing their assistants with business like precision.

Henry I. Faust, of Merion, is sending heavy shipments of Maud Dean, Golden Wedding and a Deven-like white, sold in bunches of twenty-five sprays (nota bene, Robert Kift), as well as of his beautiful Dorothy Faust to Fred Ehret. He is, in truth, keeping that active commission man on the jump to dispose of it all.

George Carpenter is sending fine pink and red bouvardia to William J. Baker.

William J. Muth reports that the Cut Flower Co. is already receiving large orders for holly.

A. Farenwald, of Hillside, cut 45,000 Liberties from 10,000 plants in four weeks.

Samuel S. Pennock received a fine lot of Bonnaffons on Tuesday which brought $3 a dozen. He also had a few choice Carnation Judge Hinsdale grown at the Strafford Flower Farm.

Theodore Edwards, of Bridgeton, is sending fine Roman hyacinths and Paper White narcissi to William J. Baker.

Pennock Bros. had a handsome harvest display in their window this week.

THE REVIEW, the foremost florists' paper of the day, got a week too far ahead in announcing the opening of J. J. Habermehl's Sons' new shop in the Bellevue-Stratford, which was again postponed owing to the strike.

Answers to Correspondents.

REVIEW readers are invited to send any questions relating to culture or marketing of plants and flowers in Philadelphia to Phil, in care of any of the leading seed or commission houses or the Flower Market. Each question will be submitted to a competent person and answered under number. Correct name and address must always accompany inquiry, but will not be published.

20.—You are right; there were more chrysanthemums on the main stairway at the show than last fall. As a matter of fact the word "unusual" was translated over the wire as "usual" in describing this feature.

21.—It will pay to lay in your winter's supply of anthracite coal now. The price is lower on buckwheat than it was in August or September and the quality is much better than it will be after a while. Clever business men like Myers & Samtman have just laid in their entire stock of buckwheat coal for the season.

22.—The Chestnut Hill show was a fine exhibition and well worthy of an account. It is, however, generally described by another writer in this column. PHIL.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Between horse shows, football and seasonable weather the last of the week saw the beginning of better days. There is surely a rising tendency in the market. One has only to journey observantly up and down the great avenues of trade to realize that Wall street is not the only thing that is experiencing the autumn rise. It may be the coming of Thanksgiving, or the first faint sounds of the approaching Christmas, or the opening of the opera season, with all the wealth of floral accompaniments it indicates, but the fact cannot be gainsaid. The retailers are all as busy as they can be.

Chrysanthemums have had their day. Stock of high grade from now on will be absorbed as quickly as it arrives. The flood is over. The best roses have advanced already and will doubtless hold their improved averages. Carnations are superb in quality and unlimited in variety. The new ones assert their importance and command high values, as they deserve to do. Orchids have started again for winter prices. Their growing popularity in all the large cities has a tendency to make them independent of market fluctuations. Violets again lift up their heads. Any price asked could be had on Saturday in honor of Yale and football.

Various Notes.

The final sales in the auction market draw near. Cleary's Horticultural Hall had its great sale Tuesday of the present week.

Haerens Bros., of Belgium, have dissolved partnership, August Haerens remaining in control and A. Roiker & Sons continuing as American representatives.

F. W. O. Schmitz's importation of nursery stock is larger this fall than usual and of great variety.

All the violet specialists were crowded with orders for New Haven on Saturday. One house shipped 55,000 out of orders for 80,000, another 40,000 out of orders for 60,000, and so on down the line on Twenty-ninth and Thirtieth streets. The demand was unprecedented, the market was depleted and fair prices prevailed. It is unlikely that violets will reach above $1.50 per hundred this season except on very special holidays, like Christmas or Easter, and then $2 will be the limit.

The new ice box at the Cut Flower Exchange in the Coogan building has been installed. It is immense and will prove a most desirable convenience. L. J. Kreshover has removed to much lighter and better quarters in the building and his branch store there is complete.

Frank Millang, on the early car Sunday morning on his way to his office, was badly cut by glass from a broken window. Bauman is sending some fine Maud Dean and Jerome Jones chrysanthemums to Mr. Millang daily.

Bonnot Bros. are shipping a good many roses at present to Scranton and other Pennsylvania cities.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Smith, of Woodside, have completed their visit in Scotland and left for New York on Saturday.

W. E. Marshall, bulb and seed importer, has taken commodious quarters at 146 West Twenty-third street, near Sixth avenue, on one of the busiest streets in the city.

D. J. Mackintosh had a unique and handsome window last week in which he combined the foot ball colors of Yale and Harvard with silver stirrups and laurel collar emblematic of the horse show. He has opened a branch store in the New Breslin hotel, Twenty-ninth street and Broadway, and has associated with him James H. Carroll, for eighteen years with Thorley.

The Kervan Co., 20 West Twenty-seventh street, near Broadway, anticipate a fine season and have splendid facilities for handling their growing trade. They will make a speciality of small Christmas trees, as usual, this year.

Wertheimber & Co. have sold over 100,000 of their Alpha Christmas bells. Advance orders have completely exhausted their stock.

Leikens reports a big increase in business horse show week. Among other crumbs was a large order for the landscaping and planting of a millionaire's estate.

S. Masur, 238 Fulton street, Brooklyn, has built up a good business in less than two years on his own account. He was with J. V. Phillips seven years. Last week he had a decoration for the annual banquet and ball of the U. S. Battleship Kearsage at the Palm Garden, New York city. Over 800 bouquets were used and the decorations were elaborate. A prominent bookmaker's death the other day brought orders for several $50 wreaths and designs.

J. V. Phillips has enlarged his store and added to his window space until he has one of the most attractive florists' stores in the City of Churches.

Jos. Fenrich has an unnamed new pink mum on exhibition that is very brilliant and a great keeper. He has purchased the entire stock and already made arrangements for growing it extensively next year. He is handling a large and especially fine stock of Bonnaffon daily.

Flatbush Bowling Notes.

Last Thursday evening's attendance was light at the Flatbush alleys but the bowling was heavy. Davy Mellis, Will Siebrecht and the Dailledouze boys had finished their preparations for the match with the New York Club and thought they would need no further practice to win, so they embalmed their arms in witch hazel and ginger and rested. From the scores appended it looks like a strenuous evening. Riley absorbed nearly all the pots as usual. Ever since his first born son arrived, Pat has been banking these weekly offerings until now he has to use a barrel and before the kid is 21 he will have several thousand dollars put away for him. The veteran, Louis Schmutz, has come to life again with a 200 record. The best games follow:

Schmutz	133	148	149	150	207
Zeller	131	131	143	144	171
Wocker	114	115	140	147	177
Shaw	113	123	131	139	169

Bowling.

Mr. Fenrich's ambition as captain of the bowling club is to have a team that will arrive at Washington next August with an unbeaten record. The trouble is now nearly every member of the club is good enough to be a member of the team, so the plan of choosing from the averages made weekly will be adopted, giving every member encouragement to win a place on the champion aggregation.

A challenge from Philadelphia will receive immediate recognition. Hereafter matches with other teams will be bowled on other than club evenings, so that the regular bowling will not be interfered with. This does not apply to the first match game with Hoboken, which will take place on the club's alleys next Monday evening, November 28, when John Birnie and his faithful Scots will meet their Waterloo.

The contest with Flatbush Monday night was a great success. A crowd of over thirty visitors was in attendance. The excitement was intense and the dinner elaborate. Flatbush was handicapped by the absence of the Dailledouze boys and were obliged to use Messrs. Fenrich, Siebrecht and Shaw to complete the team. As a consequence they went down to an honorable defeat and the promise of a turning of the tables at the return match in Flatbush. Following was the score:

Flatbush—	1st	2d	T'l
Fenrich	130	148	278
Schmutz	113	170	283
Wocker	111	117	228

Siebrecht	140	151	291
Shaw	102	101	203
Riley	155	178	333
Totals	892	986	1,877

New York—	1st	2d	T'l
Ford	145	163	308
Traendly	106	158	264

Marshall	146	135	281
Burns	133	141	274
Manda	156	140	296
Lang	170	168	338
Totals	990	1,024	2,014

The match with Hoboken was postponed until a week from Thursday evening and will take place on the New York alleys.

BOWLING CLUB RULES.

The following are the rules and regulations recently adopted by the New York Florists' Bowling Club, which are presented for purposes of comparison with those of other similar organizations:

1. The club's membership shall consist entirely of members of the New York Florists' Club, no others being eligible.
2. Visitors, residents of the city, endorsed by any of the club's members, will be permitted to bowl with the club on payment of 50 cents and the usual evening's assessments.
3. Out of town visitors, not members of the New York Florists' Club, to the club's meetings will be entertained and welcomed without charge.
4. The monthly dues until further notice will be $1, payable in advance, and no one will be entitled to bowl with the club until the dues are paid.
5. Business meetings of the club, if necessary, will be held weekly at the Bowling Club's room at the conclusion of the regular luncheon.
6. Any individual eligible for membership in the S. A. F., but not a member of the New York Florists' Club, may become an associate member of the Bowling Club by a unanimous vote of the club members. Associate members will be subject to the same rules and regulations as regular members of the club.

We are very much pleased with the Review; there is much important news in it every week.—Springfield Seed Co., Springfield, Mo.

Springfield, Mo.—The Springfield Seed Co. has just completed two greenhouses 30x80 and will go into plant growing with a general line of stock.

Joliet, Ill.—Ernest Crantz, who has been working for the Chicago Carnation Co., was fatally injured November 3 by being struck by an electric car.

Fitzgerald, Ga.—We have had an unusually early frost, which put an end to outdoor stock and has made trade very good, so Joel Thomas says. He is the only florist here.

LORRAINES.

How can I get some growth on my young plants of Gloire de Lorraine? They are simply all bloom from the ground up. Do you recommend disbudding; would it help? C. P. N.

It is now too late to pinch off the flowers of the begonias except it be the most advanced. Stopping the plants, that is, pinching the ends of the growths, would be little use at this season, as you would not get a new growth and flower in time to make the plants attractive at the holidays and that is the time they are in greatest demand. While its extraordinary propensity to bloom is the great attraction of this beautiful begonia, if the plants do not make a free growth in August, September and October they will become stunted by this profusion of flower. I don't think you can remedy the trouble at this season. W. S.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The market has been strong ever since last report. The usual shortening up before a holiday was very apparent a week ago and up to Tuesday night the receipts were of very moderate proportions in comparison to the demand. Tuesday evening, when the principal shipping business for Thanksgiving was done, found practically every rose and carnation of shipping quality packed up and on its way to an out-of-town buyer. The city people undertook to pick up some small quantities of stock on Tuesday but found prices beyond their reach. Beauties were in good demand and in probably better supply than almost any other item, a large part of the receipts being of superior quality. Good roses were short of the requirements for the shipping trade and carnations of very indifferent quality had to be sent out to complete many orders. Possibly the carnation market was stiffer than any other department. A great many of the better sorts of chrysanthemums were cut out before the rush of Thanksgiving business. The supply, however, was abundant, with somewhat indifferent quality. Home-grown violets were not in active demand, but the Hudson river stock went well. The A. L. Randall Co. says that their customers out of town will not take anything but New York violets. There are again considerable quantities of callas in the market and green goods are abundant. Some good bouvardia is seen, also a few sweet peas. Lily of the valley is plentiful, also Paper Whites.

Practically every out-of-town buyer was heard from for Thanksgiving but in many cases the requirements were not large. It is thought, however, that the Thanksgiving shipping business will foot up equal to the best previous record. City trade on Wednesday took fair quantities of stock, but the pressure was considerably relieved and receipts increased as usual, for there are many growers who will not learn that the best market is always the second day before a holiday.

Sunday and Monday saw a very active demand for first-class stock for funeral purposes, for on Monday two of Chicago's best known citizens were buried, Arthur J. Caton and Judge Moran. All the leading retailers supplied good work.

A Permanent Hall.

The great success of last week's flower show has renewed the talk of a permanent place for our exhibitions. In Paris there is a building which is erected and removed whenever required. Such a one is talked of for the lake front. C. L. Hutchison is its sponsor.

The Banquet.

There were seventy-seven at the supper at the Union Thursday evening, November 17, several prominent gentlemen of the local contingent being conspicuous by their absence, and there were also other visitors whom it would have been a pleasure to have had present. The repast was all right and so was the music. W. N. Rudd, president of the Florists' Club, presided. Among the speakers were Wm. Duckham, Paul Dailledouze, W. A. Kennedy, Geo. Asmus, P. J. Hauswirth and J. C. Vaughan, of the trade, and Mayor Crolius, of Joliet. John P. Degnan, who arranged the affair, is to be congratulated on its success.

Various Notes.

E. C. Amling says that it is a mistake for the growers to regard Thanksgiving as an occasion necessitating hoarding up stock to secure a supply. Cuts are always large at this season and, with large quantities of mums in the market, the question is only one of getting enough good stock. Hoarding up never improves grades. He has his growers pretty well enlightened in this respect.

E. E. Pieser says he has never seen anything like the way the violet market has fluctuated the past few days. One day the buyers would be scrambling for them and the next choice stock could scarcely be moved at all.

Andrew McAdams has been seriously ill with pneumonia but is now thought to be well on the road to recovery.

Peter Reinberg returned from his hunting expedition with three fine deer.

Emil Buettner was taken ill last week and has been operated on for appendicitis. He is recovering nicely.

C. W. McKellar supplied, so he says, all the orchids exhibited at last week's show except, of course, those of Messrs. Selfridge and Uihlein.

P. J. Demas, of Pittsburg, is in town this week, buying stock. There were over 150 trade visitors registered at the flower show last week.

N. J. Wietor says that they are practically cut out on mums, nearly three weeks earlier than last year.

The north end of State street, the block from Randolph to Lake, must be a very good stand for a flower store, since three seem to thrive on one side of the street. T. D. Mosconesotes has been in the Masonic Temple for years. Bohanon & Conger opened a little over a year ago, at the north end of the block, and about the same time Henry Klunder opened between the two. Each keeps a very neat place. Since Fleischman moved to Jackson boulevard these are the only legitimate flower stores on the street.

Vaughan & Sperry are still getting in very fine Kaiserins, especially notable because so late in the season.

Edgar Sanders was down to the flower show for a few hours Friday afternoon and there was no visitor during the week whom the boys were more glad to see.

Percy Jones is getting in about 2,000 fine mums a day this week and his corner of the market is a busy place.

Chas. Heim has withdrawn from partnership with his two brothers at Blue Island and has put up a couple of new houses across the street.

N. Armbrust, at Oak Park, one of the veterans of the craft, had a very large wedding order not long since, the Malone wedding. The decorations included both church and house. At the church sixty palms were used, also quantities of wild smilax, mums and several hundred feet of ribbon. Besides mantel and other work in the parlor there was a large arch of asparagus from which hung a bell under which the bridal couple stood to receive. In the hall, second parlor and dining room large quantities of mums, roses and carnations were used, as well as green stuff. The musicians were in the conservatory, screened by two ivy plants eight feet high and six broad. All told, a great quantity of stock was used.

SPENCER, IA.—Carl Seigle, who has been florist with Dr. W. P. Woodcock for a number of years, has gone to his old home in Germany for a visit.

FUMIGATION.

Will ferns, like the Boston and that type, bear the same fumigation that roses will? C. P. N.

We have never noticed that fumigation did any harm to the Boston ferns, but a heavy, dense smoke would be liable to brown the fronds and stunt the young growths. They would certainly stand all the smoke that roses would bear. Burn tobacco dust, which will give you all the benefit of the nicotine without the hot smoke, and you will hurt neither ferns nor roses. W. S.

ROCK WAS FIRST.

In the World's Fair flower show W. L. Rock was first on table decoration with a very fine centerpiece of orchids. F. H. Rowe was second with a fine mound of Chatenay roses. The statement that Mr. Rowe won first, in the advertisement of Poehlmann Bros. Co. last week, was a typographical error. To be second to so good a table as Mr. Rock's was a high honor.

Vegetable Forcing.

FORCING ASPARAGUS.

The forcing of asparagus may be begun any time after the tops have died down, but if it is allowed a short season of rest and left in the ground until it has been frozen over a few times it will respond all the better to forcing. To have asparagus ready to cut for Christmas, however, it is necessary to have the crowns in the forcing quarters not later than the first of December. Under the most favorable conditions cutting will begin three weeks from the time the crowns are put in the forcing quarters, but this is cutting it pretty fine and it is safer to allow four weeks. It is better to be a few days early than a few days late. If it is necessary to cut some of it a few days before it is wanted it can easily be kept by setting the ends of the bunches in water. Treated thus and placed in a temperature of about 40 degrees it will be all right for a week or more.

A supply of crowns sufficient to last the whole season should be lifted before the ground is frozen too hard. They can be stored in a cool cellar, where they should be covered with some loose material, such as leaves or straw, anything that will keep the roots slightly moist and prevent them from drying up or shriveling. If a cool cellar is not available they will keep well in a pit, which should be dug deep enough to be below the frost line. Here they can be covered so as to be easily reached in any kind of weather. It is not always convenient for the forcer to grow his own plants but where this can be done it is the best and most profitable way. When shipping from a distance more or less vitality is sure to be lost through breakage of the roots, drying or being subjected to extreme temperatures.

Forcing quarters are not of the utmost importance as long as the proper temperature can be maintained. A good article can be produced in a mushroom house or under a greenhouse bench, but the best possible forcing place is a pit where about two feet of stable manure can be put in the bottom. Our pits are built of brick, about four feet deep with one 4-inch hot water pipe running all the way around. With this pipe we can keep the desired temperature after the heat of the manure begins to fail. After the heat of the manure has dropped to about 60 degrees we cover with about an inch of sand. On this the plants are set and covered to a depth of three inches, sand being again used for this purpose. Frequent waterings are given, so as to keep the sand moist. A night temperature of 60 degrees and a day temperature of 70 to 75 degrees is maintained, but at first a little air is left on night and day to let the steam from the manure escape.

W. S. CROYDON.

STEM-ROT OF CUCUMBERS.

Kindly inform me what the trouble is with my cucumbers. When the vines are about two feet high they become brown or rusty at the stem. The vines grow fairly well for a time, finally the rust eats into the stem. The leaves in the meantime become blotched or take on a burnt appearance. Finally the vines collapse. The soil is three-fourths sandy loam and one part old cow manure with a little slaked lime. The night temperature is from 55 to 60 degrees. The variety is White Spine. I send a part of a stem for inspection. J. L. M.

The trouble is what is commonly known as stem-rot. This trouble can be averted by planting your cucumbers in hills. In place of filling the benches all at once, make a hill of a few shovelfuls of soil, set the plants in this and when the roots appear on the outside add more soil. Planting thus insures against the lodgment of water around the necks of your plants. For these hills special care should be taken to have the soil as fibrous as possible and not broken too fine; when rough and open the free passage of water is insured. The addition of charcoal to the compost also greatly assists in keeping the whole sweet. The mixture you are using will do very well for adding later, as by the time the roots appear and it is necessary to add more soil the plants should be past the danger stage. Be careful not to have the atmosphere of the house too close and humid and try and run the temperature about 5 degrees higher than you are doing now. If you have any plants under way which are not yet affected with the disease you may be able to save them by taking the soil away in a circle about a foot from the plants so that the water will not lodge around the plants and immediately around the necks of the plants make rings of powdered charcoal. Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., C. N. Page, Des Moines, Ia; First Vice-Pres., L. L. May, St. Paul; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 23rd annual meeting will be held on the St. Lawrence, June, 1905.

SEED potatoes are now one of the principal items with many of the large British houses.

RIVES JUNCTION, MICH.—E. E. Stewart has just finished harvesting his crop of gladiolus bulbs. The S. Y. Haines Seed Co., lately of Tompkins, Mich., has removed its seed business to this place.

AT Erfurt, Germany, there are about twenty-five firms engaged in the seed trade on a large scale. Flower seeds are grown very extensively, and although more vegetable crops are seen at Quedlinburg than at Erfurt, yet Erfurt is also a center for vegetable seeds. The Erfurt growers have their crops away from town owing to their system of contracting with farmers, so that the inspection of any considerable portion of them, as sometimes contemplated by visitors is a considerable task.

THE firm of C. Platz & Son has been engaged in growing flower seeds at Erfurt, Germany, since 1756.

HERBERT W. JOHNSON, of Johnson & Stokes, Philadelphia, was the successful candidate for sheriff of Camden county, N. J., at the late election.

THE firm of Polman Mooy, Haarlem, Holland, was established in 1810 and is one of the oldest of the Dutch houses. The present owners are grandsons of the founder.

THE early birds among the general seed catalogues are making their appearance. First was that of Johnson & Musser Seed Co., Los Angeles, closely followed by Crenshaw Bros., Tampa, Fla.

GREEN is coming out of the Wisconsin woods in larger quantities but should unfavorable weather put an early end to the picking season the supply will be short as usual quantities are not yet in sight.

VISITED PHILADELPHIA:—Alfred Emerich, representing Vilmorin-Andrieux & Co., Paris, France, and J. M. Clark, secretary of the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago. Mr. Emerich sails for home December 1, from New York.

A TOUR AMONG CALIFORNIA SEED GROWERS.

Having journeyed up the river from San Francisco, the first stop is at Isleton. It is a typical up-the-river port. It was night when we reached the place and after supper, there being a Chinese village there, we went out and had a glimpse of the home life of the Chinaman. Early in the morning we started out to see the seed fields. The crops up the river compared favorably with those at Santa Clara and Gilroy but seemed to be nearer the cutting stage. July 8 was the date on which these fields were seen. The Morse plantings up the river were quite extensive and were looked after in a manner comporting with the Morse standard of procedure, which is A1 in all particulars. We did not have time to see all the fields, but what we did see was enough to demonstrate that if the levee system is safe there is a sufficient acreage available for seed growing up the river to grow a good many pounds of garden seed.

In the judgment of the growers there is one drawback to this part of California for onion seed growing, and this is the hot winds which sometimes prevail. These have a tendency to blight the seed ball and lessen the quantity at harvest if they come at a critical time. It is not thought that the hot winds affect the other crops so much.

We had promised Charles Parker when leaving him at the boat the day before that we would get to his place by noon if possible. It was a drive of some miles, besides being on the other side of the river. We hustled up the horse and got to a ferry where they took us, and the horse and buggy, across in the old-fashioned way. We had dinner with Mr. Parker, saw some of his fields of onion, radish, etc., also saw fields that Mr. Wilcox had in the vicinity and discussed the plantings of the other growers, whose fields we had to cut out, owing to lack of time. These growers, with the exception of a Mr. Metson and a Mr. Ryder, who are also interested in growing seeds more or less up the river, have been mentioned previously.

The time for returning home arrived, we left Mr. Parker wrestling with a threshing machine he was setting up, and reached San Francisco late in the evening.

The account of this tour is written from memory, and for that reason many things of interest have undoubtedly been overlooked. In the recital a fairness to all the growers has been aimed at. In summing the thing up it may be said that from Los Angeles to the end of the trip every grower visited was very courteous and free to give any information that would in any way help toward an intelligent idea of the scope of operations. No jealousy was shown by one grower if the visitor elected to accept his competitor's offer of conveyance in preference to his equally kind offer. Each grower was also willing to concede any existing advantage a competitor might have over him in a given line of work. This sort of thing put one at his ease, and the kindly effort of each to make the visitor feel at home is a pleasant recollection.

DUTCH BULB REPORT.

The unusually fine and dry weather has put the bulb fields in such a perfect condition as we have not experienced for the last ten years, and planting operations have now almost been completed, under most extraordinary favorable conditions. Shipments of both early and late ripening goods have now come to an end and although prices have ruled much too low, the clearing of hyacinths has been a most thorough one, and even in white hyacinths the scarcity has been very general, causing a sharp rise in the market. Crocus have also cleared off in a most satisfactory way, and it is quite apparent that the outlook for the grower of good crocus stocks is a much better one. English iris have moved rather slowly this season, and Spanish iris are somewhat of a drug in the market at present. The yearly increasing demand for bedding tulips has caused the cheaper sorts to be in good demand and some of these have even gone up in price. The more expensive sorts, such as are principally used for forcing, have, however, not cleared off so well, owing to the high prices asked for them, but as soon as these prices have come down again to a more reasonable level, they are sure to find as good a market as previously.—H. T. J.

POTS FOR LILIES.

Can I grow longiflorums, 5-7 bulbs, in 4-inch pots and do it successfully?

C. P. N.

There is quite a difference between a 5-inch and 7-inch bulb. A 5-inch bulb can be flowered in a 4-inch pot, and they often are, although to give a fine flower and healthy green foliage, they should have a 5-inch pot. The 7-inch bulbs should most decidedly be given a 5-inch pot.

W. S.

PARKHILL, ONT.—Mrs. A. K. Van Wyck is going out of business.

MURPHYSBORO, ILL.—Lewis R. Allen has built an additional house during the past season and has facilities for taking care of a little more business. He says the demand is increasing right along.

Fitting Old Tubes.

Having made some joints in hot water pipe, last and also this season, that have proven very satisfactory, I believe O. N. can fit his boiler tubes with the same material. Mix litharge with glycerin into a very thick paste or putty. If this is used the sleeve need not be more than half as long as in L. C. C.'s method and mix only enough for one joint at a time, as it sets quickly and very hard. Start the joint the same as L. C. C. describes, then put some of the litharge all around and drive it up with a roll of packing, then more litharge and more packing, till the joint is full, finishing off on the outside nice and smooth with the litharge. The litharge cost me 10 cents per pound and the glycerin 35 cents per half-pint, making the joints in the regular 4-inch hot water pipe cost about 10 cents each. The writer knows of joints made with this material seven years ago which are still good. G. H. M.

I see in last week's REVIEW that someone wishes to know how to fit 3-inch boiler tubes, so send my way of fitting them, as we use them and nothing else. For fitting 3 or 3½-inch boiler tubes for greenhouse heating with hot water, take a piece of 4-inch tubing six or seven inches long for a sleeve coupling or have a tinner make them of heavy galvanized iron, riveting seams and soldering same to make them water-tight; then slip the coupling on the tube, bringing the two tubes together as close as possible. Take a piece of oakum or tow flattened out to two inches wide and one-half inch thick, just long enough to reach around the tube; spread cement on one side of the oakum and bind this over the seams with string where the two tubes meet, so the cement will fill the crack, then slip the coupling on so the ends will be equally distant from the jointed ends; now press in cement at each end as firmly as possible, leaving one inch to be filled after the cement is hardened, then fill in the same as before. Use Portland cement without sand, mixed with as little water as it can be used easily. To fit tees and elbows bind a narrow band of oakum around the end of the tube, then slip the fitting on and fill as before; see that the tubes lie solid while doing the work. If done right they are indestructible. A little oakum pressed in with the cement will make it pack easier.

OCEANIC, N. J.

At the Monmouth County Horticultural Society's meeting, November 18, all the prize money was ordered paid, and there was a surplus of more than $100 from the receipts of the recent show.

The discussion of the evening was on San Jose scale. Mr. Hale said that he had tried soda, salt and sulphur, also caustic soda and Paris green, without any effect. Others stated that the lime, salt and sulphur application damaged trees and did not destroy the scale on apple and pear trees. Mr. Turner said that he sprays his pear trees in pots with the latter solution and there is no scale left. Mr. Hale sprayed his trees with crude oil (insecticide oil) and his trees are now clean. But the members came to the conclusion that no orchard can be kept clean while the neighboring orchard is neglected and that the matter of compulsory spraying should be agitated.

At our next meeting, December 2, the discussion will be on "Rose Culture Under Glass." B.

COLUMBUS, O.—The stock of the Livingston Seed Co. is in very fine shape and they report business very satisfactory.

I have a house 12x50 feet, with one gable glass and two feet of glass on the sides, double boarded with building paper between. How many runs of 2-inch pipe will be needed to keep 65 to 70 degrees in cold weather and how would you pipe for hot water and for steam?

G. L.

In order to provide a temperature of 70 degrees during severe weather it will be necessary to use 520 feet of 2-inch pipe when hot water at 180 degrees F. is used and 400 feet of 2-inch pipe if steam under five pounds pressure is used. In a narrow house of this description it will undoubtedly be best to arrange the pipes in two coils, one under each side bench, if elevated benches are used; if not and it is possible to arrange the coils on the side walls, this can be made to work satisfactorily. In the case of the hot water it will be necessary to place six pipes in one manifold and five in the other, as eleven pipes are all that are required. The coils can be so constructed that one pipe in each set acts as a supply pipe, while the other five, or four, as the case may be, return the water to the boiler. The same scheme may be used with the steam, but instead of there being six and five pipes in the coils respectively there will be eight pipes in all, or two coils of four pipes each.

If it is not desirable to use this plan of piping, the steam system can be installed as follows: Run one 2-inch pipe under the ridge as a supply from the boiler, making, if possible, the point directly over the boiler the highest point in the system. Allow the supply pipe to slope gently from this point to the most distant end of the greenhouse and there divide it to supply each of two coils consisting of five 1¼-inch pipes, or ten 1¼-inch pipes in all. These can be made up with a manifold tee or with tees and nipples and provided with swing joints to care for the expansion. This is, to my mind, the most desirable arrangement and the best size of pipe for steam heating. With a small plant such as above stated hot water will undoubtedly prove most satisfactory. If hot water is used an ample expansion tank should be provided and if possible placed ten or twelve feet above the highest point in the system. It should also connect with the main return near the boiler.

CUT WORMS.

In the Review of November 3 appeared a query about cut worms. A few years ago we had a plague of them here in Victoria. We found that spraying with Paris green was effective. If the ground be watered with a mixture of a wineglass of kerosene emulsion to a gallon of water the worms will all come to the surface and can be collected and destroyed. A good soaking with water will have the same result but can hardly be applied at this season with safety.

PONTIAC, ILL.—W. J. Miller & Son report a fair business this fall because their mums were of especially good quality, but the weather has been unfavorable for brisk trade.

NEW ORLEANS.

The regular monthly meeting of the New Orleans Horticultural Society was held November 17 at Kolb's Hotel, in St. Charles street. Harry Papworth, the president, called the meeting to order, and M. M. Lapouyade was elected secretary pro tem., in the absence of the regular officer.

There was an exhibit of Piersoni elegantissima and some of the newest mums from the north were shown, including Wm. Duckham.

In the general discussion of trade conditions, it developed that the retail flower trade of New Orleans during the last month had been considerably larger than last season. The demand, it was shown, was larger for the better and higher prieed varieties of flowers, and the white chrysanthemum had proven a better seller than other colors this autumn.

KANSAS CITY.

Various Jottings.

Sam Short reports business rushing at Kansas City, Kans.

W. J. Barnes is doing a rushing business these days and has just finished a new carnation house.

The W. H. Humfeld Floral Co. has a magnificent display of mums. The greenhouses are thronged with sight-seers all day.

It is reported that an effort is to be made to have another flower show here next fall. Everyone with whom I have talked seems to favor it and, with everyone satisfied, the florists of Kansas City will make it a show long to be remembered.

D. Freudenthal, of the U. D. Flower Co., says the fair has cost him about $500 loss in a business way, but he expects to make it all up before spring.

G. P. Kaupp, of G. P. Kaupp & Son, Nevada, Mo., has been visiting here the past week. Mr. Kaupp reports good business in his home town and to supply the increasing demand had to build a new house 22x100 for carnations and mums.

Mrs. Jewell, who has recently started in business on Grand avenue, is getting a lot of work from the Police Department.

The Alpha Floral Co. must be doing good business, as they have placed a gorgeous new refrigerator in their store on Walnut street.

There are millions of pots used in and around this city every year and it is almost impossible some times to get pots. Our city is the center of a most populous country, railroads reaching everywhere, water, gas and fuel in abundance, clay for the digging, and why a pottery has never been established here is a mystery to me.

Samuel Murray was a shining light at the Commercial Club banquet last week.

NARCISSUS.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

Kingston Pet is registered by Valentine Burgevin's Sons, Kingston, N. Y., a pink sport of Enchantress, a very rich, pleasing shade of pure pink, with the size and stem of Enchantress and the general habit of that variety.

Premium lists for the Chicago show can be had by applying to the secretary. This meeting will be held January 28 and 29, 1905, and will be the place to show all new carnations as well as the good ones of the older varieties. There were some 30,000 flowers shown in Detroit and there will be room for more than that in Chicago.

ALBERT M. HERR, Sec'y.

THREE RIVERS, MICH.—Wm. Dyer says that business was pretty dull all summer but has been all right this fall.

WOONSOCKET, R. I.—Thos. H. Greene has removed his store from 138 to 75 Main street, where he has a very neat place.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Trade is medium. There is a fairly active demand but nothing startling. There have been but few weddings or receptions this fall and many of our best florists report that their business in this respect has fallen way behind last year. General trade averages fairly well but stock does not bring as good an average price as last year. This is especially true of mums, which will undoubtedly average considerably behind last year. The large exhibition varieties suffer the most. The small-sized ones that sell at from $3 to $8 per hundred have the best call at all times and it is seldom that there is enough of this grade of stock to satisfy the demand. There was a pretty good lot of advance orders for Thanksgiving and that tended to keep the prices up.

Roses are arriving in fairly large quantities and of very good quality. They are selling better, also. The quoted price is being held stiffer. Red roses are about the only kind that are scarce. Meteor and Liberty are not equal to the demand and Beauties are far below it, there being but few coming in at present.

Carnations are not very plentiful and they sell fairly well at times, but once in a while it is hard to move them at any price. Many of them show very poor keeping qualities, for which it is hard to assign a reason except that they appear to be grown too warm, the blooms being very soft.

Violets are still in good demand and the price has advanced to $1 and $1.50 per hundred. Valley, Romans and narcissi are to be had and the demand for them is good. Smilax is plentiful and has been moving slowly, while asparagus is going first rate. Fancy eastern ferns have advanced to $1.75 per thousand.

Various Notes.

Max Rudolph is cutting some fine mums, roses and carnations. He reports business scarcely up to last year but still very satisfactory and that his best stock is bringing very good prices.

Frank Deller, formerly with R. Witterstaetter, has, with his wife, just returned from a visit at Yorkville, Ind. He will start in with Wm. Murphy the first of the week.

J. T. Conger spent a few days at Springfield, O.

J. A. Peterson is on a business trip through the east. C. J. Ohmer.

WASHINGTON.

A. Gude & Bro. had their opening November 8 and a chrysanthemum show for the entire week. Some fine specimens of W. R. Church, Mrs. Chamberlain, Col. Appleton, Timothy Eaton, Blackhawk, Maj. Bonnaffon, Mrs. Proctor, Chadwick, Mrs. Perrin and that grand variety Golden Wedding, were as fine as I ever saw. There were thirty-seven varieties on exhibition. At times the large store was thronged with spectators. The store is one of the largest in the country. Besides the large store and large workroom are two fine commodious windows. A fine fireproof conservatory is being built in the rear. The ice box is a dream, large and roomy, tiled and finished with mirrors inside.

Mrs. Roosevelt has named a new chrysanthemum Lou Dillon.

Paul Berkowitz was a recent vistor.

Gude's had part of the decoration at the unveiling of the Frederick the Great statue last Saturday. Six large green galax wreaths, crescent shaped, with clusters of leucothœ, were made and one wreath seven feet in diameter. White oilcloth covered the center, lettered. The large one had the first verse of America. One of the smaller ones had the second verse and one the German national anthem, etc.

Blackistone reports a fine business. He has a new palm van.

Shaffer has his window filled with Beauties and chrysanthemums.

J. H. Small & Son had a fine chrysanthemum show during the week of November 7, also a show of orchids.

The Florists' Club recently had the first special meeting for convention work. They voted to make this a record breaker. Nothing will be left undone to make the coming meeting of the S. A. F. the best yet. President Gude said, "Boys, we have our coats off now and they stay off until the S. A. F. is called to order next August." Vice-president Freeman was not able to be present. He was laid up with a bad cold, but sent a note, "I am with you boys, go ahead."

Rambler.

Marshall, Mo.—D. H. Heskett & Sons say trade is exceptionally good for the time of year on account of the numerous weddings and funerals. They have been cutting some especially fine mums and carnations, for which they have found ready sale.

Davenport, Ia.—The Tri-City Florists' Club met at Central park Nov. 10 to see the chrysanthemums. Supt. Adolph Arp and Emil Boehn, the grower, talked on varieties and culture. The next meeting will be in Davenport Dec. 8, when Henry Gaethje, of Rock Island, will read a paper.

PACIFIC COAST.

GLADIOLI.

During the past week I have finished cutting the last of my crop of gladiolus flowers and from a patch of bulbs planted on a piece of ground 20x75 feet I cut about 4,000 spikes of bloom. I received an average of $1.50 per hundred or about $60 for the entire lot. I purchased 500 bulbs two years ago and planted them in rows two feet apart, keeping the colors separated. I dug out after the first flowering about 100 bulbs that did not produce good selling colors and left those that were distinct shades of pink, red, cerise or cream. I found that there was a good demand for all the bright shades, especially those that bordered on scarlet or deep pink, and considering that there was hardly any labor attached to the growing of these flowers and there was no difficulty in disposing of them, I consider them to be among my best paying crops.

Although I have cultivated gladioli for many years I have always looked on them as a garden flower hardly worth cultivating for market and as a consequence have given them little attention but when I imported these newer hybrids I very soon discovered that there was no trouble to create an immediate demand for them and I expect to cut twice as many this coming season. In this locality they commence to flower in June and last well into November.

I find that they like an abundance of water during the flowering season and if the ground in which they are planted has not ample drainage they had better be taken up in the fall and replanted early in the spring. If there is no danger of a superabundance of moisture, however, the bulbs can be left in the ground without any damage to them. Although the gladioli will grow in almost any garden soil, they are heavy feeders during their flowering season and quickly respond to a good mulching of well rotted manure, which should be applied once during the year.

The trouble with this flower has been that we had too large a percentage of poorly grown and off-colored blooms. With this new race of gladioli, if this year's demand is any criterion, there should be no trouble to make them one of our best paying crops. Bunches of one variety sell much better than mixed lots and I have noticed that there are about ten varieties in my collection of twenty-five that seem to be especially attractive to the public. The small white, early-flowered gladiolus, The Bride, has always been one of our best selling blooms and becomes especially valuable during Decoration week. Many thousands of these can be grown on a small space and they respond especially well to applications of liquid manure applied two or three times during their growing season. G.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Business is gradually getting better and as it nears Thanksgiving prices are stiffening somewhat. The weather is very favorable for an abundance of flowers and the chances are that there will be an over-supply next week. The yellow mums were cut closely for the California-Stanford foot ball contest last Saturday and many thousands were disposed of to the sympathizers for the Berkeley team. The weather still continues most favorable for mums and although the prices have been better for the last week, there is no shortage of flowers. Indoor flowers are bringing from $1 to $2.50 per dozen. Mrs. Jerome Jones is the best white offered and Bonnaffon the best of the yellows. Roses are in fair supply and Beauties are somewhat more plentiful. Roman hyacinths have made their appearance. They sell at three dozen for a dollar. Carnations are still selling at the same prices they did for the past month.

Various Notes.

The Cox Seed Co. has received a large consignment of rhododendrons from Belgium. They arrived in splendid shape.

Several enterprising hucksters did a very thriving business with yellow mums on the day of the big foot ball event at Berkeley. They purchased heavily of yellow mums at the rate of about 50 cents per dozen and had no difficulty in selling them at 25 to 50 cents each. It was estimated that not less than 50,000 flowers were displayed at the game.

John Pouyal is receiving some extra fine Estelle carnations from J. P. McDonell, of Alden.

Domoto Bros. have just received a large importation of tree peonies from Japan. They will import very largely for the coming season. G.

CHARLESTON, W. VA.—The Charleston Cut Flower & Plant Co. has been organized with S. A. Gregg secretary and treasurer and H. F. Winter manager, the former having been until recently with J. W. Alexander. On November 19 they opened their store at 816 Quarrier street and gave away small palms as souvenirs. It was a good advertisement.

DENVER.

Among the Growers.

A recent visit to the various growers' establishments shows that everything is in pretty good shape for the coming winter. At the Mud Lake establishment, of which Ben Boldt is proprietor, the plant stock for Christmas is exceptionally good. Poinsettias from the California stock of last year are equal to their progenitors, which were at the highest state of perfection and proved quite profitable. In a house of this plant I noticed a large batch of them grown in 6 and 7-inch pots that were carrying three to six leaders or heads, which had not lost any of their vigor by having been pinched back twice during the growing season. Those plants were struck in mid-winter, which enables the grower to produce, under this system of cutting, a more attractive plant than the single stem. Mr. Boldt's pans of poinsettias are more promising, if anything, and bid fair to be more attractive than last year. He has interspersed among the large plants a late propagation of dwarf stock which fills up the naked space between the stems and also covers the surface of the pans. Lilium Harrisii and speciosum in varieties are being forced for Christmas trade. The Harrisii are strong and healthy, no sign of disease and without the loss of a single plant in a batch of several hundred.

Prominent among the potted stuff at the Park Floral Company's is a house each of cylamen, Begonia Lorraine and one of poinsettias. Cyclamen are a hobby of the foreman, Mr. Sked, who for several years has given a close study to cross breeding and culture, the results of which have been many new colors of peculiar formation and large size. Lorraines will be of a more profitable character than last year, as they will not be so far advanced and will carry more flowers at the holiday time. Poinsettias will be up to their usual character—dark in foliage and strong in bract formation. A large part of this stock is grown in pans and finds a more profitable market than the single-stemmed ones. In fact, the culture of the begonia and cyclamen, as well as the poinsettia, when grown in pans from their earlier stage of existence, gives more satisfaction to all concerned than when transformed at a later date from large pots to pans and then offered for sale. This firm also grows a quantity of Primula obconica and Sinensis in pans for holiday trade.

The Colfax Avenue Floral Company is also a large grower of the poinsettia and have had a house full of very creditable stock. This firm also grows miscellaneous potted stuff extensively for Christmas trade.

I notice most of the azalea growers are importing a better character of plants than heretofore, so prices will probably go up on them at Christmas. Perle, Mardner and Van der Cruyssen have been put into a gentle heat and will be brought on gradually and be in better conditon for marketing than if forced out quickly. Great Divide.

THE LITTLE WHITE FLY.

Please tell me how to rid my fuchsias of the small, white fly. I have dipped the plants in warm water, temperature of 110 to 120 degrees, but it did little good. I use tobacco dust freely. Please tell me what to do to clean them out.

W. H. F.

We have so far escaped this little pest, but have seen it in all its glory at some neighbor's not many miles away. It may have its favorite food plants but they will go for almost any plant when they get numerous in a house. Tobacco seems useless in any form. We believe there is only one method to exterminate these creatures, viz., hydrocyanic acid gas. Now it happens that Mr. Croydon, under the vegetable department in a recent REVIEW, has given the identical formula that we have been using for the past two or three years and which he truly says will destroy all kinds of aphis and this white fly, in fact anything that has lungs. It is absolutely harmless to the plants if carefully handled. It is simply this: One pint sulphuric acid, one pint water and two and a half ounces of cyanide. This quantity for 2,000 cubic feet of air space. For other particulars read Mr. Croydon on page 1258, November 10.

Chrysanthemums! Stock Plants!

The new Wells-Pockett set of the best of this season's introductions in strong plants. All sorts, each 20 cents; per dozen, $2.00.

These include all the best and latest introductions, and are true to name. These new acquisitions have proven successful in the crysanthemum line, and should be grown very extensively next season.

Madame Paul Sahut—a new early white that will take the place of Estelle and Polly Rose in the extra earlies. It is a decided acquisition in the early whites. Good stem and foliage, and an all-around good white. One of the very best yet introduced. Stem three feet; flowers as good as the best Robinson, and two weeks earlier. 25 cents each. $2.50 per dozen. We can supply this in quantity.

Good sorts, including Alice Byron, Ida Barwood, Madame Diedericbs, Guy Hamilton, Golden Age, Mrs. Buckbee, and others, all extra good, including Carrie, an extra early yellow in bloom September 15th, 15 cents each; $1.50 per dozen.

The old standard sorts, such as Golden Wedding, Silver Wedding, Appleton, Lavender Queen, White and Yellow Jones, Estelle, Polly Rose, Henderson, Robinson, etc., 10 cents each. 75 cents per dozen.

Have these sorts in quantity. Can make prompt shipments.

THE LITTLE WHITE FLY.

Please tell me how to rid my fuchsias of the small, white fly. I have dipped the plants in warm water, temperature of 110 to 120 degrees, but it did little good. I use tobacco dust freely. Please tell me what to do to clean them out.

W. H. F.

We have so far escaped this little pest, but have seen it in all its glory at some neighbor's not many miles away. It may have its favorite food plants but they will go for almost any plant when they get numerous in a house. Tobacco seems useless in any form. We believe there is only one method to exterminate these creatures, viz., hydrocyanic acid gas. Now it happens that Mr. Croydon, under the vegetable department in a recent REVIEW, has given the identical formula that we have been using for the past two or three years and which he truly says will destroy all kinds of aphis and this white fly, in fact anything that has lungs. It is absolutely harmless to the plants if carefully handled. It is simply this: One pint sulphuric acid, one pint water and two and a half ounces of cyanide. This quantity for 2,000 cubic feet of air space. For other particulars read Mr. Croydon on page 1258, November 10.

Chrysanthemums! Stock Plants!

The new Wells-Pockett set of the best of this season's introductions in strong plants. All sorts, each 20 cents; per dozen, $2.00.

These include all the best and latest introductions, and are true to name. These new acquisitions have proven successful in the crysanthemum line, and should be grown very extensively next season.

Madame Paul Sahut—a new early white that will take the place of Estelle and Polly Rose in the extra earlies. It is a decided acquisition in the early whites. Good stem and foliage, and an all-around good white. One of the very best yet introduced. Stem three feet; flowers as good as the best Robinson, and two weeks earlier. 25 cents each, $2.50 per dozen. We can supply this in quantity.

Good sorts, including Alice Byron, Ida Barwood, Madame Diederichs, Guy Hamilton, Golden Age, Mrs. Buckbee, and others, all extra good, including Carrie, an extra early yellow in bloom September 15th, 15 cents each; $1.50 per dozen.

The old standard sorts, such as Golden Wedding, Silver Wedding, Appleton, Lavender Queen, White and Yellow Jones, Estelle, Polly Rose, Henderson, Robinson, etc., 10 cents each. 75 cents per dozen.

Have these sorts in quantity. Can make prompt shipments.

Satisfaction guaranteed on all orders. Cash, please.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

On the whole business has been much more satisfactory the past week. While there have not been many large orders, still the volume of smaller trade has more than made up the difference. It is a cause for remark that there are no debutantes this year, while last season the debutante affairs were the principal feature of the season.

Various Notes.

The trade extends sympathy to Mrs. E. A. Williams in the loss of her father, Capt. Samuel M. Duval, who was in his seventy-third year. While he has been connected with Common Pleas court for twenty years, still his interest in his daughter's business has associated him with the trade, by whom he was well liked for his kind, lovable and friendly disposition. Capt. Duval was born in this city and served all through the civil war. Few men had more friends than he.

Another cut flower store is announced for the Bloomfield section. Joe Dick, who has been working for L. I. Neff, will now venture for himself. As he was raised in that immediate vicinity he has the advantage of being acquainted and we wish him success.

Jarves Smith and Miss Rowan were married last Tuesday. They left for a trip east and south. The best wishes of all followed them. I almost believe matrimony is a disease and when it breaks out one does not know where it will stop. Chas. Godwin left Monday to bring back a bride after Thanksgiving. Who's next?

It looked last week as if all the wholesalers from Philadelphia had fallen into this city at once. There were three of them here and they were shaking things up for Thanksgiving orders.

Patrick Maier has been consigning the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. some very fine Harrisii, Romans and Paper Whites.

P. J. Demas, of the Florists' Exchange, is in Chicago this week.

CLOSING A SYSTEM.

We have a hot water heating plant, down hill system. The highest point is right above the boiler. Just there we have three 4-inch open pipes reaching five feet above the flows. In firing slowly the returns get warm. When it comes to firing up in a hurry the water boils out of these pipes before the returns have time to get warm. We cannot keep the houses warm enough in zero weather on account of this boiling over. Every time this happens we have to stop firing for half an hour and in the meantime the temperature goes down. Can we do away with those air pipes and replace them by an air cock without running any danger? What would happen if we did? The pipes have a good fall all the way down to the boiler. The expansion tank, the bottom of which is on the same level as the highest point of the flows, communicates with the bottom of the boiler. We know that the boiler might be one size larger, but as our lease expires in a couple of years, we don't feel like going in heavy expenses.

F. B. C.

The open pipes can be closed with safety and no opening left more than an ordinary air vent, a pet cock, to draw off any air which might accumulate at this point and interfere with the circulation, if an ample expansion tank is provided. This should be connected with the main return near the boiler by a pipe of ample size, 1-inch for a boiler with a capacity sufficient to heat two houses 20x100 feet. The expansion tank should hold at least fifty gallons, so that there will always be enough water in the tank to return to the system all that can be forced into the tank by the heaviest firing. The closed system will admit of raising the temperature of the water to a higher point than is possible with an open system. If the piping will stand the increased pressure the temperature can be still more increased by elevating the expansion tank. In any case I should place the expansion tank from six to ten feet above the highest point in the system.

Are all flower growers liars?

SURELY this cannot be true; well, we have over 100 growers who have written us, a large majority without request, their opinions; we publish a few of these letters in the columns of this paper; see on pages 40-41-51-56, what they say about the FUMIGATING KIND TOBACCO POWDER. All began with a five-pound trial bag at our expense, which gave them an opportunity without cost to prove its GOODNESS and our assertion that it was the most effective, cleanest and quickest, as well as cheapest (10 cents per 100-foot house) article to fumigate with, and that all kinds of aphis can be killed in one night. Let us send you a five-pound trial bag by express, it will cost you nothing but the express charges on it, and be convinced that what your brother growers say of it is true. Our booklet tells of it; we mail it on request.

DRAUGHT.

In these days of brisk competition, when each year sees a number of new establishments erected in our larger cities, with the cost of fuel increasing and bills pouring in from every direction, the florist of today racks his brain to find means to cut down expense and his thoughts center on his heating plant. Can he save anything there? Now, in my journeys through different establishments, I notice that all the boilers are placed in the center of the range of houses, or if not there, at least enclosed and virtually a part of the establishment. Now the question is this: When the heating plant is on the inside, in order to get draught, does it use the warm air of the greenhouse, thereby increasing the chances for disease, receiving the supply of fresh air through seams in walls or cracks in the glass, necessitating increased firing? Or having the boiler on the outside, getting the draught from the outer air, does it increase the amount of coal used by receiving its draught from the cold air? This seems perhaps to be a very simple question, but as I said before, the question of fuel enters largely into the calculation of the up-to-date florist and I would like very much to hear from some of my brother florists on this question. F. A. B.

OCEANIC, N. J.—The assistant gardeners challenged the head gardeners to bowl and defeated them in two games last week. Twenty-eight players participated and P. Mulvihil, of the assistants, distinguished himself by making 222 in the first game.

PIPING FOR STEAM.

I have two connected houses, one 19x75, the other 15x75, eleven feet to ridge, side walls seven feet high with forty-two inches glass in south wall and gables glass. I want to pipe these houses for steam to maintain 55 to 60 degrees. Our temperature outdoors seldom goes as low as 24 degrees below zero. I intend to grow carnations and general stock. M. C.

A good plan to carry out in piping your houses would be as follows: Carry a 2-inch riser under the ridge of each house from the boiler to the most distant end of the house, giving the pipe a slight downward grade in that direction. From each of these risers take off pipes to supply manifolds under the benches or upon the side walls, so constructed as to make use of twenty lines of 1¼-inch pipe the length of the houses. Valves should be placed in a number of these 1¼-inch pipes near the manifold entered by the flow pipe. At the opposite end of the same pipe and nearest the boiler a swing check valve should be placed. This will allow of placing as many pipes as are valved out of commission during warm or mild weather and will at the same time provide a reserve for severe weather. The size and number of pipes stated will be ample for the coldest weather if a steam pressure of five pounds is maintained. The location of the pipes is to some extent a matter of convenience, but with such crops as roses it is necessary that some of the pipes be placed under the benches. This is not so essential with carnations, yet most growers use the system of placing the pipes under the benches. It is more convenient in most cases and is an advantage with most forcing and bedding plants. L. C. C.

Superior Boilers Are Good Boilers.

Read what our customers say about them:

South Bend, Ind., April 4, 1904.

"Superior to any Hot Water Boiler we have ever used. You certainly have placed the right name to your Boilers; no effort at all to keep the temperature at desired points when zero weather comes. Night after night the past severe winter weather gave your Boiler a good test. We are more than pleased with the Superior Boiler." Yours truly, Treanor & Rettic.

USE "BURNHAM" BOILERS and REDUCE YOUR COAL BILL

YOU WANT PROFITS which continue to grow. The reasons why "BURNHAM" BOILERS will save coal for you is that there is a large combustion chamber, also a large active fire surface for each square foot of grate. They heat easily, quickly, efficiently. It takes but a short time to set up one of these boilers.

PLANTS FOR FORCING.

AZALEAS FOR EASTER.

On account of Easter this year coming so very late (April 23) a season of the year when our regular spring shipmends demand our full attention, we have decided not to carry a supply of Azaleas until then, but to close out our entire stock as quickly as possible, therefore customers who usually procure their supplies late in the spring will do well to cover their needs at once. The principal sorts now in stock are Mme. Van der Cruyssen and Bernhardt Andreas Alba, the two best late flowering sorts of their color. These two varieties can be furnished in any proportion desired, but the selection of other varieties must be left to us.

We will still supply early orders at import prices.

12 to 14-in. crowns	$ 6.00 per doz.;	$ 45.00 per 100
14 to 16-in. crowns	7.00 per doz.;	55 00 per 100

Gracilis Lemoinei	Per doz, 1.00; per 100, 8.00

AZALEA MOLLIS.

For early and late forcing Azalea Mollis is rapidly gaining favor; easily forced at a minimum cost for heat and labor, they are profitable stock for the retailer to handle. We are supplying at present an unusually fine grade of plants, 15 to 18 inches high, and covered with flower buds, $4.50 per doz.; $35.00 per 100.

FORCING LILACS.

A fine lot of pot grown plants, well set with buds and in prime condition for forcing, $6.00 per doz.; $45 00 per 100.

RHODODENDRONS FOR FORCING.

These are being used more extensively every season, and this year, with Easter at such a very late date, should prove especially acceptable, as they can be retarded much easier than Azaleas, and at the same time may be flowered at just the right moment at a minimum cost. We are carrying an extra large stock of bushy well shaped plants, 16 to 18 inches high, covered with buds, $9.00 per doz.; $70.00 per 100. Larger plants, 20 to 24 inches high, fine specimens, $11.00 per doz.; $90.00 per 100.

Chrysanthemum Stock Plants

NOW, when the merits of the different varieties are still fresh in your mind, is the time to think of your planting for another year. A few stock plants bought now will give you all the cuttings you will need later on, perhaps at a time when the particular variety you want may be hard to get. The plants we offer are from solid benches, consequently heavy and will give a great amount of cuttings. If upon arrival they are not satisfactory they may be returned at our expense.

Wm. Duckham, Dr. Enguehard, S. T. Wright, Ben Wells, W. R. Church, General Hutton, John Burton, Helen Frick, Mrs. Nathan Smith, F. A. Cobbold, Henry Barnes, 20c each; $2.00 per doz.

Mrs. T. W. Pockett, Nellie Pockett, F. S. Vallis, Princess, Mildred Ware, Mrs. Thirkell, 15c each; $1.50 per doz.

Golden Wedding, Monrovia, Timothy Eaton, Robinson, Bonnaffon, Glory Pacific, Halliday, Yellow Jerome Jones, Pink and White Ivory, Midge, G. S. Kalb, Black Hawk, Childs, Lincoln, Minerva, Adula, Bloodgood, Mutual Friend, Perrin, Maud Dean, Nagoya, Shrimpton, Golden Trophy and other standard varieties, 5c each; 50c per doz.; $3.50 per 100. Quotations on larger lots.

ROOTED CUTTINGS OF ALL THE ABOVE VARIETIES LATER ON. WRITE NOW.

SWEET PEAS

Best Winter and Spring Blooming Varieties. Emily Henderson, white; Countess of Radnor, lavender; Katherine Tracy, light pink; Salopian, red; 4-in. pots, strong plants, 10 inches high, 50c per doz; $3.50 per 100. JUST THE THING TO TAKE THE PLACE OF CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

We have about 300 Clumps of the old-fashioned TALL GROWING CANNA, extra large clumps, just as they were dug, each clump will make five divisions, 50c per doz.; $3.50 per 100.

WHAT WE CLAIM FOR OUR NEW RED ROSE

RICHMOND

That It is the Best Red Forcing Variety yet Produced.

1st. It is of strong and rapid growth, more vigorous than any other forcing variety in commerce.

2nd. It comes to perfection without special care or culture and can be grown in the same soil and temperature and with the same treatment given to Bride and Maid.

3rd. It ships perfectly, as it can be cut very tight and develops as well off as on the bush.

4th. Has very near the same tone of color as Liberty, with more scarlet and does not blue with age.

5th. This variety is nearly a pure tea, being seeded from LADY BATTERSEA, fertilized by LIBERTY, and as a result has shown no tendency toward going dormant in mid-winter, at which time the variety is at its very best.

6th. Produces freely throughout the year, long pointed buds on tall straight stems with elegant dark foliage.

7th. Is as easy to root, and grafts as readily as Bride or Maid.

8th. Has as delicious a fragrance as American Beauty.

Was awarded the silver cup at the World's Fair for best seedling rose and a special silver cup at Chicago for best seedling. Prices, own root—100 plants for $30; 250 for $70; 1000 for $250. 500 at 1000 rate.

ROSALIND ORR ENGLISH

OUR PINK SEEDLING from Mme. Chatenay is unapproached in color; the bud is pointed, quite full, borne on long slender stems, beautifully set with foliage, free in growth and bloom; the flower is very beautiful from its earliest bud form till fully expanded. Was awarded certificate of merit at the Chicago Show; $25.00 per 100, $200 per 1000. Both these Varieties are easy to propagate and easy to grow. Come and see them at home.

CARNATIONS

The best big-flowered, general-purpose Scarlet Carnation now before the trade is CARDINAL, color superb, texture perfect, in vigorous health and of splendid habit. Also FIANCEE and F. BURKI. All three at $12.00 per hundred, $100 per thousand.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Among the new varieties which we had on trial for this year are some magnificent sorts, nine of which have been awarded certificates, viz.: Clementine Touset, the big early white Chadwick, October 8; Dr. Galloway, mid-season incurving white; Mlle. Jeannie Nonin, very late white, winner of the Sweepstakes and Silver Cup at Chicago as best New Mum of the year. These three sorts are marvelously fine commercial varieties in pure white, NONIN probably ranking as the finest Mum extant, regardless of date of blooming. Besides these are: Reveil de Begles, early commercial yellow; Roi d' Italie, early commercial yellow; Anna Debono, Mme. E. Lemoine, Prefet Boncourt, Souv. d' Calvat Pere, four grand exhibition whites. Besides these we have: The Wells-Pockett Set for 1905; The Australians of the year; The Marquis of Pins Set, M. Calvat's Fine Sorts, the best of Nonin's, Bruant's and Rozain's.

All at 50c each; $5.00 per doz.; $35.00 per 100, except Mrs. Wm. Duckham, which is 75c each; $7.50 per doz.; $50.00 per 100

NOTES ON NOVELTIES.

The best novelty of the year, in my humble opinion, is Mrs. W. Duckham, the winner of the C. S. A. silver cup. As it was shown at Boston, no one had anything but praise for it, and as a tribute to its keeping qualities I may say that several flowers of this variety that were sent from England in the Wells exhibit traveled in perfect condition and were as fresh on the last day of the show as they were on the first, and this after being cut October 22, traveling 3,000 miles and being kept until November 3 before being exhibited. It is a great record and I predict as large a measure of popularity for this variety as W. Duckham, last year's cup winner, is now enjoying. The color of Mrs. W. Duckham is a lovely yellow, a little deeper than Cheltoni, which variety it resembles somewhat in appearance. When the buds are first opening a band of red shows along the edge of the petals, but by the time the flower is developed this color has faded, leaving a brilliant yellow that catches every eye.

Another yellow that has shown up very well is Merstham Yellow. This variety is valuable for its earliness, being this year fully finished by October 1, and showing a mid-season size and finish. It is a money maker for the commercial grower if he will only plant it early enough to give it a chance. This variety also came over from England in splendid condition, and was highly praised at Boston.

Emily Mileham is the best white of the new ones. It is very graceful in contour, full to the center and has a grand stem and foliage. It has kept very dwarf, not running over three feet in height, and is an ideal variety for a 6-inch pot. There are larger whites but none in my opinion so finely finished and I commend this variety to every lover of an artistic flower. Mrs. A. J. Miller is the largest of the new things, but its color is not specially attractive, only as a variety in a class for twenty-five varieties. There its immense size makes it valuable and as an exhibition flower it will be largely grown. Brick red is the nearest approach to describing its color. Late buds show much more brilliant coloring but the flower is much smaller.

J. H. Doyle shows a flower much like the preceding variety, but brighter in color. For the exhibitor this is grand, but the commercial grower will not take kindly to it, for owing to its massive growth, it takes up lots of room in the bench.

BRIAN BORU.

MUMS FOR POTS.

John Jones, gardener at the Phipps Conservatories, Schenley park, Pittsburg, has won wide fame for the excellence of the chrysanthemum plants which he grows for conservatory decoration. He supplies the following list of the best varieties for pot plants:

White: Niveus, Edith Smith, Nellie Pockett, Timothy Eaton, Belle of Castlewood, Miss Gladys Vanderbilt.

Pink: Viviand-Morel, A. J. Balfour, Maud Dean, William Simpson, Mrs. Higinbotham, Mrs. E. O. Wolcott.

Red: Dazzler, Black Hawk.

Yellow: Golden Wedding, Mrs. Elmer D. Smith, Sunstone, Miss Georgienne Bramhall, Miss M. M. Johnson, Golden Age.

Bronze: Brutus, Nyanza, Lord Hopetoun, S. T. Wright.

ROSES.

Propagating Young Stock.

Assuming that the house and benches are in readiness to receive the sand or other material to be used as a propagating medium, it should be transferred to the house and spread on the benches to the depth of five inches. It should then be well moistened and beaten firm so that it forms a solid mass. This will reduce the depth to about four inches. Then with a common butcher-knife make a cut across the bench. This cut should reach in depth to about the middle of the material, say two inches from the surface. By keeping the cut of a uniform depth all the heels of the cuttings will be exposed to the same temperature and moisture and tend to root formation in about the same period of time.

The cuttings should be inserted with as little delay as possible after being made so that the wound may not become too dry, as if they are allowed to become dry it greatly retards the process of root formation.

The cuttings should be placed in the sand about one inch apart for Brides, Meteors and other varieties of about the same habit of growth. Beauties require from two to two and one-half inches. The material should then be pressed firmly along the line and a parallel cut made for the next line of cuttings.

After a yard or two of the bench has been filled in this manner they should be thoroughly but gently watered, taking care not to displace any of the cuttings. If the weather is bright use the shading at once and on all necessary occasions for the first two weeks, by which time the callus will have formed and they may be able to stand a little more exposure.

The temperature of the sand should be about 60 or 62 degrees and that of the house about 50 degrees.

Chrysanthemum Emily Mileham.

I am aware that many growers subject their cuttings to a much higher temperature than this with apparently good results and get their batches out of the sand in a shorter time, which counts for a good deal where large quantities of young stock are required and propagating room scarce, but I am convinced that the slower method has the merit of producing stock with a better constitution and which when benched usually outstrip those of a softer growth.

It is essential to success to use a keen-edged knife to make a clean, short cut, as the smaller and cleaner the wound so much quicker will the callus form and the arrangement of the young roots will be more perfect.

The propagating medium should never be allowed to become dry but should at all times contain sufficient moisture to prevent wilting of the leaves and shrinking of the bark.

RIBES.

CARNATIONS

SELECTING SEEDLINGS.

The selection of the seedlings you expect to keep for further trial is as important as any part of the whole operation. You want to be sure to keep all those that are likely to be good and at the same time you do not want to get your place filled up with a lot of rubbish that will never bring you a dollar in return. Every seedling raiser knows only too well that many times he has had to shut his eyes and pull up a variety in which he had stored great hope but which, with all his care and good treatment, refuses to be anything but a second or third rate sort, not good enough to disseminate and yet almost too good to discard. A mistake made frequently by beginners is to put too much faith in the first blooms that appear on the plants; these blooms are very apt to mislead one. When the plants are in the field we merely use these first blooms as a means for selecting the plants we bring in, but we would not think of propagating a variety until we have seen a bloom inside about midwinter. Then is when you can judge as to the merits of a seedling.

Don't take in a plant that made a poor growth or has a poor habit; it will not improve in the future. Don't take in a plant that bursts the calyx; a variety that bursts in the fall will surely burst in the winter. Don't take in a plant that throws a weak stem in the field; it will be weaker inside. Don't be influenced too much by the color of the bloom in the field; the colors will seldom come just the same inside; sometimes they improve and sometimes just the reverse. Don't think that just because you have a fine, large, full bloom outside it is any cause for great elation; nine times out of ten inside it will burst or the stem will not hold it up or it will be a shy bloomer.

The seedling raiser must be a man who is not easily unbalanced. He must be always ready to meet success with modesty or disappointment with fortitude. The plants which promise the most in the field are liable to prove the poorest inside, and we know of cases where a plant looked only very ordinary outside and it proved one of the best inside. In fact, we have seen these same reverses even after one or two years' trial. We bring in every plant that has made a fair growth and has made blooms of average size or over, a good stem, a good calyx and good form, regardless of color or fullness unless it be single or inclined to burst. They will show their faults inside when they bloom again, but often they will improve in color and form. Those that are bloomed in pots can be judged a little better, but even these we like to see bloom the second time before propagating from them, especially if the first bloom came early in the fall. They will vary a great deal, mostly in stem and calyx, however.

As soon as a plant blooms and we decide to keep it we plant it in the bed where it can make a strong growth and a good lot of cuttings in case it proves worthy of a second years' trial. The second year you can tell more about the habit and productiveness of the variety. It is needless to say that the color should be pleasing at least and you will find that the solid colors are most in demand. If you succeed in getting a variety that grows upright, blooms early, with a good, strong stem, a 3-inch bloom, with a good calyx, pleasing color and good substance and fifteen to twenty blooms to the plant in a season, then you can call yourself fortunate. Few varieties have all these qualities combined. After receiving a certificate of merit from the American Carnation Society and showing it liberally you will have no trouble in selling all you can supply. The growers of the land are looking for that kind of variety.

A. F. J. BAUR.

SOIL FOR CARNATIONS.

I am sending a sample of the soil I am using for my carnations. There must be something the matter with it, as the plants make only a spindling growth. I can get no sods here, only from crab grass. I also send a sample of the subsoil, a pebbly red clay. Would it be better, or could the two be mixed with a fertilizer? J. T.

It would be very surprising if you succeeded in getting anything but a spindly weak growth on your carnations in the compost you have them growing in. It seems to consist mostly of sand and leafmold and there is no body to it. The other sample is not a bit better than what you are using. Try to find soil which is more of a loamy nature. A heavy clay soil would be far better than what you are using. Carnations like a sandy loam, a soil that has a good body and yet enough sand so that it will crumble readily when it dries out. It does not necessarily have to be sod, but it should be soil that has not been worked too hard. If you can get soil from a field which has been producing good crops you will not go far wrong, however. By mixing in a liberal amount of cow manure you can bring up its fertility. If you are obliged to continue using the same soil you now have I would advise you to mix in cow manure liberally when composting it, but you can never make an ideal carnation soil out of it.

OBITUARY.

R. Will, Minneapolis.

Reinhold Will, of Minneapolis, died November 23 at the age of 62 years. Mr. Will was born in Germany and came to this country in 1873, locating in Henderson, Minn. Ten years later he removed to Minneapolis and established himself as a wholesale florist, later founding the firm of R. Will & Sons, among the largest growers of carnations and violets in the northwest. Of late he had suffered from rheumatism and had planned to spend the winter in the south, but a serious stomach trouble developed, compelling him to remain at home. He was taken to Rochester for an operation, but the case was seen to be hopeless, and he was taken home, managing to live long enough so that the entire family could gather around him in his last moment. The deceased leaves a wife and nine children.

L. Unverzagt, Springfield, Ill.

Louis Unverzagt, of Springfield, Ill., died very suddenly, of pneumouia, November 23, aged 58 years. Mr. Unverzagt was one of the best known florists in Springfield. He was a self-made man. Born in Carlstadt, Germany, he came to this country April 2, 1870, locating in Springfield. Mr. Unverzagt was employed by Governor Matteson two years, when the latter died. He then bought the plants and flowers owned by the governor and engaged in business for himself on the Matteson place. Mr. Unverzagt was successful and year by year extended his business. He was a man of sterling qualities and by his honest dealings made many friends. He leaves a widow.

TROUBLE WITH BULB STOCK.

I planted some of my Easter lilies the first of September and kept the rest of the bulbs in a buggy shed, having no other place to put them, and planted them September 22, when I noticed that the bulbs were getting damaged. I had all of them under the middle bench of a carnation house to start them, then put them on the bench after they were three inches high. I planted the jonquils in October and had them in the basement, which probably is not cool enough. In December they were growing through the sand, which was about four inches deep over the boxes. Then I took them in the greenhouse but they have not given a single bloom and no sign of any. What can be the reason?

I had Paper White, Von Sion and hyacinths in that same basement and they gave good flowers, only they started growing sooner than wanted. Now if I should put six inches of sand over them instead of three or four inches would it be better to retard them? The rest I planted outside in flats and laid the boxes on boards, covered them with leaves, then three inches of soil and about six inches of manure, which I was very careful would not ferment. Then later, as the season advanced, I increased the amount of manure, little by little to about two feet and a half. Those that I took out for Easter were very poor. The Murillo tulips were not more than half size. The Von Sion and hyacinths were short-stemmed and of poor quality. Some of the bulbs in some of the boxes would not grow at all while the other part of the box would be doing well. I would also ask you to let me know if Von Sion does well outdoors, in boxes to be taken in later in the greenhouse.

Chrysanthemum Mrs. A. J. Miller.

First, it seems L. A. G. is talking about his Easter lilies of this season, while his complaint of the other bulbs is evidently his experience of last fall and winter. If the lilies are strong and well rooted they are all right and should be forced for mid-winter. As Easter is very late, they would have to be kept very cool to retard them for that date. Start your lilies in a cold frame and not under a bench.

Most likely your basement was too warm for the jonquils, but more likely you kept the soil in the flats too dry. Put all your bulbs outdoors and cover with three inches of light soil or tanbark. Those you are going to bring into force by the middle of November will need no other covering and those to be left out later will need no more than six inches of leaves or manure at any time. Two feet or more of stable manure covering these bulbs is ridiculous. They are all hardy except the Paper White and polyanthus narcissi, which should not be frozen.

If your basement is warm, or even 40 degrees, no amount of sand will retard them. They will keep growing, be long, attenuated stems and of little value. The Von Sion narcissus is a splendid bulb for beds or borders, but not often planted commercially, because there is such an abundance of the daffodils in every old woman's garden.

If you can't possibly put up a cold frame for your Paper White narcissi and French Roman hyacinths you might use your basement, yet it's a poor place for them. I am inclined to think that you have kept all your bulbs too dry and that they made little roots and those that had the covering of two and a half feet of manure were smothered.

Murillo is one of the easiest and surest tulips to have in flower after March 1 and in all the years we have been forcing bulbs we never remember having a failure with this queen of tulips. Album Neapolitanum cover only lightly and protect from severe freezing. When well rooted remove to greenhouse.

HELPING NATURE.

I desire to call attention through the Review to the excellent missionary work being done in the cause of floral decoration and artistic neatness by the Michigan Central railroad, through the embellishment of the grounds around its stations and by the introduction of flowers as an important factor in providing for the comfort and enjoyment of its many patrons. The liberal spirit manifested in this beautifying of the road and the thorough manner in which it has been carried into effect merit more than a passing word of recognition from every lover of flowers. The effect of the good example shown ought of itself to give a strong impetus to floral matters in the region through which the Michigan Central road runs.

I speak more especially of the portion of the line between Chicago and Detroit as observed on a recent trip. For some years past the company has been diligenty improving the scenic beauty of this part of its line, for which nature had already done much. Every station, however small, has its bouquet of color in the summer and the larger places have decorations which, with the tasteful modern architecture of the buildings, makes the road like a park from one end to the other. Much of the planting which has been done consists of shrubs and shade trees for permanent effect and is, on this account, particularly valuable as an object lesson for the surrounding country. The plants needed for the station grounds and the cut flowers for distribution to passengers are provided from the greenhouses of the road at Niles and Ypsilanti, under the direction of John Gipner. The larger houses at Niles consist of a conservatory, steel framed, with two wings, one seventy and the other thirty feet long, roof twenty feet from the floor. At the south end, facing the track, is a palm-house thirty feet high. The heating is by boilers in the basement of the main building. In the construction 10,000 feet of glass were employed. The latest and best appliances are provided and an extensive variety of plants are represented. Over half a million of free bouquets are distributed yearly to lady patrons of the Michigan Central.

Here at least is a great corporation which not only has a soul but a strong sense of beauty as well and I am glad to see that its good example is being followed by other railroads.

There is one thing more which we would be happy to see this road and others take up for the complete beautifying of their rights of way, and that is the establishment of desirable native shrubs, trees and hardy perennials along their tracks between stations. Many of these plants are in great danger of speedy extermination from various causes and unless protected will soon be lost to our flora. Nowhere in the country can they be so efficiently protected as along the railroad tracks. John Higgins.

CRINUMS IN FLORIDA.

Crinums belong to the amaryllidaceæ and are found chiefly in tropical regions. They are very handsome bulbous plants, with large flowers, mostly white or pink and white. Of the 100 or so varieties I doubt if more than thirty are grown in the United States and but one is native, C. Americanum, which is found in the Florida swamps, often growing right in the water. Its flowers are pure white, with narrow petals and very sweet scented. Of the various crinums grown in Florida C. Kirkii (Zeylanicum) is by far the commonest; you find it in every garden, usually called the milk and wine lily. It grows anywhere, in any kind of soil and even flourishes in abandoned gardens. It has twelve to twenty or more large white flowers to an umbel, with broad petals and a purple stripe on the outside of each petal, the scape being two feet high. The bulbs in time grow to a large size, sometimes to five inches diamter. They are cheap enough, as 3-inch bulbs can be bought for $3 per hundred.

The two giants of the family are C. augustum and pedunculatum. These often stand six feet high, the bulbs being huge and stump-like. C. augustum has pink flowers, twenty to thirty to an umbel. The petals are six to eight inches long and rather narrow. A fully expanded umbel is often over two feet across. C. pedunculatum is very similar, only the flowers are pure white and the leaves grow more upright.

Crinums are a mixed-up family and you can buy the same variety under half a dozen different names. Other varieties grown in Florida are erubescens, scabrum, fimbriatulum, campanulatum, crassifolium, giganteum, Virginicum, Moorei, Capense rosea and Capense alba, etc. Erubescens has solid pink flowers. Giganteum is giant only in name, as it is not a large growing kind. Its flowers are pure white, with a greenish throat and extra wide petals. Capense alba and rosea are often sold as Amaryllis longiflora; they stand the most cold. Of Moorei there are several varieties. One is a pure white, another a pink shading to white, and another white with a pink stripe. Virginicum is an English hybrid; it has white flowers, six to seven inches across; broad petals, with a faint pink stripe, and a scape sometimes four feet high. The flowers open in the evening and are especially sweet scented.

Crinums are increased by offsets and seeds. Some, like Americanum and Kirkii, produce seeds very freely; others like augustum, produce no seeds at all, and many of the hybrids, like fimbriatulum and Virginicum, are sterile or nearly so. The sterile varieties usually increase quicker by offsets than the fertile ones, though augustum is very slow, much slower than pedunculatum, which sets plenty of seeds. From seed a crinum will bloom in about three years. The seeds are large and fleshy. Hybridizing is very easily done, and many pleasing variations may be obtained.

Crinums are not particular as to soil. Here they often grow in the poorest sand, but rich soil, with plenty of cow manure and as much sun as possible, suits them best. When in full growth they require plenty of water, and manure water may be used with the best results, as they are very heavy feeders. When grown in the north in tubs or pots at least half of the bulb should be above the ground; here in Florida we plant them deep, but that is another story. In winter the bulbs may be dried off and kept in any place free from frost.

AMOS PERRY.

The photograph of Amos Perry, a well known English grower of hardy plants, here reproduced, was taken at his place near London by J. D. Eisele, of the H. A. Dreer Co., in September. A pleasant thought has evidently crossed Mr. Perry's mind and is reflected in one of Mr. Eisele's first attempts at photography.

PRONOUNCING DICTIONARY

COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY FLORISTS' PUBLISHING COMPANY, CHICAGO.

Frequent inquiry as to the correct pronunciation of plant names has led us to compile the following list of names, selecting those in most common use in the trade, and including botanical terms most frequently met with in articles upon plant culture.

As many names of plants are derived from Greek roots, we feel sure the following brief list of Greek root words, covering only those most readily recognized in names in common use, will be helpful.

Ampelos—A vine.
Anthemon—A flower.
Anthera—An anther.
Argyros—Silver.
Bios—Life.
Botrys—A cluster.
Brachys—Short.
Calos—Beautiful.
Cephale—A head.
Chamæ—Dwarf.
Chlamys—A cloak.
Chloros—Green.
Chroma—Color.
Chrysos—Gold.
Codon—A bell.
Cyanos—Dark blue.
Cyathos—A cup.
Dactylos—A finger.
Deca—Ten.
Derma—Skin.
Didymos—Twin.
Dolichos—Long.
Dory—A spear.
Dracon—A dragon.
Echinos—A hedgehog.
Erythros—Red.
Gala—Milk.
Glossa—A tongue.
Glottis—A mouth.
Gonos—Offspring.
Gyne—A woman.
Hedys—Sweet.
Helios—The sun.
Hemera—Day.
Hemi—Half.
Hesperos—Evening.
Hymen—Marriage.
Hyper—Above.
Hypo—Beneath.
Lycos—A wolf.
Macros—Long.
Micros—Little.
Monos—One.
Myrios—Countless.
Nephros—A kidney.
Odontos—A tooth.
Ornithos—A bird.
Oxys—Sharp.
Pachys—Thick.
Pedilon—A shoe.
Peri—Round.
Petalon—A petal.
Philos—Fond.
Phlebos—A vein.
Phyllon—A leaf.
Phyton—A plant.
Platys—Broad.
Pogon—A beard.
Polys—Many.
Podos—A foot.
Pteris—A fern.
Pyros—Fire.
Rhinos—The nose.
Rhiza—A root.
Rhodon—A rose.
Rops—A shrub.
Sciados—An umbrella.
Sideros—Iron.
Siphon—A tube.
Solen—A pipe.
Soros—A heap.
Spira—A coil.
Sporo—A seed.
Stemma—A wreath.
Stichos—A row.
Stoma—The mouth.
Stylos—A column.
Trichos—Hair.

With this help to an understanding of the construction of plant names derived from Greek roots, we will proceed to pronunciation. This is a matter upon which the best authorities are apt to disagree, in spite of the great amount of study that has been devoted to the subject. Though the greater part of our list of plant names has been derived from Greek and Latin, many other languages have been drawn upon, including those spoken by barbarous peoples, and no present day scholar can be positive as to the correct pronunciation of many names.

But all we of the trade desire is to know the pronunciation adopted by the best authorities, that we may have uniformity among ourselves. Our principal authorities in the compilation of this list have been The Century Dictionary and the Pronouncing Dictionary in Nicholson's Dictionary of Gardening. Other dictionaries have been consulted, but the two mentioned have, in practically every case, determined the pronunciation adopted in this list.

Where these two happened to radically disagree, preference has generally been given to the pronunciation adopted by The Century.

It may be well to add that of the two systems presented by Nicholson's Dictionary, we have drawn from the "Old Style." The "New Style" may be of interest to students, but it will never be current in trade circles.

In our list we have used the following

THE THOMPSON PLACE.

There are few establishments of equal size in this country where so few varieties of carnations are grown as at the J. D. Thompson Company's plant at Joliet. The policy here is to select the very best sort for each purpose and then grow it in quantity. The Belle was by all odds the best looking white on the place at the time of a recent visit, surpassing Gov. Wolcott and leaving Lady Bountiful behind, that variety being, while of good growth and a large producer, of too poor petalage early in the season to meet the competition of its companion sort, it and The Belle having both been sent out by Dorner last season. There is a house of Boston Market containing about 8,000 plants which is a beautiful sight. It certainly looks like a great money maker.

In pink but three varieties are grown, Nelson Fisher, Mrs. E. A. Nelson and Lawson, the latter to be dropped next year. In fact, it would have been discarded this season had it not been that stock was short to plant all the houses. The half-house of Lawson is in good shape but it does not stand by comparison with Nelson Fisher as grown in an adjoining house. There is but one light pink which, of course, is Enchantress. This is a variety with which every one is successful.

Estelle is the leading scarlet, eclipsing Flamingo and leaving Adonis far behind. There are benches of Flamingo planted in June and others in August, the first being plants from pots and the second plants from the field. The plants from the field are superior to a marked degree. But the interest in scarlets centers around the variety a half interest in which was purchased last season from C. W. Ward. It has been named Robert Craig. Two benches are planted with this variety, which is not to be sent out to the trade until 1906. Some of the plants are from cuttings taken from sand in January and others from each batch of cuttings all the way along to the end of the propagating season. One can tell the relative date of propagation by the growth the plants have made. All are clean and healthy and very robust, the early stock having attained a size and length of stem beyond that of any other scarlet on the place. The flower is of the first size, of fine shape and good fragrance. One of the notable characteristics of the variety is the number of flowering shoots. The plants of the early propagation had more than fifteen shoots October 10 and some as many as twenty-five, while the crop of bloom was heavy at the middle of October and promises to continue so all through the season. The only crimson variety on the place is Ward's The President, which is very fine. Mrs. M. A. Patten is the only variegated.

Most heavily planted of the new sorts is Gibson Beauty, the light pink which is to be sent out this season. It has a large flower of very good form, the center light pink but much darker than Enchantress and shaded to light in the outer petals. The stem is long and strong. This variety originated with Swan Peterson, in his modern establishment at Gibson City, Ill., and will be disseminated in January jointly by the two firms.

In a house of seedlings under trial there are several good sorts, notably a white of very good size, high center and the petals heavily fringed. This is one of the Peter Fisher seedlings which we look forward to with interest. There is also a light pink and a white sport of Enchantress which promise well.

J. E. Jensen is the grower in charge of this establishment. That he understands his business is apparent from the condition of the stock. There is no variety on the place of which it may not be said that it looks well. Propagation has already begun for next year and the young stock in the sand is rooting well. This year a coarser sand is being used than heretofore and the beneficial effect is very apparent by comparison with a batch of cuttings put in the fine sand formerly used.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

The meeting of this society will be January 25 and 26 instead of January 28 and 29 as given in the premium list and the trade papers, the latter date coming on a Saturday and Sunday.

The secretary must have looked at an old calendar when he gave the dates as January 28 and 29, as the meeting is called for the last Wednesday in January, at Chicago, Ill.

FARQUHAR IN EUROPE.

John K. M. L. Farquhar was the speaker of the evening before the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, October 18. He told of his trip to Europe and referred, in his opening remarks, to the fine reception given to their new lily in England and on the continent, he having taken blooms with him which carried well. From what Harry Veitch and one or two other experts told him, the original Lilium Philippinense, discovered in 1873, had some pink coloring in the flowers and grew six feet tall, while theirs is pure white and much smaller. The speaker gave a very interesting account of some of the leading Dutch bulb farms and their enormous spread. The frugal Dutch, he considered, are coining money out of the business. They are persistently raising prices without just cause. One grower told him that he had cleaned $2,000 per acre from Von Sion narcissus. The increased demand from America was in some measure responsible for this. Americans are now buying better quality bulbs, but the growers said they have no American call for the newer and choicer varieties, as they want cheaper goods.

The number of desirable novelties was not great. A new cornflower-colored Spanish iris and Tritomas excelsa, Ideal and Lemon Queen were very desirable. The nurseries of Messrs. Tubergen & De Graaf were visited and commented on. At Boskoop he noticed that the nurseries were depleted of good stock, that seen being mostly small. Some of the largest and best nurseries have no catalogues, while some of the agents canvassing America with handsome catalogues represent firms without any nursery.

At Ghent, in Belgium, the nurseries where azaleas, dracænas, palms and other stock is grown were referred to. The Brussels Botanic Gardens were very interesting, their method of labeling plants being unique and excellent.

France seemed to be, if anything, the most prosperous country visited. Lemoine's nurseries contained some fine new begonias and deutzias, but no begonia was equal to Gloire de Lorraine. Some fine bedding was seen in the park at Nancy. A great change in style was noted, the natural taking the place of the mosaic. One especially attractive bed was of standard roses with gladioli planted below them, edged with geraniums. A tendency to resort to ribbon bordering was noticed, but usually masses relieved by a few taller plants were used.

Some fine bedding was noted in Hyde park, London. A bed of Musa ensete with Grevillea robusta below and edged with Funkia subcordata variegata was effective. Clumps of sweet peas rising out of violas were used in front of shrubberies to good purpose. A bed of Fuchsia Mrs. Marshall and White Paris daisy and another of golden privet and bronze geraniums, the latter edged with Saxifraga moschata, were good.

At Hampton Court palace the fine avenues of yews were mentioned. The famous grape vine was carrying larger bunches and finer berries than when last seen. Few succulents are now used in the bedding there. One bed containing tuberous begonias, dotted with white swainsona and edged with sweet alyssum looked well. A mixture of Lobelia cardinalis and Abutilon Boule de Neige was pleasing. Chrysanthemum latifolium with blooms six inches across and growing three to five feet high was grand. Calceolaria Burbidgei growing six to seven feet high, with yellow flowers double the size of the ordinary rugosa type, was very effective. The flowers are colored like a Montressor tulip and the plant can be had in bloom for Christmas in pots. Grafted plants of Liberty rose were very fine outdoors.

There is a tendency in Great Britain to grow fewer collections of stove and greenhouse plants and larger quantities of certain attractive kinds. Orchids are still in big demand. The new hall of the Royal Horticultural Society was visited on the occasion of a big fruit show. The hall was pronounced an ideal one in all respects. The quality of fruit shown, due in large measure to a fine summer, was very high, the apples being equal to the very finest the speaker had ever seen in America.

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETIES.

[A paper by Robert Kift, of Philadelphia, read before the Germantown Horticultural Society, November 14, 1904.]

The love of flowers, particularly when they are the result of one's own care and culture, is soon broadened into a desire that others shall also share in your good fortune. Friends are called in to admire and perhaps carry away a few choice blossoms which shed their beauty and fragrance elsewhere, finding new friends wherever shown. Often these flower lovers get together to compare each other's products and finally at the proper seasons they bring their best and place them in competition, so that all may be seen and merit be suitably rewarded. These pioneer gatherings formed the nucleus of the horticultural societies of today. In later years these amateur bodies have been materially helped by trade organizations, the members of which being engaged in the cultivation of flowers for a livelihood had gotten together for their mutual benefit, and who found in the horticultural society an important ally through which to reach the public. Ofttimes where there was no organized horticultural body these trade organizations took it upon themselves to hold exhibitions and which in every case were productive of good results in the bringing of large numbers of the people together to see the newest and best things in flowers and plants, and thereby instilling a love and cultivating the taste for their products. It would be difficult to estimate the good that has resulted to horticulture from these organizations throughout the world, but judging from the delighted comments of the thousands of visitors to the various exhibitions in all the large cities of the United States the past decade, together with the newspaper publicity so generously bestowed, it must have been greatly beneficial.

While we may look with pride on what has been accomplished, yet there remains much that is possible and which could be done with but little more effort and that would still further the usefulness of our societies.

Last summer, during a visit to Colorado Springs, I visited the exhibition of the El Paso County Horticultural Society, of that city. The exhibition was held in the city square park, under three large tents, and was a very creditable display. But the feature with which I was particularly pleased was the awarding of prizes for the best kept grounds and lawns, as well as individual flower beds, vine-clad porticos, etc. Those entering for prizes notified the secretary by the first of June each year. A committee inspected the various entries during the season and had most of them photographed at their best. These photos were placed on view at the exhibition and made very interesting studies. A great deal of interest was taken in the contest by the residents and in consequence the standard of excellence was set much higher.

Before another year the society is promised a $20,000 building of its own, a gift of General Palmer, a wealthy member of the society. He is also spending a half million dollars on a park to be given to the city. Never have I seen the grass so green or the lawns more beautiful than here. All the watering is by irrigation, the water flowing along the gutters and being let into the house-yards through sluice boxes under the pavement.

If education of the public in things horticultural is our object it would seem that here is as advantageous a competition as that of plants and flowers gathered together in a building. There are classes here the same as in the staged exhibits, each particular entry being judged on its merits as compared with another in its class. Fine examples of this landscape or gardening work being on exhibition at all times, to all observers, cannot fail to be admired and have great weight in the education of the masses for more beautiful surroundings.

In the large cities where houses are built close together, there can be the competition between balcony and window decoration. How much more beautiful our city streets would look if these places of vantage were graced with boxes of blooming plants, thus adding form and color to the otherwise plain surfaces.

Last summer an effort was made by the City Parks Association of this city, to encourage this form of decoration. They selected Walnut street from Broad to Twentieth, and were instrumental in having about fifty windows so decorated in addition to the few then in use. They agreed to have them taken care of while the residents were away for the summer, at a nominal sum. The effect was beautiful until August set in, when the plants began to look badly and many of them had to be replaced. A little experience will, however, enable this form of decoration to be kept up all summer at comparatively small expense, and it is hoped to see the custom become general all over the city.

During a visit to Brussels, in Belgium, some years ago, I noticed boxes for window and balcony decoration were much in evidence. On inquiry it was found that a City Improvement Association had charge, or rather was encouraging the work by offering prizes for the best examples, in classes, so that all should have a chance. While it is true that horticulture means culture of the garden and the plants that grow therein, it seems as if educational work of this character could be legitimately taken up by horticultural societies and, with their prestige, better and more permanent results obtained.

A gentleman who occasionally visits Horticultural Hall in Fairmount park, said to me recently: "As soon as I set my foot in the door of that conservatory, I feel that for the time being all I see is mine and many a quiet hour have I spent enjoying the feast prepared for me."

It has been my thought for a long time that no municipal park can be complete without a large show conservatory, together with a lot of working or forcing houses, to keep the exhibition hall, if it might be so called, filled at all times with the very best of seasonable blooming plants.

Think of such a house filled with magnificent azaleas! What a chrysanthemum show could be given there. And the minor displays of calceolarias, cyclamen, cinerarias, begonias, primroses, poinsettias, orchids, etc., etc., that from time to time would make worthy successors.

Horticultural Hall, in Fairmount park, a legacy from the centennial, is doing a grand work, but on account of its construction and the small appropriation annually doled out for its maintenance, but little of the work I have in mind is carried out. Fifty thousand dollars per year, or perhaps considerably less, would suffice to keep such a plant, after once established, up to a high state of efficiency.

What a great gain to this community such an establishment would be; as a factor in educating the people and helping to instill in them a love for flowers it would be invaluable. Could we as horticulturists bring this about we would greatly increase our usefulness, for here would be on view at all times, the best of everything in flowers, a perpetual flower show.

I believe it possible to enlist private aid for the establishment and perhaps maintenance of such a plant. Millions of money is ofttimes bequeathed to less worthy objects. The above are a few of the subjects that come within the scope of horticultural bodies, and their achievement would but keep us in line with the rapid progress of the day.

The Chrysanthemum.

The chrysanthemum is certainly the reigning beauty at this period of the year. Every grower has them in abundance and of every possible form and character. Perhaps their short season is what makes them so popular. The public anticipates their arrival and the grower and dealer exult in their departure. It has been frequently prophesied that they are losing their prestige, but every year they put in a more forcible appearance and maintain their right to recognition. But with all this in their favor there is probably no other flower that is grown in as great a bulk that carries such an uncertain value in the market and is liable to give such unsatisfactory results. True, the perfect flower, or one approaching that stage, is sure to bring profitable returns, but the inferior article, which is frequently in the majority, is a drug on the market.

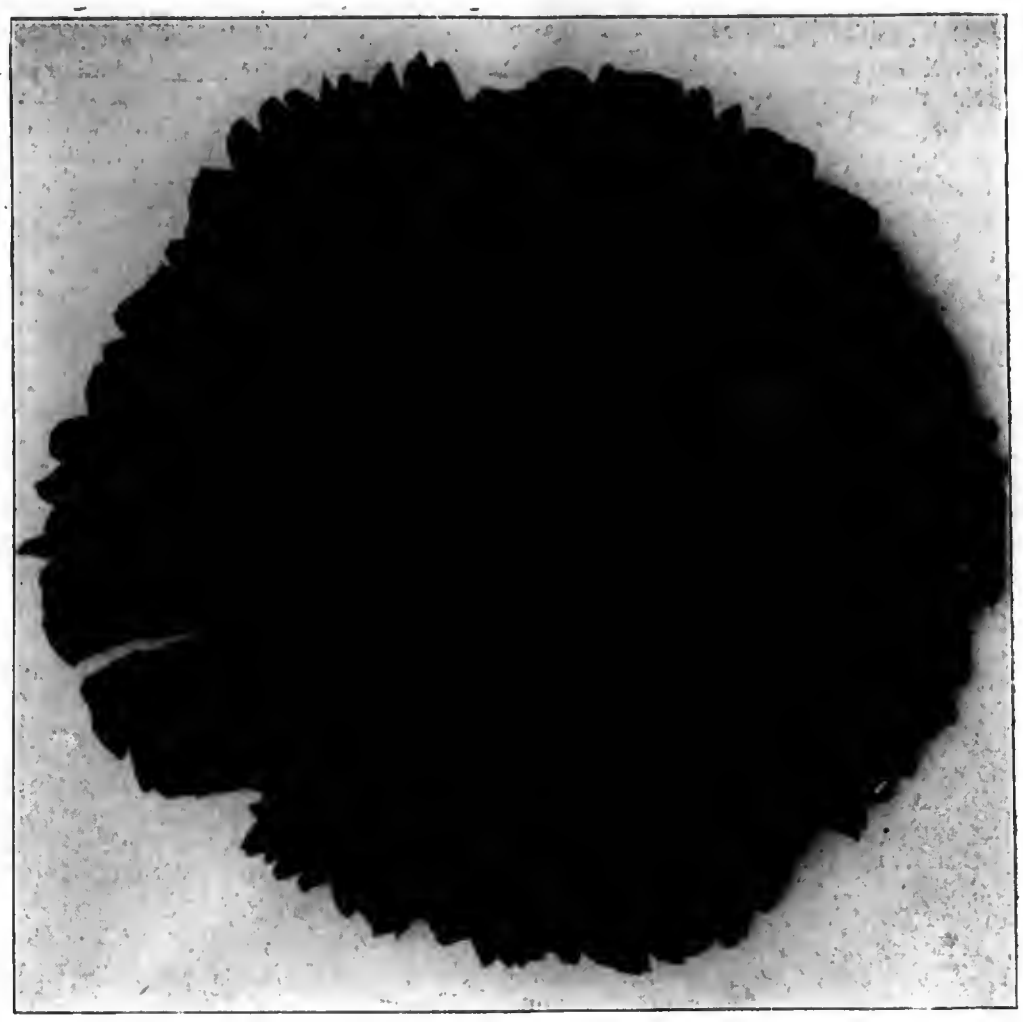
Some of the retailers out here argue that handling half a dozen varieties of diversified color will prove far more satisfactory than handling the innumerable sorts now put on the market. But every grower has his hobby to gratify and, in opposition to public demand, persists in carrying it out. The man who is up against it every hour in the day in the store most certainly acquire a clearer perception of public taste than he who is many miles away. Many of the old varieties are still grown out here and when well done are equal to newer sorts. The finest collection, both in extent and character to be seen out here this fall, was grown at the City park greenhouses. The benches are constructed well up in the center of the house, bringing the plants close to the glass, and the space allowed between each row would be considered by the commercial man as the height of extravagance, but when taken into consideration the results attained from such treatment, there are no regrets whatever. A few of the most prominent of the old favorites were Niveus, Mrs. Robinson, Mrs. Constable, Mrs. Weeks, E. Hatch, V. Morel, Iona, Helen Bloodgood, Golden Wedding, Philadelphia and Bonnaffon. Among the newer ones which proved quite satisfactory were Mrs. Coombes, Dr. Enguehard and Wm. Duckham.

Various Notes.

The cut flower market is picking up nicely, considering the warm weather. The mercury is frequently seen in the sixties. Roses have resigned for the past two weeks in favor of the mum, but as the growers have recognized the folly of stocking the market with them during mum season, there have not been any losses in this line and those who have held them back are showing up nicely for the holidays.



New carnation seedlings and sports are becoming quite numerous out here, mostly of Lawson pedigree. Benson has a white sport from this source which is very promising. Ben Boldt has a pink sport from the same stock, color of Enchantress and possessing the other qualities of its parent. Mr. Graham, of City park, has a striped sport. Davis Bros. have a new white seedling, large, fragrant and beautifully fringed, with fairly good stem.

Twenty members of the craft organized a bowling league recently. The leading firms in the business contributed a liberal fund for premiums and a satisfactory start was made on a better basis than any similar undertaking heretofore. GREAT DIVIDE.

STEM-ROT AGAIN.

I am sending you some cucumber roots and would like to know what is wrong with them, and the remedy. J. L. M.

The roots sent were pretty much dried up, but they seemed to be a good deal healthier than the stems. I think the whole trouble originates from stem-rot. I answered pretty fully a query relating to stem-rot in last week's issue, which please see. W. S. CROYDON.

GARDENING QUERIES.

What causes celery to get pithy, or "hollow," as it is often called? What causes outdoor cucumbers to decay while on the vines? Some have rusty spots all over them, as if stung, and they curl up and do not grow straight. What is the best head lettuce to grow for summer? L. H. W.

The trouble you mention with celery is brought on through various causes. Often it can be attributed to the seed, which has carelessly been selected from pithy stock. Celery sown indoors and afterwards transferred to the open ground will often become pithy through softness of growth previous to planting out, and too much manure will often cause pithy growth. If good seed is procured, sown and grown entirely outdoors and the plant set in a moderately enriched soil, there should be no trouble with pithy celery.

Your cucumbers are probably attacked by the cucumber beetle. Keep the plants dusted with air-slaked lime, especially in the earlier stages of growth, taking care that the under as well as the upper side of the leaves is covered.

The best standing summer head lettuce I have ever tried is Deacon.

STRENGTH OF ACID.

We notice in the REVIEW of November 10 an article on keeping insects down, by W. S. Croydon. As we have trouble with white fly on cucumbers we would like to try hydrocyanic acid gas. Mr. Croydon does not state what per cent pure sulphuric acid he used. As it is sold from forty per cent to ninety-eight per cent pure, we fear that we may get too strong a dose. D. B.

The acid I use is what is known as the commercial grade. This is claimed to be ninety-six per cent pure acid, four per cent water. There is a refined grade sold only for medicinal use, but this is much more expensive and is no better for the purpose in hand than the commercial article. W. S. CROYDON.

CUCUMBERS.

I find, in the training of cucumber plants, that it is a good plan to have two leaders, in place of running them on the single-stem system. When the plants are about eight inches high I pinch out the points, which causes them to break. Several shoots are usually produced. Of these I select the two strongest and train them horizontally at first, until they are long enough to reach the upright wires placed eighteen inches apart, the plants of course being set midway between the two wires. The taking of two stems induces fruiting at an earlier stage than if the single-stem system is followed, besides preventing rankness of growth. The lateral or side shoots are what must be depended on to produce pistillate flowers on which alone the fruit can be set. These lateral shoots, where the double-stem system is employed, will be produced from the point where the stems take the upward turn, thus leaving no blank spaces at the bottom of the trellis, as is often the case when the plants are grown to a single stem only.

The checking of rank growth is of considerable advantage in inducing freer setting of the fruit. According as the lateral shoots appear, they should be trained horizontally to the wires, and when they have attained sufficient length to cover the space allotted to them the points should be pinched out to prevent them running through one another. A mistake is often made in letting too much growth remain on the plants. If this is not guarded against the shoots will crowd one another, preventing the free passage of light and air. Such conditions are only productive of poor fruit and a fruitful cause of mildew and other fungous diseases, besides giving a lodging place to red spider and other injurious insects, the denseness of the foliage making it hard to reach them with the syringe.

The trellis should be constructed of good, strong wires, which should run both up and down and lengthways of the house, forming a network with meshes not larger than six or eight inches. This makes tying much more convenient than if the wires are wider apart. The trellis should run parallel with the glass and far enough away from it so that the foliage will not come in contact with the glass, where it would, during severe weather, be sure of getting hurt by frost.

W. S. Croydon.

THE PLANT ESTATE.

The garden committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society went to New London, Conn., October 28, being met on arrival by Thomas W. Head, superintendent of the M. F. Plant estate. A pleasant ride of a few miles down the Thames river was much enjoyed, ending at the private pier on the estate. After lunch with Mr. Head the committee made a tour of the extensive greenhouses and grounds. Work has only been in progress a little over two years on this new place but an immense amount of improvements have been completed in that time. The pleasure grounds when laid out will cover forty acres. In addition a large farm is attached to the estate.

The greatest amount of interest naturally centered in the greenhouses, the last of which have just been completed by the Lord & Burnham Co. Two divisions were filled with single-stemmed chrysanthemums which included all the newest and most up-to-date sorts. The flowers were all of high class quality. William Duckham was superb. Adele, an incurved pink, was much admired. Ben Wells, A. J. Balfour, Mrs. T. W. Pockett, Miss Mildred Ware, Mrs. Weeks, Col. Appleton, F. S. Vallis, C. J. Salter, Leila Filkins and W. R. Church were the extra fine sorts. Two curvilinear span houses, wings from the palm houses, are used as show houses and nicely arranged with chrysanthemums, begonias, marguerites, Cattleya labiata, Oncidium varicosum Rogersii, heliotropes and other flowering stuff mixed with foliage plants.

In the rose house varieties grown are Bride, Bridesmaid, Golden Gate, Beauty, Perle and the new General MacArthur. In the carnation house, where the plants had been grown inside all summer, Enchantress stood head and shoulders over all others. Estelle as a scarlet was first-class and is well liked. Other sorts included Lawson, Maceo, Roosevelt, Mrs. M. A. Patten, Nelson Fisher, The Bride Lillian Pond and other fine sorts.

Two divisions are planted with grapes, principally Muscats and Black Hamburgh, and two others to peaches and nectarines.

A large force of men are still employed here, grading, planting and doing other necessary work, and the estate when finished, will be one of the best in New England. A word might fittingly be said of the fine granite house occupied by Mr. Head, costing $35,000. Like everything else on the place, it shows that there has been no stint of money in any department and that Commodore Plant feels a keen interest in his employes' welfare, which is being increasedly shown on other estates.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The leading retail men all say that there was nothing the matter with the cut flower trade for Thanksgiving. Everybody was busy working late Wednesday night to fill orders for early morning delivery. The general report was that they found Thanksgiving trade as good as ever, if not a little better, and prices about the same as last year.

The wholesalers report a big shipping trade and are well satisfied with the amount of business done. The supply of first-class stock in roses was light. The quality of the bulk of the stock was hardly up to the average. American Beauties were, and are still, very scarce, that is, the fancy grades. These brought as high as $10 per dozen at the retail stores. The market, though, is well supplied with the shorter grades, which are selling well. Brides and Maids also sold well and so did Meteor, Liberty, Ivory, Gate and Carnot. The fancy grades in those had a big demand and not enough to go around. The demand was heaviest for red and pink.

The carnation supply was about equal to the demand. A few small lots were left over, as the quality was very poor. The price on the prime stock was high and the store men were compelled to charge 75 cents and $1 per dozen and the demand was heavy.

Good chrysanthemums were quite plentiful in all except first-class stock, which sold at stiff prices. Romans and Paper Whites were plentiful and sold at regular market rates. Lily of the valley had an active demand, stock first-class. Good long stevia is in the market. Violets never sold better than this Thanksgiving. The supply was short and as usual the growers were off crop just when the trade can use thousands at big prices.

Fine blooming plants moved well. The growers who supply the trade here report that they are well supplied with first-class stock for holiday trade. Beyer, Schray, Sanders, Felter, Windler and others say they expect a big trade for this stock up to Christmas.

Various Notes.

There will be a hot time at the meeting of the Florists' Club next Thursday afternoon. In my notes in the last issue the date mentioned, December 10, should be December 8. The clubroom in the Odd Fellows' building, where the meetings are held, will not be able to hold the crowd. Some of our silver-tongued orators are already toned up to a high pitch. The members should not fail to respond to President Juengel's notice and attend. Early, 2 p. m., is the time. A full account of this meeting will appear in the issue of December 15. The trustees are also expected to have the essays ready for assignment at this meeting. This will be the last meeting of the club this year.

The Ellison Floral Co. furnished the decorations for the dinner to the Japanese prince, which were elaborate. The prince made Mrs. Ellison a very handsome present as a memento. This firm has had a number of large dinners of late, which were given in honor of foreign celebrities by the World's Fair officials. Arthur Ellison also reports a big trade for Thanksgiving.

Ostertag Bros. are making extensive preparations for three large weddings this week. Henry Ostertag reports they have enough plants now to furnish a dozen weddings a day.

Fred Meinhardt and Otto Koenig will no doubt give the club members at the next meeting the benefit of their experience with a World's Fair flower show.

Robert Beyer reports a good sale on azaleas, poinsettias and decorative stock, of which he has a big stock for the holidays.

A. C. Greiner, who won the $25 special prize for his display of cacti at the World's Fair flower show, reports a good sale for his stock to foreign visitors. Mr. Greiner's place on Natural Bridge road is worth a visit.

The Michel Plant & Bulb Co. has a fine supply of holiday stock of plants, especially Boston and Piersoni ferns.

The large show houses of Waldbart, Weber, Miller and others are well filled with choice stock in plants of all kinds.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The Thanksgiving trade left the stock all cut down closely and naturally receipts were light at the end of last week; in fact there was more stock in market on Wednesday, the day before Thanksgiving, in proportion to the demand, and prices were consequently weaker than at any time since. The usual increase in cuts which comes a few days after a holiday has not been manifest this week, probably because of the cold, dark weather, which has retarded development. There are fair supplies of Beauties of excellent quality but Thanksgiving prices still hold. Tea roses are equal to requirements but the best grade of stock has not gone below the holiday rates and is in good demand; low grades are weaker. Carnations are the scarcest item on the list; in fact, for almost the first time this season receipts are under the demand and supplies cleaned up early each day. Stock of quality to stand a journey is worth more this week than it was last. There are plenty of fine single violets but not many good doubles; the Hudson river growers seem to be finding a satisfactory market nearer home just now. Chrysanthemums are nearly gone, only a few late sorts being seen and these of indifferent quality. Stevia is coming in heavily and selling at all sorts of prices. A little mignonette is offered. The plentiful item is Paper White narcissus. There is enough valley and "green goods" are abundant.

The growers report that there is plenty of stuff on the plants and that a few days of warm bright weather will bring abundant supplies again. At present it is 10 degrees below normal.

Shipping trade is good and city business fair and a good market for some time is looked forward to. Thanksgiving business is generally reported as ahead of last year.

Various Notes.

Henry Payne, the "green goods" grower at Hinsdale, has the sympathy of all in the loss of his eldest daughter, Delia, a bright young lady 20 years of age.

The retailers are busy making up stock for Christmas. C. W. McKellar says the sale for cape flowers is very good but that immortelle wreaths can now be bought cheaper than the retailers can make them up.

Only a little holly has so far reached this market and early in the week it was hard to find. Such as has come in was of fair quality.

Kennicott Bros. Co. report a big business on red berries and are booking many orders for Christmas delivery.

Percy Jones says he expects to have mums right along up to Christmas. He is still getting in 1,000 to 1,200 a day.

Ed Winterson says that he is so busy these days that he is in no danger of getting into mischief. The supply department is rushed, cut flowers are moving lively and they are doing quite a business in plants, such as Bostons and rubbers. They handle considerable wild smilax but are going light on bouquet green and holly, so Mr. Degnan says. Last year they were right in line on green but the market has been so unsettled the past year or two that it has become a good deal of a gamble. E. H. Hunt's is another house that is willing the other fellow should make whatever money is to be made in green. Capt. H. Schuenemann has arrived at the Clark street bridge with his schooner of green and Christmas trees.

At Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s they have the wall decorated with their blue ribbons. It makes quite an imposing array.

Will Graff was up from Columbus one day this week. He reports good business there.

Weiland & Risch are cutting some very fine Brides and Maids and find them exceptionally good property just now.

Peter Reinberg and John Muno are at Duquoin, Ill., after quail.

C. W. Reimers, of Louisville, Ky., is in town with samples of poinsettias for Christmas delivery.

The stock in the conservatories of Wm. H. Chadwick was sold at auction November 28 by the trustee in bankruptcy. Most of it went to private parties at low prices.

BOSTON.

The Market.

The general verdict appears to be that, taking everything into consideration, this year's Thanksgiving business surpassed that of all preceding years. An enormous quantity of flowers came into the market but practically everything was cleaned out. At the Park street market John Walsh, the genial manager, reported business to have been the best since the market started. Wholesalers and retailers all appear to be well satisfied with the amount of business transacted. The weather on November 23 was clear and fine and, while it was gloomy on the holiday itself, rain fortunately held off.

While prices ruled somewhat firmer, there were no sharp advances in any of the staples. First-class Brides and Bridesmaids brought $6 to $12, extra select Bridesmaids going as high as $16. Some of the poorer grades sold as low as $1. American Beauties were in rather shorter supply. The best grades of these do not come to the markets, being sold directly to the stores. About $40 per hundred seemed to be the top price on these. The best grade of Liberty brought $25, good stock selling at $10 to $15. In carnations all good stock brought $4, Enchantress and Lawson seeming to be in best demand. Nothing possessing any merit went below $3. The quality of carnations was never excelled at Thanksgiving.

Chrysanthemums of good quality brought $12 to $16, a few select going at $3 per dozen. Small flowers, not good enough to sell at all before the holiday, cleared out at $4 per hundred. White chrysanthemums were scarce, White Bonnaffon being the only one seen in quantity. Violets were in first-class demand, the general price being $1 per hundred. In the way of other flowers there were good supplies of Paper White narcissi, heliotrope, mignonette, stevia, Cypripedium insigne and a variety of other stock. Pot plant trade was very good, cyclamens, poinsettias, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, berried solanums, Azalea Indica, Otaheite oranges, Boston and Piersoni ferns being in best demand.

Prices since Thanksgiving have ruled firm. Carnations bring $3 to $4 for select stock. Beauty and Liberty roses are higher than a week ago, but good Brides and Bridesmaids can still be had for $6 to $8 per hundred. Violets still bring $1 and will probably maintain that price until after Christmas. William Spillsbury and William Sim each send as many as 12,000 singles a day, making several shipments each day.

Various Notes.

An effective table decoration the past week at a dinner for a newly made bride consisted of a combination of American Beauty roses and Gros Colmar grapes. The roses had very long stems bent in the form of an arch and from them hung the grapes, tied with white ribbon. It was quite a fetching combination.

Zinn, the Beacon street florist, had something of a novelty for the Thanksgiving trade in the form of well-flowered 6-inch pots of Spiræa Japonica.

The annual exhibition of children's herbariums at Horticultural Hall on November 25 and 26 brought a display of over 2,000 mounted specimens. Gratuities were awarded to all the collections, which were eagerly scanned by many visitors and reflected very great credit on the young folks displaying them.

The Boston Co-operative Flower Growers' Association will hold its annual carnation exhibition at Horticultural Hall on February 11, in conjunction with the winter exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. A fine exhibition is assured.

The Massachusetts Horticultural Society will hold prize exhibitions during 1905 as follows: February 11, March 23 to 26 (spring exhibition and meeting of American Rose Society), May 6, June 3 and 4 (rhododendron show), June 10 (peony show), June 24 and 25 (rose and strawberry show), July 8 and 9, July 22, August 5, 12, 19 and 26, September 14 to 17 (annual plant, fruit and vegetable show), November 9, 10, 11 and 12 (chrysanthemum show).

H. A. Stevens Co., of Dedham, have a beautiful pink sport from Mrs. Lawson carnation very like Enchantress. It should prove very popular, as the color holds well.

Nice lots of Cypripedium insigne are coming in from Thomas Roland, Nahant, Charles Evans Co., Watertown, and John McFarland, North Easton. It is doubtful if any orchid pays better than this old-time favorite, even today. It is easy of culture, increases rapidly in size and value and the flowers are all right a month or two hence if not needed now.

Poinsettias are being more largely used in the stores than for some years. Hoffmann, on Massachusetts avenue, had a very fetching window arrangement of white chrysanthemums and poinsettias for Thanksgiving.

Prospects are good for a considerable addition to the special prizes to be offered in connection with the meeting of the American Rose Society in Boston in March, 1905. These it is hoped may tempt our western, Canadian and Pennsylvanian growers to bring their best along to the Hub.

The Minot-Channing wedding at King's Chapel on November 22 was one of the leading society events of the month in Boston. Doyle used white chrysanthemums, smilax and palms exclusively at the church, while at the bride's home green and white was the color scheme, except in the reception room, where Bridesmaid roses were largely used.

N. S. Wax & Co.'s store on Winter street, near Tremont, is always very attractive. Some extra fine Maud Dean and Wanamaker chrysanthemums were noted there the past week.

A store which continues to improve very much is that of Rogers, on Summer street, whose place of business is near the South Terminal station. In addition to his usual line, quite a number of orchids have recently been displayed.

The Wellesley rose continues to be in wonderful demand in Boston at all stores where it is handled. At John Walsh's Malden store, a good number are also disposed of. This new rose will be introduced by Mr. Montgomery in the spring of 1905, and large orders are already being booked for it.

James Rough, manager of the new market, reports business as being excellent the past week, with practically everything cleaned out.

Our first genuinely cold snap of the season arrived on November 27, temperature falling to zero in some nearby locations. A light fall of snow gave the country a rather wintery aspect. This cold weather is naturally affecting the output of flowers and prices are likely to have a hardening tendency.

W. N. Craig.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Thanksgiving was about up to general expectations. The inevitable slump in values came on the afternoon of Wednesday. It was the same old story, oversupply when the day dawned and undersupply for days preceding the holiday, when the normal shipments and perfect stock would have brought excellent prices and left the holiday able to digest and distribute the natural supply. All the lessons and experience of generations cannot teach the growers the common sense system and complete daily shipments. They leave no basis for an intelligent calculation. The market is always an enigma before a holiday. For days the market was hungry for supplies. When they arrived it was too late.

Every kind of stock felt the condition. Violets that were worth $1.50 dropped to $1 and 75 cents and even 50 cents before the purging process was complete. The highest prices touched were $6 per dozen for Beauties and $15 per hundred for Brides and Maids. These rates did not hold and only the top grade went at these figures.

Carnations were very abundant and the regular varieties were disposed of beneath their actual value. Some novelties touched 10 cents. The effect of the depreciation remained during the balance of the week and this week opens with little improvement. Retailers, however, announce a growing interest and the closeness of Christmas has a manifest effect on the hopes and ambitions of all the prominent establishments on Broadway and Fifth avenue.

Already the buying of Christmas goods is in full blast. Orders are being placed with the growers and all the indications point to an exceptional holiday season. The men who make the retail flower business of New York have been making money. One prominent retailer announced today his belief that this season would aggregate double the holiday business of 1903.

Various Notes.

James Hammond disposed of his usual Thanksgiving specialty, orange trees, as rapidly as his grower could deliver them and has arranged for a large Christmas supply.

Charles Millang has been receiving some fine bulbous stock from Snyder, of Ridgewood. He has handled an enormous quantity of mums this year, his Chadwicks being extra good.

John Harrison's White House carnation, which he controls, grows in popularity. He handles the violets of D. Marquardt, of Rhinebeck, among the best that reach the New York market.

John J. Perkins, as usual, is handling large quantities of extra fine cypripediums.

James Hart, Jr., is in charge of the wholesale business of the veteran, at 117 W. Thirtieth street and is rapidly building an excellent trade, the establishment of this house dating back to 1871.

Some grand Enguehard, yellow and white Chadwick, Maud Dean, Gold Mine, Jones and Nagoya chrysanthemums were seen daily last week at Guttman's. Victory, the new red carnation, sold for 10 cents at Thanksgiving.

Frank Frank, of Third avenue and Eighty-eighth street, is recovering from a severe illness.

Wm. Mortimer, of Bloomingdale's floral department, has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of his father.

Peter Downing is again with M. A. Bowe. He has twenty-eight years' experience in New York in the decorative departments of leading retailers.

President Philip Breitmeyer on his way to Philadelphia, spent several days with his New York friends last week and enjoyed the hospitality of Messrs. Traendly, Nugent, Sheridan, Young and Raynor. Mr. Breitmeyer was accompanied by his Detroit architect and will shortly build an office building that will contain the finest flower store in America.

Arthur Boddington has received a great stock of hardy roses of all the best varieties and has just installed his new oak seed cases and made his big store as convenient as the best.

S. Geller's windows are made especially attractive by Christmas bells and well stocked ferneries of unique designs in preparation for the holiday trade.

It was interesting the day before Thanksgiving to note the assortment of carnations on exhibition. The list may prove of interest. There were Gaiety, Joost, Lawson, Goodenough, White Cloud, Scott, Bellmore, Mrs. McKay, Melba, Prosperity, Enchantress, Harry Fenn, Genevieve Lord, Pink McGowan, Dark Scott, Gov. Bliss, Crane, Roosevelt, Maceo, Hill, Bradt, Estelle, McGowan, Queen Louise, Dorothy, Cervera, Goethe, Oakfield and Floriana. Still they come. Next year almost as many new varieties will be bidding for public favor.

John H. Foley, with N. Lecakes & Co., is handling an average of 1,500 strings of smilax weekly from Chapin Bros., of Pine Brook, N. Y.

Handsome baskets of begonias from C. W. Ward's were much in demand at John Young's before Thanksgiving.

Walter Sheridan had an immense supply of grand Beauties for the holiday, as usual.

The Schultz brothers, of Madison, N. J., were in the city Thanksgiving eve, making fraternal calls upon their agents.

President Traendly is very anxious to make the last club meeting of the year, Monday evening, December 12, the best of the season, both in attendance and exhibits. All florists' supply houses are cordially invited to take part in the exhibition. The new officers will be elected and Mr. Nugent and his lieutenants have something special in the commissariat line.

The auction rooms have added holly trees in berry and leaf to their stock of seasonable goods. Sales of late have been very satisfactory, hardy roses especially bringing good prices.

David Clarke's Sons report eight wedding and church decorations in the two days preceding Thanksgiving. They say it was the best cash Thanksgiving in their career and claim the pulse of the people presages a brilliant Christmas.

Messrs. Siebrecht, Miller, Butterfield, Guttman, Barron, Pepper and Shaw on Monday visited the establishment of Chas. Weber, at Lynbrook, L. I., especially to see Victory growing. They were not disappointed. It is a flower of remarkable brilliance and strength, a wonderful bloomer and bound to become universally popular. The report of the committee will express clearly its many good qualities and will be heard at the next meeting of the Florists' Club. Mr. Weber has 20,000 square feet of glass entirely devoted to carnations, including Lawson, Enchantress, Prosperity, Harry Fenn, Lord and Goethe. Victory will be disseminated in 1906 and 25,000 stock plants will be in Next season's auction business will be a strenuous one. In addition to the veterans, J. W. Bebus, son of one of New York's oldest florists, and manager of Elliott's auction department for some time, will make his bid for public confidence.

In transcribing the New York notes last week the printer in the reference to violets made me mention only the Twenty-ninth and Thirtieth street experts of New York City. It goes without saying that the omission of Twenty-eighth street was a typographical error, as every wholesaler on Twenty-eighth street handles many thousands of violets daily.

The Market.

The volume of business during Thanksgiving week was very large. The football games on Thursday and on Saturday brought many visitors to the city, creating a heavy demand in addition to the regular Thanksgiving business. The supply of flowers was enormous. Prices advanced but slightly, averaging lower than last season, on roses especially. Chrysanthemums were used in immense quantities, yellow being most popular on Saturday. S. S. Pennock sold nearly 5,000 Bonnaffons alone. All but the rear guard of the queen of autumn have now disappeared. Violets were really scarce on the two days above named. Liberties sold particularly well for Penn's last game, all the grades advancing a step. Other flowers went well, especially the limited quantities of bouvardia and mignonette, the exception being the poorer grades of tea roses and Paper White narcissi. The shipping trade was excellent, the Leo Niessen Company sending four large wagon loads of flowers by one express train alone. Summing up, it may be said the retailers were especially favored by the business conditions.

Business is quieter this week. Prices have not advanced despite the wintry weather. There is considerable entertaining going on, with stock sufficient to meet all demands. Fancy chrysanthemums are in fair supply. W. S. Allen, Mrs. Chadwick and Dorothy Faust are conspicuous. The medium and poorer grades are diminishing. Poinsettias have made their appearance, H. H. Battles sending some fine blooms from his Thornhedge greenhouses to S. S. Pennock and to the Flower Market. Stevia serrata is becoming more plentiful.

Hillside.

The development in the commercial growing of hybrid tea roses is progressing steadily. It is very interesting to note the work being done by A. Farenwald, and to compare that work with the work of five, of two and of one year ago. Liberties now fill nearly all the place, there being two houses and one bed over of Beauties. The Liberty is now flowered pretty much all the year around and is grown for four years successively under glass. Grafted plants have been tried, but so far do not seem equal to those grown on their own roots.

The fall crop on the two, three and four-year-old plants has been very heavy. They are, however, in excellent shape, likely to do well through the winter. There are two houses of young plants on benches. They are just being allowed to bloom and will probably produce more flowers than the older plants during the next two months.

The Beauties have also been allowed to remain undisturbed in the solid beds, some for two and a few for three years. They produced extraordinarily heavy summer crops, were rested a little and started up again. I was much impressed with this way of handling Liberties, but had some doubts about its ultimate success with Beauties.

Mr. Farenwald said that some florists think that his paper on Liberties published in the REVIEW of March 24 did not tell all he knew. This is an injustice to Mr. Farenwald. Many growers have endorsed Mr. Burton's statement that this was the best and most complete paper on rose growing under glass he had ever heard.

The Game Has Begun.

"Is that John Doe"

"Yes."

"This is Richard Roe. Say, Jack, you may send me a hundred Enchantress."

"All right, the price is 4 cents."

"Hold on. Three is what I paid you Saturday."

"I know, Dick, but they are 4 today."

"Well I don't need them. They are only for stock, Jack."

"They are 4 today, Dick."

"All right. I can get them from Bobby Black."

"Very well."

"Better send them at 3 Jack."

"Sorry, can't do it Dick. They are worth 4."

Various Notes.

Wm. J. Stewart was in this city recently making arrangements for his new paper, Horticulture, which will be published in Boston, the home of horticulture in this country. The first number is scheduled to appear next Saturday. Mr. Stewart has experience, excellent ideas and many warm friends, three important factors in the success of his enterprise.

Wm. J. Muth stopped a moment in a rush for the train to say that he was well pleased with the Thanksgiving business of the Philadelphia Cut Flower Co.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. are receiving importations of Christmas supplies by several steamers this week. Immortelles, immortelle wreaths and moss wreaths for Christmas delivery are important items of these shipments. The firm reports the volume of business as ahead of last season.

Edward Reid is handling a very choice lot of Beauties.

Joseph Kift & Son obtained $9 a dozen for quite a number of Yellow Eatons on Saturday.

Fred Ehret is receiving exceptionally fine Adiantum Croweanum from Henry I. Faust, of Merion.

Eugene Bernheimer has been out of town on business most of this week.

Berger Bros. were pleased with their chrysanthemum business last week.

Paul Bender returned to this city a few days ago to take his family to Wil-

Answers to Correspondents.

REVIEW readers are invited to send any questions relating to culture or marketing of plants and flowers in Philadelphia to Phil, in care of any of the leading seed or commission houses or the Flower Market. Each question will be submitted to a competent person and answered under number. Correct name and address must always accompany inquiry, but will not be published.

23.—I grow a variety of cut flowers for the Philadelphia market, chiefly roses, carnations and asparagus. Later I will have some bulbous stock. Can I do better by sending a man around to the retail stores or by sending to a commission house? I am not very far out of town.

Ans.—You will make more money by sending to a commission house.

State of Trade.

The dull spell experienced during the past few weeks seems to have been broken at last and a season of business activity is noticeable on every side. Thanksgiving trade proved unusually brisk, the supply of flowers, especially carnations, which at this season of the year are by no means a scarcity, barely keeping up with the demand. Carnations scarcely matured had to be "pressed into service," the result being a clean and close cut. What is noteworthy is the fact of the increased demand for fancy carnations, a demand by no means confined to the so-called upper classes. The average buyer, as though keeping pace with the progressive grower, wants the best and is willing to pay accordingly. I have heard it expressed time and again, and by men who know whereof they speak, that the flower shows are mainly responsible for the discrimination between the good, bad and indifferent, shown by the flower buying public. Be it as it may, the fact is potent that there is ample room for good and meritorious varieties, whether roses, carnations or chrysanthemums.

A Visit to Dorners'.

A treat which I had long anticipated came to pass when I visited F. Dorner & Sons' establishment. As usual, I found the place a model of neatness, cleanliness and good order. Notwithstanding the hustle and bustle, the numerous telephone rings for "hurry up" orders, it being the day preceding Thanksgiving, things seemed to move along with clock-like regularity. To visit Dorner one necessarily has his mind as well as his eye on carnations. First of all we took a stroll through the white section, where the Lady Beautiful and The Belle can be seen in all their glory, finer, it seemed to me, than last season, when they were put on the market. Between the two, as I saw them here, it would be hard to take one's choice, both being ideal in growth as well as perfect in bloom. The Lady Bountiful, however, is Mr. Dorner's favorite. What bids fair to create a bit of furore a year or two years hence is a white seedling in its third year. The average bloom, and there were about two dozen in sight on the few plants, fully measured four inches in diameter. The calyx is perfect, the stem long and erect, the growth ideal.

Speaking of seedlings, one must go through the house especially devoted to seedlings and see thousands of them, some in the first, others in the second and third years' growth. Among the latter there are a number of scarlets that look very promising indeed, although Mr. Dorner himself is rather skeptical as to the merits of some, I may say of the most, having selected but one in that class. Its color is a brilliant scarlet, the bloom is large and well built up in the center, stem and calyx faultless. Then there are pinks galore, of various sizes, qualities and colors. Two of these attracted my special attention, for besides their size and fine growth, the colors are unlike anything I have yet seen. It may be described as something between the shade of Enchantress and Fiancee. Although they look identical to me, they represent two distinct varieties. A crimson seedling in its third year may be heard from in the no distant future. Unlike anything we have in that class, it seems to combine the fancy with the bread and butter qualities. A variegated one of the Bradt type with a stem twice the size of the latter, and a profuse bloomer, is likewise on the list of the promising ones.

And last, but by no means the least, there is the Eclipse, for distribution during the coming season. As its name implies, it bids fair to eclipse all the dark pink varieties. It is first of all a profuse bloomer, coming in early and continuing throughout the season. The bloom is fine, the color an even shade of dark pink and the stem and calyx all that could be desired.

Speaking of rooted cuttings, it is Mr. Dorner's opinion that the sooner the growers will begin to realize that early cuttings, unless shifted into larger pots as they require it, will make stunted and poor plants, the better for all concerned. "It is the height of folly," he remarked, "to clamor for December and January cuttings, and let them shift for themselves in a 2-inch or 2½-inch pot, as best they can until planting time. Such care leads to but one result, stunted plants. Those receiving cuttings in December or January should have them at least in 4-inch pots by May, else poor results will follow as a matter of course. As to myself, February and March cuttings are invariably my preference."

ASSOCIATION INTERESTS.

One of the most difficult problems confronting large organizations, designed for mutual helpfulness and progress in certain lines of work, is that of providing scope and latitude at their regular meetings, for the consideration of such special departments as may be generally included in the membership of the association. For examples take the American Park and Outdoor Art Association, recently merged with the American League for Civic Improvement, into the American Civic Association, and the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists. In the former there was a certain unrest among the members engaged as park superintendents, due to the lack of opportunity to take up the special details of park work; and in the latter the gardener element in the membership felt that their interests had not found it possible to express themselves to their utmost to the uplifting of the particular branches of work involved. While specializing would seem to be the order of the day, yet with so vast a territory as our country covers, all national associations become more or less unwieldy; or, in other words, they fail to meet the conditions best adapted to serve all parts on time and minister to the best interests of any section as occasion may dictate. Since the summer meetings at St. Louis the American Association of Park Superintendents has been organized, and a Gardeners' Association is rapidly being developed. About the best solution so far attempted is that of the architects, whose chapters exist wherever conditions demand, subservient in a measure to the parent body, but our individual states are important enough and prosperous enough to sustain state associations which, affiliated with a national association, might promise that the best interests of all should be maintained throughout the length and breadth of our land.—Park and Cemetery.

WE ARE much pleased with the Florists' Manual, and could not get along without the FLORISTS' REVIEW. Enclosed find another dollar.—WM. RHODES & SON, Leechburg, Pa.

YOU may discontinue my advertisement of violet plants. I have sold all the stock I had, which shows that it certainly pays to advertise in your paper.—G. M. NAUMANN, Cleveland, O.

I WOULD say that many of the articles in the REVIEW are of great value to me and I would not feel that I could do without it were the subscription price thrice what it is.—A. E. KENNEDY, Algona, Ia.

W. ATLEE BURPEE & CO. want their friends to "watch" the "seeds that grow." They send the watch with their compliments. It is a full-grown specimen, dial six inches in diameter, bearing their trade-mark, and has taken the place of our office clock.

THE market for bouquet green is quiet. The experience of the last couple of years caused most of the buyers of bulk green to place orders early and these have been covered, with moderate quantities now on hand which will probably hang on until the late orders for small lots come in. Some green is still coming out of the wood but not in large quantities.

According to a note in the Revue Horticole the number of subscribers to the fund for the Vilmorin memorial at Paris up to the present time amounts to 2138, and the total sum to 21,155 francs, about $4,200. Contributions have been received from various countries, and a very large number are of small amount, many of fifty centimes only, a circumstance which shows in what general esteem M. de Vilmorin was held.

PHILADELPHIA.

Three weeks after being elected sheriff of Camden County, New Jersey, for a term of three years, Herbert W. Johnson of the firm of Johnson & Stokes has tendered his resignation to Governor Murphy. The reason assigned by Sheriff Johnson for taking this step is his continued poor health. At the present time he and Mrs. Johnson are at Hot Springs, Va. The sheriff it is said is threatened with nervous prostration. A letter from Mrs. Johnson states that this step was taken by the sheriff by the order of his physician, who insisted that he retire from office. The physician advised that even if his health continued to improve, it would be unwise for him to assume the office.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Notwithstanding all the preparations, Thanksgiving proved to be but a good ordinary day's business. There was nothing extra about the demand. Prices advanced but a trifle and that only on certain classes of stock that happened to be scarce, such as violets and Beauties. The general report is that business was very fair but that mums came very near to being a drug and fancy prices for them out of the question. The total of business was not up to last year.

The mum season is about over. There are not many to be seen at the wholesale houses, and, contrary to the usual experience at this time of year, there is very little call for them. This season has been a bad one here for the mums. First to last, with but two exceptions, they have not sold with anything like the snap of last year. The cause of this is rather hard to find, but it is an undeniable fact that trade in this city this fall has not been up to the scratch.

This market is now pretty well supplied in all lines with the exception of red roses and Beauties, which at times are scarce. Valley is selling well and so are Romans. Violets bring most any price one day and the next it is hard to give them away. Many violets shipped to reach this city for the Tranksgiving trade did not arrive till the following day, when there was no demand for them, and they were a total loss.

Various Notes.

The chrysanthemum show held by W. K. Partridge in his retail store proved to be a great success. It far surpassed anything of the kind ever attempted here and brought out a large crowd of the flower loving public.

A week from Saturday is the next regular meeting of the Florists' Society and a good number of the members is expected to be on hand. C. J. Ohmer.

TORONTO.

F. C. Miller, of Brancondale, was fined $5 and costs or ten days by Magistrate Kingsford in the Police Court yesterday upon a charge of committing malicious injury to the property of the Granite Rink while the flower, fruit and honey show was in progress. Superintendent George H. Mills said the defendant's firm had become offended at the action of the judges of the carnation display and took away their exhibit before the closing day, contrary to the rules of the show. When they were taking out their exhibits the witness attempted to close the door, and it was pushed off its hinges. Mr. T. C. Robinette, K. C., immediately filed a notice of appeal.—Toronto Globe.

Please omit my advertisement of pansy plants, as I can fill no more orders this season.—L. W. Goodale, Dwight, Mass.

I would not want to do without the Review.—J. H. Fiesser, West Hoboken, N. J.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., E. W. Kirkpatrick, McKinney, Tex.; Vice-Pres., C. L. Watrous, Des Moines; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 29th annual convention will be held at West Baden, Ind., June, 1905.

Baltzell Bros., Altoona, Pa., are engaged in developing Rose Hill Cemetery, near that city.

Experiments in Delaware tend to show that the kerosene-limoid mixture will control San Jose scale.

The Clinton Falls Nursery Co., Owatonna, Minn., will make about 800,000 grafts this season. They had about 400,000 apple trees on hand when the fall season opened.

The thirty-ninth annual convention of the Iowa State Horticultural Society will be held at Des Moines December 13 to 16. Many western nurserymen will attend, several having places on the program.

The collector of customs at Chicago sold seven cases of nursery stock from Holland November 28. There were two shipments aggregating 275 pieces, including lilacs, rhododendrons, hydrangeas and clematis.

The first nursery catalogue for the spring of 1905 to reach us is that of Griffing Bros. Co., Jacksonville, Fla. It includes a general line of stock suitable for planting in the south, beside citrus fruits and pecans.

The proposed plan of disseminating the Spencer seedless apple through stock companies organized for that purpose is attracting wide attention. The trade is waiting for the word of a competent authority as to the character of the novelty.

TRANSPLANTING CUTTINGS.

August Rolker & Sons, New York, recently filed a protest against the classification for and assessment of duty on certain merchandise entered at the customs house in New York. The board of appraisers heard the case November 15. Following is the decision:

The merchandise which was invoiced as Buxus suffruticosa and Buxus arborescens, was classified as evergreen seedlings under paragraph 252, tariff act of 1897. The board found the plants in question to be transplanted cuttings and not seedlings, and held that if not cuttings in their present state they would be sufficiently described as stocks of evergreen trees or stocks of plants commonly known as nursery stock within the meaning of said paragraph, as contended by the importers.

HOW to EARN $20 to $50 per WEEK
This is an advertisement but is worthy of your careful consideration, as it is a bonafide offer to the readers of the Florists' Review for their services this winter—whole or part time.
If you mean business it will pay you to write to the Spaulding Company and get their proposition. Whether you are experienced in their line or not they will outfit you free and instruct you fully each week, so that you will positively make as much as stated above, in cash, and in addition thereto will receive many premiums, not cheap, trashy things but useful and valuable articles which they send their salesmen free, from time to time, by way of appreciation and encouragement.
Working for them is not like representing an ordinary nursery concern, for they are nurserymen of national reputation and can be depended upon to fulfill all agreements with salesmen and customers. They will make life easy and prosperous for you if you give them the chance.
Write them to-day for full particulars.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

Thanksgiving trade was very good. Chrysanthemums sold well and brought good prices. Poinsettias came from C. W. Reimers' establishment and found a ready sale. Chrysanthemums will soon be a thing of the past.

Jos. Coenen & Co. had a very large decoration. They used some 200 cut chrysanthemums and many carnations.

Hy. Fuchs has a bench of Golden Gate roses which are grand.

F. Walker & Co. report business good. The greenhouse in the rear of the store is stocked with some very fine ferns and rubber plants.

Nanz & Neuner made quite a display in their show window. Their vase of Eaton and yellow Mrs. Jerome Jones was a marvel of beauty and attracted a good deal of attention.

Mrs. Schulz, wife of Jacob Schulz, is dangerously ill with typhoid fever.

Frank Lichtefeld, father of Hy. Lichtefeld, who has been ill with throat trouble, is much better.

F. C. Haupt made a beautiful display in his window, of chrysanthemums and carnations.

Wm. Walker's place is in fine shape. Roses and carnations are the picture of health.

C. H. Kunzman is cutting some extra fine Enchantress.

Visitor: S. S. Skidelsky, Philadelphia.

HY. LICHTEFELD.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Thanksgiving week was one of the busiest in the history of the trade here. There was an exceptionally brisk demand for flowers and plants for decorating and gifts. A feature of the week was the annual football game between Missouri and Kansas universities held Thanksgiving day. A rush was made by the students of each college for the florists and chrysanthemums disappeared until looking over the benches the day after it looked as though a cyclone had struck them. We are always glad when the students come.

Various Notes.

Alfred Broman, of Independence, formerly with Kellogg, at Pleasant Hill, has some fine roses in his houses. In fact, everything looks very nice out on the Lexington road.

A rumor is afloat that another range of houses is about to be erected at Fifteenth and Euclid. Your correspondent is unable to give the name of the party contemplating the improvement.

C. A. Blankenfeld wishes to say that a mistake was made in the item week before last. He says that it is Langshan and not Leghorn chickens he is raising.

All the florists are getting ready for Christmas business. Advance orders are being sent in for cut flowers and plants and all the florists are wearing a smile of content.

The florists of Kansas City are up against a stiff proposition, the department stores and the street fakirs, who are coming in competition with the legitimate growers.

Bunyar reports business as good in his line and is propagating lots of stuff for the spring market.

Chas. Laundy, of Westport, is thoroughly satisfied with his new location and reports business as rushing out his way.

Arthur Newell says he has nothing to complain of in the way of business.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Business the past week has been very good. Thanksgiving has come and gone and most of the retail stores as well as many of the market people report an increase over last year's business. Among the wholesalers, most of them were left with large quantities of carnations on hand. We understand fine stock could have been bought Wednesday evening at $15 per thousand. White carnations, which were very scarce for the ten days preceding Tuesday, were very much in evidence for Thanksgiving, but the trouble was there is never much call for white for any holiday. The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. had an immense stock of chrysanthemums, which they cleaned up nicely. They report most of their growers entirely cut out and expect the coming week to clean them up for this year.

The general report of increased sales is somewhat surprising in the face of the fact that almost all stock sold cheaper than ever before at this time of the year. The street merchants sold carnations as cheap as 25 cents per dozen.

Various Notes.

Now that the mum season is about over it might be valuable information for the growers to know that the demand this year has been for good chrysanthemums of medium size. The verdict of all the retailers is that people, without regard to their means, prefer the smaller flowers for their own use. Of course there will always be a limited demand for the show blooms and larger flowers, but for several years the patrons have shown their preference for blooms that retail at $1 to $2 per dozen.

Lincoln I. Neff received a large funeral order Thursday afternoon which kept him busy all night and sent him shopping.

J. B. Murdoch & Co. report a satisfactory Thanksgiving business on all lines except carnations.

P. J. Demas, of the Exchange, got back from Chicago Wednesday morning in time to give the boys a hand with their Thanksgiving rush.

The committee having charge of the smoker to be given by the Florists' Club suggests that it will be a good night for the boys to pay their dues; they will have the secretary there ready to receive same, and they expect to give you full value for your money the same night. Don't miss the smoker, there are to be "large doin's."

Chas. T. Siebert, who has been very ill for some time, was down town Saturday, the first time for several months. Notwithstanding that he is far from being a well man, yet he has the same smile and kind word for everyone and sees only the bright side of everything. We wish there were more of him.

M. C. Dunlevy, carnation grower of Carnegie, has been very busy the past week preparing for the farmers' institute, of which he is secretary, which met in Carnegie, Monday, November 28. Mr. Dunlevy is one of the growers who believes in education along all lines.

Philip Breitmeyer, of Detroit, was a visitor on his way home from the east. Phil says to wait one year and he will show you the finest flower shop in the country.

F. H. Lemon, of the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., has been at the Hotel Henry, showing their two new roses, Richmond and English, Carnation Cardinal and the big late mum, Jeannie Nonin.

Hoo-Hoo.

CANANDAIGUA, N. Y.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Society held a very successful flower show November 15 and 16. The exhibition was much the largest ever staged in this city and the attendance very satisfactory. Among the principal exhibitors were Mrs. F. F. Thompson, Alex. Ogilvie, Jos. Jones and R. H. McKerr, the latter taking most of the premiums for carnations. Mr. Ogilvie made nearly a clean sweep of the classes for cut blooms of chrysanthemums, his varieties being mostly the Wells-Pockett set sent out last season.

AN error occurred in a recent advertisement of the Summerfield Floral Co., the address being given as Summerfield, Mo., instead of Springfield, Mo. This has been called to our attention by several parties who wrote to that address only to have their letters returned by the postoffice.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

Thanksgiving is past and it can be truthfully said that it surpassed last year by at least twenty per cent. The demand for flowers, from a retailer's point of view, was: Chrysanthemums first, carnations second, violets and Beauties third. Tea roses suffered greatly, there being practically no demand; consequently a large supply was left over. Several novelties were introduced in the form of hampers filled with violets and valley tied with a pretty ribbon to match. Orchids played a prominent part in this manner and were a decided acquisition.

Pumpkins and cabbages were used to fine advantage by Mr. Eastwell, of Smith & Fetters. The former were cut out to represent a basket with handle attached filled with seasonable fruit and handsomely finished off with flowers and chiffon. The cabbage was indeed a rare novelty, the curly variety being used. These were trimmed with violets and valley, also a large bow of ribbon attached, which made it quite complete. I don't wonder they had a large demand for them, as they were just the thing for a Thanksgiving centerpiece.

At Gasser's the orchid novelties were about cleaned out when I managed to get around. Mr. Darnell says that everything cleaned up nicely and is perfectly satisfied with the volume of business transacted. He is of the impression that had the weather been better much more business would have resulted.

C. M. Wagner, of Erie street, did a fine business and has no complaint to make. Chrysanthemums, carnations and violets were called for mostly, and as Mr. Wagner handled twice the quantity of stock this year it speaks wonders for his business increase. Miss Eadie, also of Erie street, had a good call for chrysanthemums and carnations. A nice lot of Paper Whites and Romans were used in mixed boxes of flowers. Violets had a fine run and were sold out by Thursday noon.

Collins & Harrison opened a fine store at 146 Euclid avenue on November 21. It was a most auspicious opening and from the quality of stock handled it is a certainty they are on the right track to catch the best trade. They have a perfectly equipped store and an ideal location, being in the business center. Mr. Harrison is highly pleased with their Thanksgiving trade. It proved considerably greater than they had anticipated. Their specialty was Beauties and hundreds were used. Violets and chrysanthemums of the best quality were cleaned up, as were also carnations. A few pots of poinsettias gave evidence that it is not their day and must take a back seat until Christmas.

J. M. Gasser has been on an extended trip west.

Mr. Smith, of Smith & Fetters has been called to New York by the serious illness of his brother. Forest City.

Kansas City, Mo.—The Budd Park Greenhouses will add about 1,200 feet of glass and a new boiler early in the new year.

Louisville, Ky.—C. W. Reimers has two houses full of poinsettias, 11,000 for cutting for Christmas. He also has a large stock in small pots for making up in pans.

ABOUT ROSES.

We are now in that season of the year in which roses that are grown outside should be transplanted and pruned. Owing to the peculiarly warm weather we have had during the preceding month the plants are still in a growing condition, and owing to the absence of frost they are still covered with plenty of bloom and young foliage. To transplant them at this time considerable care must be taken in handling or they will receive a check from which they will not recover for many months, if they do at all. Our planting season is now on and nurserymen are receiving plenty of orders for this class of stock.

It is a good plan to dig all the roses from the nursery rows and, after trimming all the foliage off and cutting back the longest runners on the climbers and strong growing hybrids, to heel them in a space by themselves. Give them a good soaking to pack the top soil around the roots and, if we have a continued dry and warm spell such as present conditions indicate, it is a good idea to sprinkle them frequently. Roses handled in this way will commence in a few weeks to make quantities of fibrous roots, when all danger in handling them will be passed.

Many growers and retailers handle their stock in the early spring and throughout the summer in 5-inch and 6-inch pots, in which case this is the proper time to pot them. It is a good plan to put a handful of well rotted manure in the bottom of the pot when planting them and they will respond splendidly later in the season with an increased growth of foliage and flowers.

Roses in pots should always be plunged in the ground as soon as planted, as it is impossible to grow a nice plant where the outer surface of the pot is always dry during the spring and summer, as in this latitude. Roses that are heeled in can be handled with bare roots until the end of March, but after that they should be planted out in the ground or planted in pots.

Regarding the soils in which roses flourish best we have many inquiries. Heavy black soil seems to fill all requirements, especially for hybrids, hybrid teas and climbers. The tea varieties grow fairly well in light, sandy or gravelly soil, but they also do better when planted in stronger ground. I have frequently seen strong plants transplanted from adobe to sand actually starve to death in one season, even when given the best of situations and care, and it is safe to say that the only proper soil for roses is the heaviest that can possibly be had.

I do not believe in the wholesale pruning of roses unless to rid them of unruly growths or small weak wood. When we have an almost endless growing season, as we do here in California, it is very easy to cripple and permanently impair the future value of a strong growing sort by injudicious pruning, and unless, as I have before stated, the plants are unshapely or given to extraordinary branching, I have yet to find any advantage in the wholesale pruning of roses when intended for ordinary garden culture. G.

Thanksgiving has come and gone and the weather was all that could be desired. Regarding business, all the florists with whom I have spoken are well satisfied. The prospects in the early part of the week were not much to brag of, but by Tuesday evening orders began coming in very rapidly and Wednesday brought a perfect avalanche of business. stock sold at from $5 to $6 per dozen.

Roses, except American Beauties, did not bring any higher price than they have for the past month. Carnations were in ample supply and sold well. Fancy sorts cost the retailers 50 cents per dozen and most of the other varieties sold at about one-half that price. Narcissi are very plentiful and valley scarce. Smilax is getting to be a drug and maidenhair fern shorter of stem. Roman hyacinths are more in evidence than they have been and are still selling at three dozen for a dollar.

Various Notes.

Chas. Beebe, of Trumbull & Beebe, reports that his firm is receiving many inquiries for fine ornamental stock for the coming season.

L. Wickstrom made several very large and elaborate theatrical designs during the past week.

Considerable complaint is being received from Berkeley residents, owing to the fact that the best gardens in the town have been despoiled of their finest plants by thieves during the last few months. Prof. Hilgard, the botanist, whose grounds are among the finest in that burg, has lost many valuable shrubs and flowering plants.

Louis Castellero, a gardener and florist living at Silver and Cambridge street, fell from a San Mateo car on Sunday and sustained a fracture of the skull from which he died at St. Luke's Hospital.

James Skinner, of Portland, Ore., is in town. He supplies a majority of the dealers with Christmas trees and greens.

John Welsh, one of San Francisco's pioneer gardeners, is dead, aged 70 years. He was well known and had worked in many of our largest commercial places. G.

ROCKFORD, ILL.—F. J. Johnstone has opened for business at Chapin court and Rural street, where he has invested $5,000 in new greenhouses.

BALTIMORE, MD.

Thanksgiving business was all that could be expected. I believe everybody here did a nice business, selling about all the stock there was to be had. At the Exchange business was better than any previous Thanksgiving. Everything sold out clean and considerable more could have been disposed of. Violets and good roses were the scarcest articles. This week has opened with good demand and stock a little short. Mums are practically done, Jerome Jones being the only variety of consequence now coming in. The Exchange is in receipt of the first shipment of sweet peas for the season. Paper Whites are beginning to arrive and sell very well. Prices advanced very little last week. Beauties going at $2 to $4 per dozen, teas at $4 to $8 per hundred, carnations at $1.50 to $3, violets 60 cents to 75 cents.

W. L. Kennedy, of Kennedy Bros., has opened a retail store at 702 N. Fremont avenue.

The thermometer registered as low as 16 degrees here early Monday morning, this being the coldest we have had here this season.

A. F.

TAUNTON, MASS.

Thanksgiving trade was fully as good as in 1903. The principal demand was for yellow chrysanthemums and pink and red carnations. White flowers moved more slowly, but practically everything cleared out. One of our local florists advertised a sale of $1 chrysanthemums for 25 cents on November 22 and warranted them to keep fresh until Thanksgiving! This did not affect the trade for good stock. There was a nice demand for pot plants and taken all in all business was very satisfactory.

COLOR LINE NOT AFFECTED.

Madison, N. J.

I desire to say that your Fumigating Powder has given me entire satisfaction. I have always found it very efficient in destroying insect pests and without injury to plants, and not affecting the color of flowers, which makes it valuable, especially in rose houses. See page 106.

ST. PAUL.

Thanksgiving business was very good, with scarcely enough stock for the demand. Everything sold well, but violets were easily the leaders. Mums are nearly all gone and no one is sorry, for they are the cause of much work to the retailers and anxiety to the growers.

November has been one of the warmest on record. Nothing is just right with the growers. Roses all came in crop at once and could not be kept back; violets have not bloomed as they should; the plants look nice but blossoms are scarce; carnations are doing fairly well, but do not yield as they should.

During the summer one of the confectionery stores put in a cut flower stand and has been selling flowers regularly ever since. It is conducted by a Greek and flowers are sold cheap, most of them being shipped in.

Miss Dartt has built a violet house on the west side.

A. H. Bunde is running the place formerly conducted by W. J. Lempke.

H. E. Philpott, of Winnipeg, was a recent caller. X. Y. Z.

DETROIT.

George Leadley, the Woodward avenue florist, has bought an apartment building valued at $30,000, giving, it is stated, $10,500 cash and some real estate in exchange.

John Breitmeyer's Sons are going ahead with their plans for building as announced in the REVIEW several months ago. An eight story building 56x70 will be erected at a cost of $90,000. The lower floor will be used by the firm and the upper floors rented as offices. While rebuilding is going on the store will be removed to the building with the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange.

The Florists' Club went to Belle Isle park November 22 to inspect the new greenhouses erected there the past season.

A BIT OF MUM HISTORY.

I have just referred to a catalogue of chrysanthemums issued in 1869, by John Salter, then of the Versailles Nursery, at Hammersmith. In that catalogue he gives the names of a dozen or so of Japanese chrysanthemums, representing about the third generation of seedlings from the original, sent home to Mr. Robert Fortune from Japan in 1862. The early forms of the Japanese were tall, somewhat gaunt and inclined to be late in flowering, in fact, in this particular catalogue, Mr. Salter remarks that "many of the Japanese remain longer in bloom and flower later than the Chinese kinds, so that we may have our greenhouses gay with them all through the dull winter months when flowers are scarce;" and in arranging his plants in his show-house, toward which many an enthusiastic member wended his steps in November, Mr. Salter always placed his Japs behind his large flowering kinds, because they were of taller growth and later in blooming. What a change has been made in the group by raisers! We have now an abundance of Japs which bloom in October, and onward until February. The term "incurved" was not used by Salter as a heading to a section; in 1869 this type came under the head of large-flowered varieties, incurved and reflexed being mingled together under this heading. There were a few of the anemone type, both large flowered and pompons, but the Japanese anemone-flowered appeared to be unknown then. Of the true incurved varieties exhibited in 1869, only a very few indeed find a place in catalogues in the present day.—RICHARD DEAN, in the H. T. J.

FROM OUR ENGLISH EXCHANGES.

The Gardeners' Chronicle.

MRS. FLIGHT is a most valuable addition to the list of rambling roses, and is likely to still further increase the popularity these roses at present enjoy. This variety has a vigorous habit, the growth being somewhat stouter and more erect than many of the rambling roses now in cultivation; but it is not so stout as to prevent the plants presenting that elegant aspect for which the rambling roses are remarkable. The flowers are semi-double, about two inches in diameter, and produced in huge trusses, the number of blooms ranging from twenty to thirty in each truss. The color is a bright rose-pink, and the finely developed trusses are very effective, both on the plants and when cut and arranged in vases.

THERE ARE NOW SEVERAL varieties of brilliant bougainvilleas in cultivation, but among the many none has such large bracts or such consistently large bunches of flowers as the variety named Maud Chettleburgh. In addition to exceptional size and profusion, the bracts are a deeper shade of purplish rose than seen in the well-known B. glabra, so that altogether the newcomer may be regarded as the finest member of the genus, seeing it can be readily flowered in a quite small state, plants in 48-sized pots carrying fine bunches of showy braets. The stock has been acquired by Wm. Bull & Sons, Chelsea.

PROBABLY THE MOST POPULAR double zonal pelargonium (geranium) in England at the present day is F. V. Raspail, rich scarlet, which was sent out by Lemoine in 1878, and after being grown to a limited extent in England, was almost lost to cultivation till about ten years afterwards it was unearthed from obscurity, and at once bounded into popularity, which at the present time has not one whit abated.

IN THE NEAR FUTURE Isatis glauca will become a favorite alike with the hardy flower lover and the park superintendent. At Kew it has this season attracted so much attention that hardy plant dealers are sure to have many inquiries for it. It grows about four feet high, its light green stems being furrowed and furnished with glaucous green leaves that are elongated lance shape, each having a conspicuous white midrib. The growths are surmounted by loose, spreading, freely branched panicles of light but bright yellow flowers, and, though the flowers are individually small, they collectively produce a very pleasing effect.

Are all flower growers liars?

SURELY this cannot be true; well, we have over 100 growers who have written us, a large majority without request, their opinions; we publish a few of these letters in the columns of this paper; see on pages 92-95-97-107, what they say about the FUMIGATING KIND TOBACCO POWDER. All began with a five-pound trial bag at our expense, which gave them an opportunity without cost to prove its GOODNESS and our assertion that it was the most effective, cleanest and quickest, as well as cheapest (10 cents per 100-foot house) article to fumigate with, and that all kinds of aphis can be killed in one night. Let us send you a five-pound trial bag by express, it will cost you nothing but the express charges on it, and be convinced that what your brother growers say of it is true. Our booklet tells of it; we mail it on request.

HEATING A SMALL HOUSE.

What heating arrangement is applicable for a small house when water sometimes rises in the ground to within two feet of the surface? Can hot water be used successfully, with any boiler on the market when no more fall can be had? What we want is an all-purpose house, but mainly for propagating dahlias, which would require a moderate portion of space with a bottom heat about 20 degrees above the regular temperature of the house and the balance for the plants after potting off. Is there any way to heat with a flue or a combination of flue and water pipes in furnace that will not be liable to the escape of gas in the house? W. F. B.

Unless the house under consideration is only intended for use during a portion of the year I would not advise attempting to heat it by means of the flue. While the flue has been extensively and successfully used, it is no longer looked upon as a satisfactory or economical means of heating a greenhouse. You can, however, successfully combine the flue and hot water system of heating. A flue can be constructed of brick or of terra cotta pipe and made to furnish heat to one side or all the way around a house. The furnace can be so made that several loops of pipe will be carried immediately over the fire, which will heat the water for a considerable amount of radiation. A combined flue and hot water heating device of this character was figured and described in the REVIEW of December 31, 1903, page 269. The size of the firebox and the number of coils of pipe necessary to heat your house will depend upon the size and exposure of the house, as well as upon the temperature desired. Without this information, however, it is impossible to give specifications. If it is possible to lower the boiler two feet below the general surface of the soil and still be free from water in the boiler pit there are several types of small hot water heaters which might be successfully used. If the size of the house and the temperature desired were known more helpful and satisfactory information could be given. L. C. C.

A combined flue and hot water heating device of this character was figured and described in the REVIEW of December 31, 1903, page 969. The size of the firebox and the number of coils of pipe necessary to heat your house will depend upon the size and exposure of the house, as well as upon the temperature desired. Without this information, however, it is impossible to give specifications. If it is possible to lower the boiler two feet below the general surface of the soil and still be free from water in the boiler pit there are several types of small hot water heaters which might be successfully used. If the size of the house and the temperature desired were known more helpful and satisfactory information could be given. L. C. C.

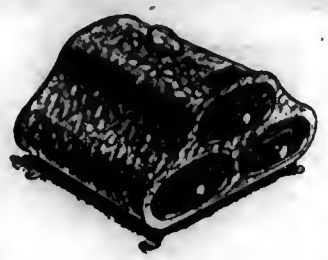
The Market.

Thanksgiving trade was a record-breaker. The demand for flowers is increasing annually for this day and, while prices do not soar up to Christmas and Easter levels, still a fair price is obtained for everything seasonable and stock in all lines was cleaned up. There were not a great many advance orders, but there was a heavy demand toward the last moment, which cleaned up everything in sight. There was quite a call for chrysanthemums and as usual this holiday cleaned up the cut. Violets also sold well, although the supply was limited. In carnations there were enough to go around and the quality was exceptionally fine. There were enough roses to meet the demand. There was also an abundance of stevia, Paper Whites, Romans and lily of the valley to help fill out. Nearly all the florists report a satisfactory trade.

Various Notes.

Alex. Klokner is holding a chrysanthemum show at the Palm Garden this week. He has on display a lot of plants and cut flowers that were grown in his own establishment, many of them being prize winners. He also received an additional lot of large stock from some of the prize winners at the Chicago show and the public has taken considerable interest in the display. He has a large display of bay trees and various tropical plants.



Holton & Hunkel are about ready to move into their new quarters.

Recent visitors were Mr. and Mrs. Carl Meier, H. M. Reinecke, Green Bay; Louis Hartung, Two Rivers; J. E. Matthewson, Sheboygan; M. Reukauf and B. Eschner, Philadelphia. Incog.

Sioux Falls, S. D.—L. S. Elwell has had a very nice lot of stock this fall and finds business good.

PLANTS FOR FORCING.

AZALEAS FOR EASTER.

On account of Easter this year coming so very late (April 23) a season of the year when our regular spring shipmends demand our full attention, we have decided not to carry a supply of Azaleas until then, but to close out our entire stock as quickly as possible, therefore customers who usually procure their supplies late in the spring will do well to cover their needs at once. The principal sorts now in stock are Mme. Van der Cruyssen and Bernhardt Andreas Alba, the two best late flowering sorts of their color. These two varieties can be furnished in any proportion desired, but the selection of other varieties must be left to us.

We will still supply early orders at import prices.

12 to 14-in. crowns.....$ 6.00 per doz.; $ 45.00 per 100
14 to 16-in. crowns..... 7.00 per doz.; 55 00 per 100
16 to 18-in. crowns..... 12.00 per doz.; 100.00 per 100

DEUTZIAS FOR FORCING.

Strong two-year-old field grown plants suitable for 6-in. pots.

Gracilis.....Per doz., $0.75; per 100, $6.00
Gracilis Rosea.....Per doz., 1.00; per 100, 8.00
Gracilis Lemoinei.....Per doz., 1.00; per 100, 8.00

AZALEA MOLLIS.

For early and late forcing Azalea Mollis is rapidly gaining favor; easily forced at a minimum cost for heat and labor, they are profitable stock for the retailer to handle. We are supplying at present an unusually fine grade of plants, 15 to 18 inches high, and covered with flower buds, $4.50 per doz.; $35.00 per 100.

FORCING LILACS.

A fine lot of pot grown plants, well set with buds and in prime condition for forcing, $6.00 per doz.; $45.00 per 100.

RHODODENDRONS FOR FORCING.

These are being used more extensively every season, and this year, with Easter at such a very late date, should prove especially acceptable, as they can be retarded much easier than Azaleas, and at the same time may be flowered at just the right moment at a minimum cost. We are carrying an extra large stock of bushy well shaped plants, 16 to 18 inches high, covered with buds, $9.00 per doz.; $70.00 per 100. Larger plants, 20 to 24 inches high, fine specimens, $11.00 per doz.; $90.00 per 100.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

NOTES ON NOVELTIES.

Merstham Red is a very good color and the broad petal shows to fine advantage, though the flower is not so full as one could wish. It will, however, be given another trial under more favorable conditions another year and reds are not yet so numerous that we can afford to condemn any variety too quickly.

Mrs. H. A. Allen is a deep pink and showed up very prominently in the Wells gold medal lot at Boston. While it is full to the center, it is more of a loose spreading flower than Duckham or other recent pinks and is chiefly useful to the exhibitor.

Dora Stevens reminds me more of an old favorite, Chenon De Leche, than any other variety I ever grew. The color is grand, a bright, rosy cerise, and the shape of the flower is very attractive. It does not scale high as to size compared with some present day monsters though I think it can be improved next year in this respect.

Lady Cranston is a sport from Mrs. Barkley and as exhibited last year in Edinburgh was almost a pure white. This was considered a very fine variety and was awarded a silver medal as the best novelty. Mrs. Barkley is an incurving pink but the sport in every instance showed a replexed petal, which was much more pleasing, I think. When our flowers began to open it was found that the color was much the same as the parent, Barkley, and inquiry on "the other side" as to the why and wherefore reveals the fact that all the stock has reverted back to the pink of the parent and only the reflexing petal remains to distinguish Lady Cranston from Mrs. Barkley. Whether it will change again next year remains to be seen but Lady Cranston, if it is sent out at all to the trade, must be classed as a pink.

BRIAN BORU.

REVIEW OF THE SEASON.

As an Exhibitor Sees Varieties.

In accordance with my custom for the past four or five years I will look over the field and record my impressions by giving a list of thirty varieties, standard kinds, that have been prominent in the shows this year. It does not, of course, follow that varieties do equally well all over the country, but in the main these kinds will be found best for exhibition growers:

Whites, Merza, Ben Wells, Guy Hamilton, Nellie Pockett, Timothy Eaton and Madame Carnot.

Yellow, Mrs. E. Thirkell, Cheltoni, F. S. Vallis, Col. Appleton, General Hutton and Yellow Eaton.

Pink, W. Duckham, Leila Filkins, Lucy Evans, Lady Hopetoun, F. A. Cobbold and W. A. Etherington.

Red, Henry Barnes, H. J. Jones, S. T. Wright, Maynell and Lady Roberts.

Any other colors, Donald McLeod, Bessie Godfrey, Mary Inglis, John Fraser, Harrison Dick, W. R. Church and Ethel Fitzroy.

Novelties, are purposely omitted from this list because they have been mentioned a good deal already, from time to time, in these notes, and so long as they are not in general cultivation comparison is hardly fair.

The white section is distinguished chiefly by the fact that Merza seems to get larger every year. The flowers shown have been marvels of size, combined with perfect finish and any new white that has to run the gauntlet of comparison with Merza suffers very considerably. Nellie Pockett, Eaton and Carnot are known to everyone and need no comment. Ben Wells as a loose type of Japanese is a grand exhibition flower and so, in fact, is Guy Hamilton, though its constitution is rather delicate. The whites are reinforced this year considerably by the addition of Emily Milcham, Mrs. D. V. West and Mlle. Jeannie Nonin.

In the yellows, F. S. Vallis and Thirkell were enormous in size everywhere, the first named being probably the largest variety in cultivation today. For a refined, beautiful flower Cheltoni will win but it is a little too early in flowering to keep for any later show than the first week in November. Novelties in the yellows are Mrs. W. Duckham, Merstham Yellow and Alliance.

In pinks, Lucy Evans and Lady Hopetoun are perhaps the least known of the kinds mentioned; they are both very good, replexed in shape and clear colors. Duckham, as is natural for a variety so widely disseminated, has come in for some criticism, but the best growers are all delighted with it, and the way it has been exhibited in the east stamps it as the king in its color. This variety needs good culture, early planting and a crown bud. The terminal bud produces a flower with an eye and a deficiency of petalage. It was widely mentioned by disseminators that crown buds should be taken, yet so many growers drift along in the old rut, take their buds any time in September in spite of what they read, and then write to their paper to know why Duckham has not come up to the good reports they had heard of it. The pink novelties of the year are Valerie Greenham and Mrs. H. A. Allen.

In reds, Henry Barnes is the finest colored variety. Lady Roberts is particularly showy but a poor "doer." Maynell makes a very large flower, though apt to turn over and have a crooked neck. This crooked neck, by the way, did not develop on the first year's trial. S. T. Wright should be taken on a late bud to get the lovely coloring. Crown buds make a closely incurving flower that has been exhibited as a bronze in several places.

In the any other color, W. R. Church is the best. The only trouble with it is that the color is hard to classify. Set up as a crimson it has several times been turned down by the judges because the reverse, which generally shows, is a steely bronze, while set up as a bronze it would be killed on color by Harrison Dick or Donald McLeod. In a class for six vases thirty-six flowers Church is most valuable, the unique color making it very distinct.

Bessie Godfrey has a long neck that does not improve its appearance but the color is useful, and growth good. Mary Inglis has shown an eye with some growers but it is the old story of terminal buds instead of crowns. The man who tells you that there has been no progress in mums of late years is the same man who has not improved his methods and system of culture during that time. All buds look alike to him, and "where ignorance is bliss" perhaps it's folly to be wise. The any other color has some notable accessions this year in Mrs. J. A. Miller, J. H. Doyle, Sensation and several good French varieties.

Speaking financially, the exhibitions all over the country were a success and in point of attendance, except in isolated cases, the year was a record breaker. Surely there is great encouragement in this, and, though it has taken years of hard work and effort to accomplish this end, it reflects the highest possible credit on the men who have kept everlastingly at it trying to make a flower show a success on its merits alone. It does seem that at last the great American public is beginning to appreciate the fact that a flower show is worth a good deal to a community that makes any pretentions to culture and refinement.

Next week we will review the commercial side of the mum as far as our own experience goes in that direction.

Brian Boru.

Chrysanthemum Merstham Red.

LATE VARIETIES.

I would like to ask for a list of chrysanthemums that are best for Thanksgiving. Also what varieties, if any, are good for Christmas. A. S.

Late-flowered chrysanthemums are more a result of special treatment than of being naturally late flowering-kinds. Varieties that will come in naturally somewhat late are Chadwick, Superba, Merry Christmas, Mrs. Jerome Jones, Bonnaffon and Golden Wedding. While some of these kinds can be held until Christmas I always think they look poor enough by Thanksgiving. The old W. H. Lincoln, if it is still in cultivation, is a very good late yellow and I have seen it in fair shape at Christmas.

To get late flowers cuttings should be rooted late, June or July being early enough, and then encourage the plants to grow as long as possible before setting their buds. Keep the flowers as cool as possible without actual frost and after developing they will keep in good condition on the plants for several weeks. Brian Boru.

LEAF-SPOT.

I am sending you specimens of the foliage of some pot-grown chrysanthemums and would like to know what the trouble with it is. C. J.

The disease is a leaf-spot; septoria, I believe, is the scientific term for it. There are several forms of it, but they all arise from some well defined cause, the most common being an excess of moisture with not enough air through the plants. Chrysanthemums in the fall are hardly ever entirely free from leaf disease, owing to the dense growth they make, which prevents the sun and air from penetrating the soil and drying it out, but if spraying with Bordeaux mixture or potassium sulphide, copperdine or any other of the fungus-destroyers, is faithfully performed in the early stages of growth, the leaf diseases will not do much damage to the crop.

Brian Boru.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

Work of Committees.

Mlle. Jeannie Nonin, exhibited by The E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., November 19, at Boston, color white, Japanese, scored 96 commercial scale: 96 exhibition scale.

Dorothy Faust, exhibited by Wm. P. Craig, Philadelphia, December 3, before the Philadelphia committee, color white, Japanese incurved, scored 87 commercial scale. Fred H. Lemon, Sec'y.

LEAF-SPOT OUTDOORS.

In our chrysanthemum bed of earlies outdoors leaf-spot appeared slightly last year and in a worse form this fall. Because of the extended rainfall last spring the mums were not so strong and healthy as in other years. Late in September we put up our duck cover and nailed it tight overhead. In a week we drew the nails and rolled it back for leaf-spot was creating havoc beneath it. Is there any way of treating the soil of this bed to prevent leaf-spot next year? It is necessary to use this place for mums, especially from August on.

A. C. Z.

We would first of all get rid of all stock that showed any signs of the leaf rot during the past season, cleaning away every bit of decayed foliage. The soil should be loosened up and exposed to the winter, and if possible some entirely different crop should be raised there during the early summer. Assuming that this can be done, we would suggest potatoes or some crop that would leave the ground in perfectly clean condition. If this is not feasible, the ground should be worked over thoroughly several times, so that there is nothing left for the disease to exist on.

Then let new, clean, healthy stock be secured in the spring and grown in another location until the first of August, when they can easily be transplanted to where they are to bloom. This can be done very successfully on a cloudy day, or late in the afternoon, providing that they are well watered. We would then give frequent sprayings of weak

Bordeaux mixture, even before there was any sign of the spot, as an ounce of prevention is worth many pounds of cure in this case. R. A. VINCENT.

ARAUCARIAS.

Kindly inform me how to root araucarias that were raised from seed. They are now about eight inches high, and I should like to root them, by your direction. G. W. F.

It is taken for granted that the seedling araucarias in question have formed at least one tier of branchlets, and the cuttings may be taken off below that tier of branchlets, using a sharp knife and cutting the stems about two inches below the branches. Do not attempt to remove the leaves from the stem of the cutting, as such action would result in more injury than benefit on account of excessive bleeding.

Plant the cuttings singly in 2½-inch rose pots, in either pure bar sand or in cocoa fibre. The large European growers more frequently use sand alone for this purpose, the sand being pressed down very firmly in the pots and the cuttings well watered in after planting.

The cutting pots should then be plunged in sand in a propagating frame, but the frame should not be placed in a very warm house, nor given strong bottom heat. About the same temperature as that given to carnation cuttings will answer for the araucaria cuttings. They must not be allowed to get dry. Keep the frame rather close and well shaded during the day, and sprinkle the cuttings lightly with a syringe on nearly every bright, dry day, but give air to the frame every night, the object being to keep the cuttings fresh and healthy during the slow process of callusing.

The operation of rooting araucarias is one that usually occupies from three to four months, and cannot be specially hurried by extra heat, the deliberation of the process having rendered it unpopular with the majority of American growers. The cuttings should be potted off as soon as the roots show through the sand, and will require careful handling at that time as the roots are very brittle.

W. H. TAPLIN.

Chrysanthemum Dora Stevens.

CARNATIONS

WEAKENED GROWTH.

Can Mr. Baur tell us what is the matter with our carnations? The enclosed tips speak for themselves. The plants are planted in a solid bed and have been throwing off a good crop of blooms, but now we see that some of the young growths are covered with brown spots and streaks. The plants have been kept on the dry side and 50 to 52 degrees at night. We noticed the trouble about four weeks ago. Since then we have given them a top dressing of bone, ashes and sheep manure, not very heavy. The variety is Queen Louise. We have Joost planted alongside of it and see nothing the matter with it and gave it the same treatment. We would like very much to have Mr. Baur's opinion of it.

A. B. C.

Your plants are suffering from what might be termed a sour stomach. This might be brought about by a number of causes. The most common cause is overwatering at a time when the plants are not in proper shape to stand it: Too soon after planting, or right after a heavy crop has been taken off and the plants have not started into a vigorous growth, or during a rainy spell. Overfeeding will also bring it on and I am inclined to think that in your case the top dressing you gave them was responsible for most of it. At the Carnation Society's convention at Baltimore, Prof. Woods read a paper on carnation diseases and he stated that he has found that the cause of this diseased condition is punctures by insects, usually aphis or thrips. I have no doubt that in many cases you will find this true. They puncture the leaves and suck the vitality from the plants, so that they are unable to take up as much nourishment as the soil contains, causing the plant to sicken and show it in this way. I am not prepared to say whether they are always responsible for the trouble or not. These insects are so small that often they are present without the grower being aware of it. At any rate it proves a breaking down of the plant and stimulants invariably make it worse.

The fact that other varieties planted alongside do not show the same disease does not signify anything except that the one is a heavier feeder or a hardier grower than the other. You will find that some varieties will invariably show traces of this trouble during midwinter, but as soon as warm weather comes on all signs of the trouble disappear. Queen Louise, Flora Hill and Innocence are fair examples. It shows that these varieties like warm, bright weather; the darker the winter, the worse the trouble. They will show this trouble less in a temperature of 54 degrees than they will at 50 degrees. Run them a little on the dry side and keep the stimulant away from them. A little air-slaked lime dusted on the soil will help them some.

When propagating avoid the diseased plants as much as you can, as the cuttings are sure to be weak. You will find, though, that the young plants of these varieties will almost always show some traces of it until warm, bright weather comes and strong growth commences. Selection of cuttings will not prevent it the next winter unless the proper culture is given. A. F. J. BAUR.

MIXED CARNATIONS.

The raisers of seedling carnations in quantity a few years ago found it a very great loss of revenue to give space to so many varieties as they desired and in such small quantity that they had no regular cut of any one color, but those who have persisted in the work and who retail their own product have found it possible to build up a trade on these mixed varieties which makes the cut from the seedling house as profitable, or nearly so, as the cut from any other house on the place. Fred Dorner, Jr., says that they have so educated their trade that they now have a sale for as many dozens of mixed carnations as they have for solid colors. They also find it worth while to grow a moderate quantity of odd sorts, such as purple with white variegation and other novelties, which work in nicely among these mixed dozens and are also very useful in boxes of the solid colors. In the latter case they often put in a couple of blooms of the odd sorts with a dozen of the standard colors. This, of course, is only done when the colors harmonize, and serves to attract the purchaser's attention to the oddity and he at once notices that he has received something additional to the flowers paid for. Anything which goes to impress the purchaser with a pleasing sense of novelty serves to keep that particular florist in the customer's mind.

DISCARDING LAWSON.

I read a note in last week's Review which stated that one of the best known growers would discard Lawson after this year. I have seen Nelson Fisher, Lawson's newest competitor, growing at several different places. The finest I ever saw were at the Thompson Carnation Co.'s place, at Joliet, Ill. Still many firms have houses of Lawson that eclipse any Nelson Fisher I have ever seen, and the records of the flower shows this fall tell the story regarding the quality of the blooms. Lawson certainly took care of itself by winning prizes in the classes for dark pink against all comers. At the World's Fair flower show, in the class for 100 dark pink, Lawson won first and second. In the class for best fifty dark pink Lawson won first. At the Chicago flower show Lawson won first prize in its class and won second prize in the great sweepstakes, beating everything in carnations at the show except Fiancee. After a round of the flower shows this fall Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson has seated itself more securely on the throne as queen of the dark pink carnations. Easy to root, easy to grow and very prolific, when a new pink is put on the market the first question that is asked about it is: "Is it as good as the Lawson?" If it is as good the originator will have plain sailing, and if it is better he will be unable to fill his orders, as the florists will be glad indeed when some one gets out a new pink that will beat Lawson.

An Observer.

SPORTS OF ENCHANTRESS.

Enchantress is showing many interesting sports, word of them coming from various and widely separated parts of the country. Probably the most valuable heretofore reported is the white sport which has appeared at at least two places. W. A. Harkett, of Dubuque, Ia., has a Scott pink sport of Enchantress, which, if it proves to have the attributes of the original, will prove a variety of exceptional value. The color speaks for itself. Mr. Harkett also has a blotched and striped sport of Enchantress, but the markings are not pronounced enough to give it value to the general grower. Mr. Harkett also has two sports of Lawson, light pink and Scott pink, which he is testing.

W. K. Partridge.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

W. B. Arnold, of The Rockland Greenhouses, Rockland, Mass., registers Variegated Lawson, a variegated sport from Lawson, snow white, marked with carmine, said marking being very distinct, without clouding or blending. Habit identical with Lawson and needs no description.

The American Carnation Society will issue a supplement to the regular premium list and this will go to press December 20. In it will be given the entry blank for the exhibition at Chicago, January 25 and 26, and the full list of premiums offered. Anyone desiring to offer a special premium for this exhibition will please forward particulars of the same at once to Albert M. Herr, Lancaster, Pa. Parties who are not members of the society can have this premium list mailed them on application to the same address. Albert M. Herr, Sec'y.

THE PARTRIDGE PLACE.

"Bloomhurst," W. K. Partridge's greenhouse establishment at Lockland, O., is well worth a visit at all seasons of the year. It is most interesting at this time, however, when carnations and roses are approaching their best. Although the roses are invariably of high grade, they are especially fine this season, even the Liberty, the most capricious of them all, behaving in a manner that speaks well for that variety if handled right. However, it is Mr. Partridge's opinion that there is ample room for a good red rose to take the place of Liberty. Golden Gate, as grown here, need not be relegated to a back seat. What it lacks in foliage it certainly makes up in size of stem and bloom, as well as in quantity. General MacArthur does not quite come up to expectations, although it is improving right along.

In carnations, Nelson Fisher is decidedly good and Mrs. Patten is unquestionably the standard of variegated varieties, being ahead of all its predecessors. Lady Bountiful is all that has been and is being claimed for it, though The Belle is a finer flower. Flamingo and Crusader are planted side by side and thus far the latter seems to be in the lead. Enchantress, as usual, is the "boss" in light pinks and, besides being a cup winner for Mr. Partridge, it is a moneymaker as well. Prosperity bids fair to usher in a prosperous crop for Christmas, but as a "cut and come again" variety it is simply not in it. Glacier is still grown in quantity, having proved a profitable carnation, although not in the fancy class. The Cardinal is being tested here. "An improved Estelle," he remarked, "ought to appeal to every grower, large or small."

Seven seedlings of his own, four white, one red, one pink and one crimson, are being tested the second season. From all indications one of the white ones is a winner, the bloom being exceptionally fine, the stem long and erect and the habit of the plant good. The red one is equally promising, its freedom being one of its best traits. The crimson is of the Harlowarden type but somewhat brighter in color. The pink is of a pleasing color, fine form, splendid habit and vigorous growth.

Mr. Partridge's new store in Cincinnati, an account of the opening of which has appeared in the REVIEW, bids fair to prove a great success. The attendance at the flower show given at the opening and the business resulting surpassed his most sanguine expectations. The accompanying illustration shows part of the decorative effect during the opening week. X.

HANDLING POINSETTIAS.

On December 10 stop watering and syringing the poinsettias; this hardens them and they will get into good shape to cut any time after December 20. If you want them sooner cease your watering accordingly.

I have tried every imaginable way of treating the cut bracts and I have obtained the best results, but with a little trouble. Have a small oil stove at the end of your greenhouse walk, with boiling water and cut your poinsettia the desired length. You want to be a little quick about this work as you want to get about three or four inches of the stem in the hot water; hold them in it about ten or fifteen seconds and take them right out into cold water. I find that by cutting just what one can handle, say six or eight of the long stems, you can have the ends together for the hot water. The idea is not to let the stems bleed, or as little as possible. Work this properly and your flowers will not wilt.

Now, one other matter, and very important. If you cut a part of a stem after you have cured it, it will be necessary for you to go through the same process as you did when you cut them in the greenhouses. It would be well for all florists to remind cut flower buyers not to cut the poinsettia stem, or if they should, be sure to burn or boil three or four inches of the stem; also avoid a draught on them.

Don't take up your plants until January 1, and, whatever you do, don't give them any water, but have them perfectly dry. Take them up carefully, see that you don't bruise the roots, bunch them closely together and heel them in a bench in your shed. C. W. REIMERS.

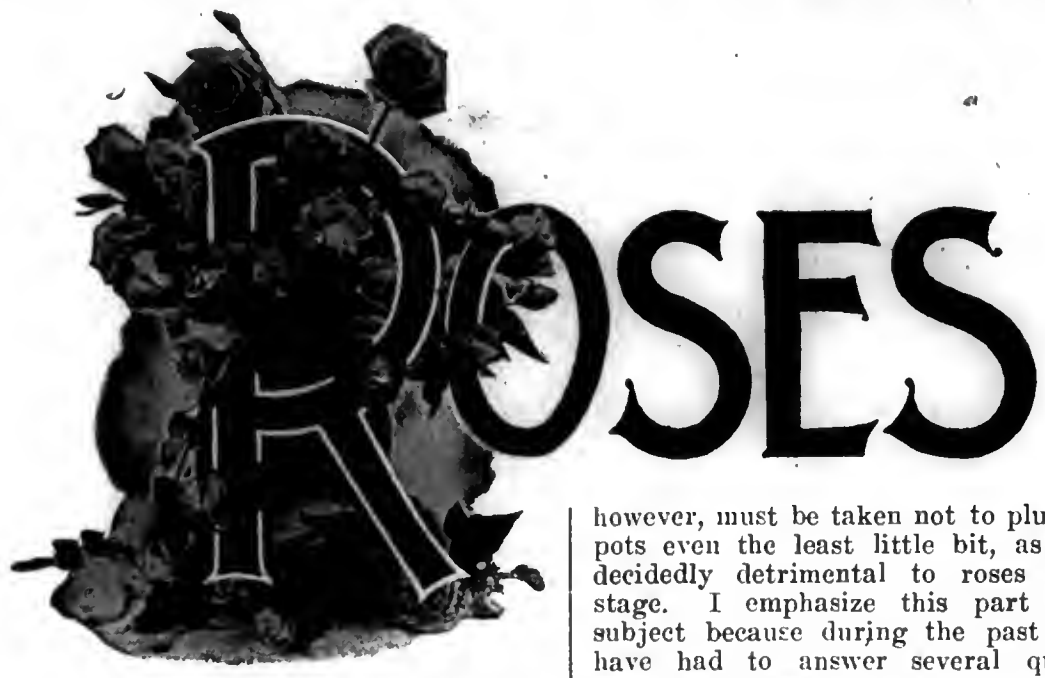
AN EXPERIENCE WITH LILIES.

In the REVIEW of November 17 there was an article on lilies in answer to a subscriber. The article intimates that lilies will not do anything if they are put into heat before making good roots. As you often ask for people's experience in different matters, we would like to tell you an experience we had with our lilies last year.

They were Japan longiflorums and through various causes we did not get them until November 10, at which time they were potted and put down in shallow cellar under our barn, where we have always been in the habit of keeping our bulbs.

Along in December, about the middle, we looked at them to see if they had commenced to make roots and we were rather alarmed to see that they had made absolutely no sign of either root or top growth. We wrote to a large grower in Philadelphia and he told us that it was hopeless to expect them to do anything that year.

Now comes the part that we would like to have some one explain. At the first of January we took them all up and put them into a house with a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees at night and in the full light. At that time they had shown no sign of life, as we had the bulbs out of the pots, and yet by the end of March we had the finest lilies we ever had, stems twenty-five to thirty inches high, fine foliage and from four to eleven flowers from medium-sized bulbs.



Now, we don't claim we have discovered anything new, nor do we expect to try it again; but as we came very near throwing the whole lot away, it would be well for anyone, who is in the same fix as we were to do what we did. We ran short before Easter and we went up to the city to try and get more, but did not see any finer ones than ours.

A NEW IDEA.

Here is a source of new business which may not have occurred to others than the originator. It happened not long since that Jones & Smith were opening a pretentious clothing store on Main street of a good sized town. They called in a local florist and gave him an order for a modest quantity of flowers for the opening. He was a nimble-witted gentleman and obtained from the new firm the names and addresses of a number of the firms from whom they had bought their new stock, also he obtained, from a copy of the clothing trade journal which he saw in their store, the names of a number of other firms whom he shrewdly suspected might like to sell goods to Jones & Smith. Returning to his store he wrote these people something as follows: "Dear Sirs: It may interest you to know that Jones & Smith are to have a formal opening of their handsome new store on November 28. I am writing thinking that you might like to express your good will through the medium of a floral offering to be delivered on the day of the opening." The result was that half a dozen firms responded with orders for very fine floral pieces.

The same idea might be worked in the opposite direction. The florist who is located in a manufacturing center, for instance, like Rochester in the clothing trade, might send a letter to a number of the manufacturers stating that when it was their desire to show good will to their customers through the medium of floral pieces for openings, etc., he would be glad to have the order, as he had facilities for delivering such work promptly through his correspondents everywhere in the United States. An occasional reminder of this character would be frequently productive of some good orders, which could be filled through the medium of the page for Leading Retail Florists in the REVIEW.

HANDLING YOUNG STOCK.

In the course of twenty-eight or thirty days after being put in the sand the young stock should be showing roots half an inch or more in length and should be potted immediately. The sand or other propagating medium contains no nutritive properties and if the young stock is allowed to remain in it long enough to break eyes and form wood, it must necessarily be of a very poor quality. The roots also will rapidly increase in size and in a short time become so large that it will be difficult to crowd them into a 2-inch pot; consequently many of them will be broken off, to the great loss of the plant.

Soil suitable for first potting should contain little manure or other fertilizer and, in order to make it suitable, it should be passed through a half-inch screen. The roots of the plant should be placed about one-third of the depth of the pot from the rim and the soil packed uniformly firm, leaving about one-fourth of an inch for water space at the surface. First watering should be performed very carefully. The soil must be thoroughly moistened clear through and, as this cannot be done with one watering without making the soil muddy, a condition which should always be avoided, it is advisable to go over the newly potted stock gently and repeat at intervals until the whole mass is moistened.

In selecting a bench whereon to place the young stock, due care should be taken to give them a nice, airy position, fully exposed to the sun's rays. It is folly to expect young stock to thrive in benches which are under shade the best part of the day, or in corners where even old stock refuses to do well, and yet in far too many places we find just such spots appropriated for young stock.

The bottom of the bench will require some sort of material spread on it in order to steady the small pots. No better material can be found than screened coal ashes spread to the depth of an inch. So long as this material is kept fresh there is little fear of poor drainage. Care, however, must be taken not to plunge the pots even the least little bit, as this is decidedly detrimental to roses at any stage. I emphasize this part of the subject because during the past year I have had to answer several questions where this practice was the whole cause of the trouble.

The temperature to which these young plants should be exposed should not exceed 56 degrees at night or range much higher than 70 degrees during the day and they should have plenty of ventilation.

Shading should be practiced only for the first four days and only then when necessity compels, as the sooner a young rose plant becomes inured to sunshine, so much more rapid will be its growth.

Plenty of water, care in syringing and an abundance of pure fresh air, accompanied with the above mentioned temperatures is all that is necessary to produce thrifty plants of a sound constitution, which, when planted in the bench, will delight the heart of the grower.

RIBES.

SOIL FOR ROSES.

I am sending a sample of the soil in which I planted some fine healthy roses last June. They have not turned out nearly as well as I have had them in other years. The plants are now two to three feet high and free from mildew, of which I had only a little this fall. I have kept a steady temperature of 58 to 60 degrees every night. The plants are now making new growth but not very strong. With the treatment I have given them they ought to be better. I think it is in the soil and would like to have your opinion. What chemicals could be applied to improve it? Would stirring the soil once a week be beneficial? I have stirred it once a month. C. L.

The surmise is correct; it is the soil that is at fault. There is little in the soil itself to support a rose and this class of soil is a poor medium with which to incorporate the essential elements. It is rather late in the season to stir the surface of the soil without causing injury to the roots.

spit from good pasture land, thoroughly incorporated and spread on to the depth of one inch, will surely be of benefit. When this is partly exhausted apply liquid food once a week. Be careful of chemical fertilizers until the stock becomes strong. Your temperature, if the stock is composed of Bride and Maid, would be more suitable if reduced to 56 degrees at night, allowing it to run up to 76 degrees during sunshine.

PRONOUNCING DICTIONARY

COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY FLORISTS' PUBLISHING COMPANY, CHICAGO.

Frequent inquiry as to the correct pronunciation of plant names has led us to compile the following list of names, selecting those in most common use in the trade, and including botanical terms most frequently met with in articles upon plant culture.

In our list we have used the following

CATTLEYA BOWRINGEANA.

One of the best of the autumn flowering cattleyas is C. Bowringeana. It comes in season just before C. labiata, covering what would otherwise be a rather dull season. This variety was first introduced from Central America in 1886. We find it succeeds well in the warmest end of the cattleya house, grown in pots or pans. For compost we use good osmunda fern fibre and have not found anything superior. C. Bowringeana is a very vigorous flowering variety, so requires quite large pots or pans. It is somewhat allied to the summer flowering C. Skinneri, which it resembles in color. The flowers are two and a half to three inches across, usually of a rich, rosy purple color, the front of the lip being deeper purple, with a transverse maroon band. In the variety lilacina the flowers are of a bluish color. Usually the racemes carry from ten to twenty-five flowers, occasionally as many as thirty to thirty-two. The illustration shows a raceme of forty-seven flowers, one of my plants produced the past season. The plant carried six large racemes and one or two small ones and was grown in a 15-inch pan. None of the other racemes carried over twenty-six flowers each.

As this orchid is now fairly plentiful and inexpensive, and comes in flower at a period when orchid blooms are rather scarce, it should be especially useful for florists who need choice flowers.

VEGETABLE MARKETS.

Chicago, Dec. 7.—Lettuce, heads, $3 to $3.50 bbl.; leaf, 30c to 35c case; cucumbers, 50c to $1.25 doz.

Boston, Dec. 6.—Tomatoes, 15c to 25c lb.; mushrooms, 60c to 75c lb.; lettuce, 25c to 35c doz.; parsley, 75c to $1 box; cucumbers, best, $6 to $8 box; seconds, $1.50 to $3.50 box; radishes, 20c to 25c doz. bunches; mint, 75c doz. bunches.

POLLINATING CUCUMBERS.

Some time ago I received this inquiry from a correspondent, "What is meant by pollination?" I had assumed that growers would know what the term meant but in this case, and no doubt in others, I was taking too much for granted. For the benefit of any who may not know I will try to explain what the word means, and would also like to impress on them the necessity of pollination to insure a free set of such subjects as tomatoes and cucumbers.

Pollination is the act of transferring the pollen (a yellow, floury substance) from the stamens to the pistil of the flower, where it must be placed before fertilization—or what is commonly called setting of the fruit—takes place. In cucumbers, melons and plants of this class the stamenate (male) and pistilate (female) flowers are quite distinct, though both are produced on the same plant. The female flowers of this class are easily discernible by having the miniature fruit, or seed vessel, immediately behind the flower. The flowers being distinct, they are not self-pollinating, but require the assistance of some outside agency to transfer the pollen from the one flower to the other. The natural agencies, when the plants are grown outdoors under natural conditions, are wind and insects, but under greenhouse treatment, in winter especially, neither of these agencies can accomplish the distribution of the pollen; hence the necessity of transferring it by hand from the stamen to the pistil.

Pollination is not always necessary for a crop of cucumbers, as in the case of what is known as the English frame varieties, which will swell and attain their full size without being fertilized, but of course will produce no seed. In England preference is often given to unfertilized cucumbers on account of the absence of the seeds. This class of cucumbers, however, has never become popular in America, our White Spine variety being generally preferred. For this fertilization is necessary before the fruit will swell. Cucumbers are one of the best adapted subjects for hand pollination. By simply stripping off or turning back the petals so as to bare the stamens the pollen may be applied direct to the pistil of the other flower, where it is held by a sticky substance with which it is provided. Bright days should, if possible, be chosen for pollinating, as on such days the pollen is not only drier and easier transferred but the stigma of the female flower is in better condition to receive it.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Receipts have been gradually on the increase during the past week, but there is still a good market for first-class material. Beauties are now the principal shortage and it is frequently impossible to fill orders for these. The long-stemmed stock goes farther than the medium and short lengths. It is possible to meet almost all requirements for good Bride, Bridesmaid, Chatenay and Liberty, but there is no surplus of the better grades and prices have held stiff and now are advancing. A good part of the cut is now placed in the best grade, but the demand for short stuff is dependent on the call for funeral flowers and these pull down the average considerably. The shortage of carnations has eased up, although the growers are still bringing in very light cuts and late orders are not always filled. Some days prices are much easier than they were a week ago, but they soon stiffen up again. There are large supplies of Romans, Paper Whites and valley, and these are making low prices. The New York violets are doing fairly well and singles clean up, but the receipts of Lady Campbell are frequently a problem for the wholesalers. Much of this stock is well sold if disposed of at any figure. There continue to be abundant supplies of "green goods," but prices on smilax are being marked up. The market is full of red berries.

"Subject to Change."

The wholesalers have been busy the past several days explaining to out-of-town buyers that "subject to change without notice" on the price lists means just what it says. Of course they all try to bill stock at quoted prices if at all possible, but the lists are never anything more than the wholesaler's best judgment of what prices will be, and once in a while the wholesaler's judgment is off, away off occasionally. One of these times was Thanksgiving, when practically every house in town quoted carnations of ordinary grade too low and had to bill them out at prices quoted for fancies, for it is supply and demand at date of sale which really regulate prices. To make matters worse, the same mistake was made the week after Thanksgiving, for no one foresaw that prices then would be above those for the holiday. Of course the market became easier after a few days, but it made the wholesalers lots of trouble while the great scarcity lasted. Probably this week it is the growers who are kicking, for the universal shortage led them to expect more than the stock really averaged.

Christmas Prospects.

What Christmas will see in the way of supply and prices depends wholly on the weather. There is plenty of stock in sight on the plants, particularly roses, if we have mild temperatures and sun, but weather like that of last week holds growth almost at a standstill.. Even under the most favorable conditions Liberty roses and red carnations will be far short of the demand. Beauties are also likely to be very scarce, short and medium lengths particularly so. White is never in heavy demand at Christmas and, whatever growers may be tempted to do, they are advised to send in their white stock as fast as ready. There will be a good market right along now.

The Florists' Club.

There was a special meeting of the Florists' Club Tuesday evening at the office of the Benthey-Coatsworth Co., for the purpose of taking immediate action to participate in the appropriation shortly to be made by the state legislature for experimental work at the experiment station at the State Agricultural College. Prof. A. S. Beal was present and told what is being done for other branches of horticulture, etc., and how it is financed. He said that the station authorities would like to put up a range of about five greenhouses and devote them to work in the interest of the florists. He told how to go to work to secure the necessary appropriation from the state. This is a matter which has been up before and which has the approval of every man in the trade. A committee was appointed to draft a resolution expressive of the club's position and to set an active campaign in motion.

The Florists' Club skipped the regular November meetings because of so much flower show activity but will meet tonight, at Handel Hall.

Various Notes.

Some of the special stock made very good prices the past week. The Benthey-Coatsworth Co. has been getting 15 cents for special Maids and one customer offered 18 cents on condition that he could have all that were received on a certain day. He got them. Peter Reinberg has had Liberty that brought $2 a dozen. Weiland & Risch have also been getting big prices for special Maids this week.

Poehlmann Bros Co. are looking forward to the Christmas business being the best in the history of the concern. The blue ribbons will have no small part in making it so.

C. R. Hills and G. F. Crabb, of Grand Rapids, were in town last week to transfer Crabb & Hunter's lease at the Growers' Market to the Grand Rapids Florists' Association. This was organized by nine firms, who have since been added to, who will do their selling as one. Mrs. Jamison, who sold Crabb & Hunter's cut is in charge.

E. E. Pieser says that he disagrees with those who do not count 1904 a good year for the florists. He believes that the trade at large was never so prosperous as during the year just drawing to a close and that the business in the Chicago market, in the aggregate, is ahead of the best previous year.

Phil Hauswirth's name among the Red Men is now Grandpa Two Times; his daughter has a lusty baby boy born last week.

Mrs. Simonds, wife of D. F. Simonds, of the Ogden Floral Co., passed away Tuesday morning. She had one son, Harry Simonds, who is employed by Percy Jones, in the Growers' Market, and the Market people sent a great standing wreath to the funeral, as a partial expression of their sympathy.

Gustavus Adolphson, an employe of the George Wittbold Co., shot himself in the basement of the store at 1657 Buckingham Place December 3. He was an old employe, was well liked and no cause can be assigned for his act.

Albert Kroeschell, the senior of the four brothers who comprise the company making the well known greenhouse boiler, died Thanksgiving day. The many friends of the firm extend sympathy.

H. N. Bruns lost a baby boy last week and has the sympathy of all.

M. Weiland had some very large funeral work at Evanston on Monday and made heavy calls on the market.

C. W. Reimers returned to Louisville Saturday night after spending a week here selling poinsettias. He was well pleased. Among others, Wienhoeber took 400.

John Lang, Melrose and Robey streets, has gone to his old home at Eisenach, Germany, expecting to return in eight months.

Many wholesalers handle wild smilax in quantity. It is not in the hands of any one wholesaler by any means.

W. B. Hilton has interests which will call him to Cuba again this winter and he contemplates going thence to the Pacific coast with his family. He will sell his store if opportunity offers.

The Wilks Mfg. Co. says that business is very good this fall. A great number of the smaller establishments throughout the country use their heater, it being admirably adapted to the work required in such places.

Baumann & Co. say the sale for Christmas bells has been far ahead of expectations. The market is well cleaned up on them.

J. D. Thompson says he already has over 30,000 carnation cuttings in the sand.

Stollery Bros. will have a goodly number of azaleas and considerable bulbous stock in pans for Christmas.

Bowling.

The bowlers are having their regular weekly contests and the attendance each Tuesday evening, at Thompson's alleys, is very large.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Only fair business can be reported since Thanksgiving, but the cold weather and approaching holidays should stimulate the retail trade greatly the next few weeks. The supply of stock at the commission houses has improved greatly and there is plenty of first class material to fill any size order without much trouble. The weather has been somewhat cold and cloudy since the closing of the World's Fair. On that day, Francis day, a number of large orders were filled. President Francis received a large number of great bunches of American Beauties from friends in the different departments. Every corner of his office was filled with flowers. This marked the closing of the great Louisiana Purchase Exposition, which did a great deal of good for all the local florists.

Holly and ground pine wreathing have made their appearance. A great many store fronts are putting on a holiday attire this early. Many orders are in for wreathing and holly and a heavy demand for both is expected from now on. Our wholesalers report a heavy demand for paper bells this year.

On looking over the stock at the wholesale markets Monday morning, I find a fine supply of Bride, Maid, Perle, Meteor, Liberty, Carnot and Gate, which have come down in price a little since Thanksgiving. Beauties in the long fancy grades are not over-plentifnl. Mediums and shorts are rather plentiful and demand good. Carnations are extra fine and have a heavy demand in all grades. Enchantress, Lawson and Wolcott have first call, with Nelson, Joost and White Cloud next. The whites have been in big demand the past week, with a good deal of colored stock left over after morning sales. Romans, Paper Whites and valley are moving satisfactorily, with plenty for the demand. Violets are also selling well, Californias much better than doubles. Prices on these are a great deal lower than last week. A few good sweet peas are in the market at $1 per hundred, but hardly enough to create a demand. A great deal of smilax was used up last week. Other greens had equally as good a demand. Fine adiantum and Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri are in the market enough for all demands.

Various Notes.

Charles Kuehn is having a big run on Christmas supplies from outside the city. Shipping orders for cut flowers are also large. The big wire department upstairs is busy with designs of all kinds.

Frank Ellis reports some large shipping orders the past week, both cut flowers and supplies. His Thanksgiving business was above expectations. His consignors are supplying some extra fancy stock these days.

At Henry Berning's a good shipping trade is reported in all lines. He has laid in a large stock for the holidays in supplies. "Billy" Winters and the Udes stock from Kirkwood are good sellers at this place.

Frank Fillmore reports trade good with him, especially in funeral work, with which they have been very busy of late. His carnation and rose houses are supplying all the stock used this fall.

Wm. Schray & Sons are also having a big run on funeral work of late and report good Thanksgiving trade.

Wm. Edlefson, of Milwaukee, was down the past week to attend the closing of the World's Fair.

Fred Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill., was a visitor the past week. He reports stock at his place in fine condition and home trade good during Thanksgiving.

ELMIRA, N. Y.

The sensation in local business circles during the past week was the announcement that Wm. Algie, president of the United States Cut Flower Co., had resigned his position. It has been known for some time that there was friction among the officers of the company, owing to differences of opinion in matters of management and policy. Meetings of the directorate have been frequent of late and finally culminated in the purchase by the stockholders of the stock held by Mr. Algie and his retirement from control of this large plant.

W. R. Compton, United States marshal and one of the largest stockholders, has succeeded to the presidency and Seymour Lowman, city chamberlain, has been elected to fill the vacancy in the directorate caused by Mr. Compton's advancement. The business will be conducted with some changes of policy, but will be upon the same sound financial basis as heretofore.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Conditions have changed since the last report. The supply of cut flowers has decreased with the advent of real winter, while the demand has increased, the social season being well under way. The city shops are just as busy as they can be, while from outside cities come heavy orders. The opening of congress on Monday took great quantities of all kinds of stock to Washington. To Baltimore went large shipments of valley, Beauties and other fine flowers for the first german, which opens their social season. Prices have stiffened a little, with indications that they may go higher. Choice stock of all kinds sells much better than the poorer grades. Gardenias and cattleyas continue very scarce. Carnations are improving in quality and sell well, as does valley. Greens of all kinds are in demand.

Roslyn.

Edward Towill, whose fine Liberties attracted favorable comment at the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society's fall show, has nine greenhouses near Roslyn. Five are devoted to Liberties, three to Beauties and one is a propagating house. The Liberties are chiefly grown in a range of Dietsch pattern short even-span, open between, in which Lord & Burnham Co. furnished material for three new houses to be added to one old one. The fifth house is low, with two beds and one walk.

The Liberties are full of vigor, throwing up heavy ground canes. They are all planted in solid beds without drainage. Two of these beds are filled with young plants. All the others are two-year-old stock transplanted last summer. All show remarkable vigor. The improvement in Liberty growing has been very rapid. A few years ago ground shoots came in June with Mr. Asmus; now Mr. Towill has them in November.

The Beauties look well. They have been producing heavily. It is planned to leave them in the solid beds the second year, this being their first season. The cut of this place is distributed by Samuel S. Pennock.

Germantown.

William Berger is one of the pioneer florists of Germantown. He started in a small way when Louis C. Baumann and Woltemate Bros. were the leading florists of that suburb. Since then Mr. Berger has worked steadily on, through good luck and bad luck, until today he has a nice range of glass back of his home on Queen street and a fine store and show in the center of the shopping district, where his son carries on a large business. It has taken lots of pluck and hard work to accomplish these results. For a long time the greenhouses did not pay enough and jobbing gardening was an important feature of the work. When the store was started, in a very small way, the odds and ends needed were at first a serious drawback. Gradually these obstacles were overcome and now the greenhouses and store support about a dozen men.

Mr. Berger has two houses of carnations, both in excellent shape. One is filled with Mrs. Lawson, the other with Enchantress and a few Boston Market. The Enchantress are all bearing freely. One lot, the finest, was planted in the bench in June and grown indoors all summer. The next was planted from 4-inch pots after the asters were over, while the third lot was field-grown.

There are a great many poinsettias in 6-inch pots from soft wood cuttings, the height varying with the age. Gardenias in 6-inch pots were wonderfully full of buds. Sixteen were counted on one plant. They have been bearing for some time. Two houses were filled with chrysanthemums, now all over but a few that are being saved for an order. They embraced the leading commercial sorts. Their place is being filled with callas, lilacs, freesia and other stock. Later there will be lots of lilies. There is a big palm house full of interesting things and the nucleus of an orchid collection.

Mr. Berger has a keen sense of humor: In describing the improvement in the class of customers from the tiny store, where they had to wait on the sidewalk until the person ahead was through inside, to the present commodious quarters, he said: "There was not so much cash business, but far more with rich people who didn't want to pay." Let us hope they did in the end.

Rose Richmond.

E. G. Hill came to this city all the way from Indiana last Saturday, bringing with him a handsome bunch of his new red rose, Richmond. Mr. Hill put his novelty in water in one of Samuel S. Pennock's storage rooms and then repaired to Horticultural Hall. From that point of vantage, Secretary Rust kindly telephoned to the rose growers to come to town and pay their respects. To show their appreciation of this courtesy and to prove that Philadelphia is not sleepy, a goodly number responded. Among the callers at Mr. Pennock's were W. R. Smith and the Gude brothers, of Washington. John Burton and George Samtman came in from Wyndmoor, Joseph Heacock from Wyncote, Robert Craig from West Philadelphia, Alex B. Scott from Sharon Hill, A. Farenwald from Hillside, Ed Towill from Roslyn, and Stephen Mortensen from South Hampton.

Comparing Richmond with Liberty, it may be said that the new rose is a shade brighter in color, the flowers more uniform in size, though a trifle less double. The stems are all strong, holding the buds erect, a quality not always seen in Liberty. The best blooms were not equal to the special grade of Liberty for which Philadelphia is becoming famous. This, however, may readily be secured after further cultivation. Mr. Heacock was particularly enthusiastic about Richmond.

Various Notes.

The Leo Niessen Co. filled some excellent shipping orders for Washington early this week, nearly all the staple varieties of flowers being used. They also report a good demand for carnations, over 10,000 being sent out one day.

Edward Reid has been receiving good Marie Louise violets from New York, which find ready sale.

William J. Baker has been receiving and distributing many choice carnations. Mrs. M. A. Patten, from William Swayne, is beautiful.

R. C. Hayden, secretary and treasurer of the Philadelphia Cut Flower Co., who has been ill for two weeks, is happily recovering. He was back at his office this week.

Fred Ehret continues receiving fine blooms of Dorothy Faust. The fame of this fine white chrysanthemum is going abroad.

Mrs. Charles E. Meehan, wife of the popular manager of the Flower Market, was badly bruised and shaken in a trolley accident a few days ago. Fortunately she was not seriously hurt and it is hoped will soon be about again.

Matrimony has claimed two of Charles Fox's able assistants. His daughter, Miss Fox, and Miss Corsen have lately been wedded.

B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., is home again, as busy as one could wish.

Charles F. Edgar, of Berger Bros., reports that they are receiving fine California violets from J. F. Johnson, of Lancaster.

Philip Freud, of H. F. Michell Co., states that good holly will be scarce, lycopodium about equal to the demand. This house does a large business in the above greens and in laurel wreathing.

John F. Andre, of Doylestown, is sending extra fine Bridesmaids to Fred Ehret.

A. E. McKissick, of the Leo Niessen Co., when in Baltimore last week, was privileged to see a very elaborate home wedding decoration arranged by Samuel Feast & Son.

I. A. Smith, of the H. F. Michell Co., states that barring a few medium-sized Japanese lilies and some odds and ends, their bulb season has been closed most satisfactorily. PHIL.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Since Thanksgiving we have had a very good market; prices are well maintained and in some cases slightly higher. Stock continues to clear out well, nothing but a little inferior material having to be carried over in the ice chests. The best grades of Brides and Bridesmaids are higher, making up to $12.50 per hundred. Some nice Liberties are coming in. This popular rose always sells quickly, the best making $15 to $20. Newtonville Greenhouses continue to send fine Bon Silene and Safrano to the Park street market. These sell at $4 per hundred, and the growers note an increasing demand for these old favorites.

Carnations are now of first-class quality, whites selling lower than the colored varieties. Some extra fine Enchantress, Fair Maid, Wolcott, Queen, Mrs. Patten, Flamingo, Harry Fenn and Boston Market are coming in. From $3 to $4 per hundred is the ruling price for fancy stock. Violets are rather scarce and in brisk demand. Singles make from $1 to $1.50, while Campbells average 75 cents. Chrysanthemums are nearing the end. The best bring $12 per hundred. A few lots of poinsettias are coming in and sell well. Prices on other commodities remain about the same.

Horticultural Society.

Quite a number of changes will appear in the prize schedule of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society for 1905. The committees in charge of the same hope to have it printed about January 1. A few of the more important changes are appended:

At the show on February 11, a class is allotted for six pots or pans of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, seven classes are given to carnations and two to violets. The orchid class is stricken out. The show of March 23 to 26, when the American Rose Society meets with the Boston society, has a substantial increase in prizes. The classes for groups of decorative roses, Easter plants other than bulbous plants and spring flowering bulbs are especially attractive. For the May and rhododendron shows few changes are made. Two additional classes are added for peonies on June 10. Sweet pea day comes July 8 and pentstemons on July 22. August 5 is perennial phlox day, August 12 annual day, August 19 gladiolus day and the following week China asters will be displayed.

No important alterations are made for the September show, but at the chrysanthemum exhibition a new class calls for twelve bush plants not disbudded and another for six plants in not over 7-inch pots carrying six flowers each. These are added on account of the increasing favor in which smaller flowers are held. Seven carnation classes are also added to this show.

The garden committee will offer prizes for the best herbaceous garden and the best peony garden. To encourage owners of small estates, prizes are offered for estates not exceeding three acres, the money being generously contributed by a prominent patron of horticulture. Classes are also added for vegetable gardens, lettuce and cucumber houses.

President Estabrook has signalized his election to office by encouraging his friends to join the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. He presented no less than eighteen applications on December 3, with more to follow. Nearly all are life members.

Various Notes.

The many friends of J. T. Butterworth were pained to learn of his critical illness last week. Mr. Butterworth underwent a very serious operation at the Framingham hospital on November 29. Peritonitis set in on December 2 and his condition causes grave anxiety. That he may pull through is the fervent wish of his numerous friends.

R. C. Pye, of Nyack, N. Y., was in town last week, accompanied by E. Jenkins, of Lenox. Mr. Pye brought with him blooms of Mr. Dolby's new seedling carnation, Senator Crane, which recently attracted much favorable notice at the Boston show. He has purchased the whole stock and has undoubtedly secured a good thing.

WIETOR BROS.

51 Wabash Avenue, ...CHICAGO.

J. W. Foote is sending in some superb Fair Maid carnations to the new market. A. Roper's new striped seedling, Chester Roper, shows up well at the same stand. Donald Carmichael, of Wellesley, is sending in extra good Enchantress, Fair Maid and Queen.

Norris F. Comley is trying Dutch bulbs as a side issue this year and has 45,000 tulips coming along, from which he hopes to reap substantial returns later.

Alexander Montgomery was in New York the past week in the interests of the American Rose Society. He reports considerable enthusiasm in that city for the show next March and says that everything points to a first-class show. W. J. Stewart, of this city, has been appointed to succeed Leonard Barron, resigned, as secretary of the American Rose Society.

Houghton & Clark had some extra fine cattleyas and poinsettias in one of their windows at their Boylston street store the past week.

W. E. Doyle, at his Back Bay and Beacon street stores, is showing some splendid Killarney roses, a variety which seems to be increasing in popularity. White camellias and Daphne Indica odorata were features in one window.

The North Shore Horticultural Society has elected the following officers for 1905: President, P. R. Sanborn; vice-president, W. B. Jackson; secretary, James Salter; financial secretary, James McGregor; librarian, Henry Clark. This society is in a flourishing condition.

At the Harvard Botanic Gardens, Robert Cameron has a beautiful lot of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. The primulas and cyclamens promise a grand display a little later.

Among the last of the chrysanthemums to be seen at the stores are Minnie Wanamaker, Maud Dean, still the best late pink in commerce; Chadwick and the old Cullingfordii. One or two growers have batches of Yanoma and Merry Christmas which they will hold for Christmas.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Clubs' next meeting will be held on December 20. It is possible that the members may decide to offer some gold and other medals for roses at the meeting of the American Rose Society in March. Quite a few of the members favor such action.

Some of our recent visitors tell us that New York and Chicago had bigger and better chrysanthemum shows than Boston. We do not doubt their bigness, but question their superiority in all-around quality. Of course, it is but natural for our bigger sisters to be a little jealous, but we would remind them that Boston had sixteen exhibitions last year, while all the energies of the New Yorkers produced but two and that of Chicago one show.

Yellow marguerites are very much in demand at present but rather scarce. Wax Bros. had quite a hunt for 1,500 the past week.

J. H. Delay had a decoration for Prince Fushimi on December 3.

J. W. Howard, of Winter Hill, grew the early spiræas shown by Zinn for Thanksgiving trade and referred to in our last issue.

William Spillsbury, of Woburn, brought in 19,000 Princess of Wales violets on Thanksgiving eve, 4,000 more than his nearest competitor.

Mrs. J. W. Rogers runs the Summer street store referred to in our last and does all her own buying.

A few Lilium Harrisi are now coming into the market.

At the dinner tendered to Prince Fushimi at the Algonquin Club on December 2, Galvin used white chrysanthemums chiefly in the decorations. At a dinner given by the prince himself on December 4 poinsettias were the only flowers used.

A number of charity fairs in which society people are prominent at the Vendome, Copley Hall and Thorndike, have used a good many flowers and plants during the past few days. First-class carnations brought as high prices as Bride and Bridesmaid roses at these functions.

F. W. Fletcher, of Auburndale, finds schizanthus very useful in his retail work and is growing several varieties of it, both in benches and pots. He finds it has wonderful lasting properties in water and is excellent in design work.

W. N. Craig.

Fall City, Neb.—Simonton & Pence have rented a part of Sowle's confectionery store and started a flower store.

NEW YORK.

Various Jottings of Interest.

A store to be called the Flower Market will open this week on West Forty-fourth street, between Fifth and Sixth avenues. It is a big store, with mirror effects and marble counters and is claimed to be a departure from present methods. Jos. Fleischman is at the head of it. Just what may be its object beyond selling cut flowers and getting the usual prices for them is hard to understand. It is stated that the company has associated with it nine prominent retailers and twenty-five growers. Looks like a combination of growers, retailers and wholesalers and the foretaste of the millennium! Near it are the old established shops of McConnell, Thorley, Siebrecht, Thos. Young, Jr., Wadley & Smythe and Dards.

Christmas is in the air. Down on West street the aroma of the north woods is already dominant. In the retailers' windows more than anywhere else appear the signs of the times. Already in one's imagination can be heard the Christmas bells, and their counterpart in many a size and style add to the interest of the decorations. Flowering plants, poinsettias, acacias, azaleas, ericas, begonias and orchids are already arriving and there will be no diminution of decorative floral art during the three short weeks that remain.

Thorley's Fifth avenue store windows are charming with great baskets and balls of Gloire de Lorraine begonias.

McConnell's was a mass of yellow Baby mums, the novelty which he has handled in great numbers since the fall flower show. Six large shipments of hundreds of this little beauty have been disposed of.

Jos. Leikens is building a conservatory back of his store on East Thirty-third street.

Stumpp & Walter Co. will dispose of 1,000 cases of holly this season.

Ralph W. Ward & Co.'s horse shoe brand of bulbs and plants will have the advocacy of W. A. Prosser this season, in addition to the other travelers representing this progressive firm.

The Clucas & Boddington Co. has an immense quantity of cold storage valley for Christmas flowering and Japan longiflorum, auratum and speciosum of special excellence and supply for any possible demand.

P. R. Quinlan, of Syracuse, was in town last week, purchasing goods for the holiday trade. He reports his new range of glass completed and large additions contemplated during 1905. His new and finely situated headquarters there give him views and facilities unequalled by any florist in western New York.

F. J. Baker, of Utica, was in New York on Friday. He has 60,000 square feet of glass, to which he is adding yearly, his ambition being to have an output of 1,000,000 ferns yearly before many moons. The sales now easily go above a quarter of a million.

The Mr. Maser referred to in our issue of November 24 as having been at one time in the employ of J. V. Phillips, of Brooklyn, should have been Mr. Mauer.

Harry Busby, who has worked for many of the growers on Long Island, was accidentally killed by his brother's horse on Saturday, the sharp hoof severing the jugular vein.

J. A. Peterson, of Cincinnati, is in the city for a few days with samples of his specialties, including the new white begonia, Turnford Hall.

John Harrison, of Jersey City, is now shipping his entire product to James McManus, including the White House carnation, 1,000 a day of this popular variety reaching him on the average. Mr. McManus says it compares favorably with any white in the market in size and keeping quality.

Adiantum Croweanum is now in fine demand and the price holds at $1.50. Mr. Raynor, who controls this specialty in New York, disposes of large quantities weekly.

A great day for the New York Florists' Club will be enjoyed by its members on Friday of the present week. C. W. Ward has provided a special train for his visitors and an abundance of good things and the Cottage Gardens will be "investigated" as never before in their history. The award committee will pass upon the merits of Lieutenant Peary.

The club will hold its regular meeting and the last one of the year at its rooms in the Grand Opera House building next Monday. The president declares it will be the banner meeting and Mr. Nugent will signalize his final official management as head of the commissary department by special and personal generosities. The bowlers will meet at the alleys on West Thirtieth street in the afternoon.

Bobbink & Atkins, of Rutherford, make steady progress. Their immense establishment is crowded with late importations, fine forcing lilacs, pot grown deutzias and other plants and shrubs in endless variety. Acacia paradoxa or armata for Easter flowering is a plant growing in popularity yearly for that season. Bay trees, from $5 to $500 a pair, occupy a house especially built for them. There is a fine stock of azaleas in bloom to be drawn from daily through the winter months. Palms range from 5 cents to $150 each and there are H. P., tea and standard roses in any quantity. No one should visit New York without spending a day with Bobbink & Atkins. To those who have never been there the call will surely be a revelation.

Bowling.

The bowling match between Hoboken and the New York club on December 1 was a success, not only in attendance and enthusiasm but in the maintenance of the unbeaten record of the New Yorkers. After the banquet, interesting addresses were made by John Birnie and Frank Traendly and a handsome toilet novelty was presented Phil Kessler, the winner of the high score of the evening, 198. Following are the scores:

The monthly meeting of the New Jersey Floricultural Society, held on December 2, was marked by the usual meritorious display of flowers. The annual election of officers resulted as follows: President, D. Kindsgrab, gardener for William Runkle; vice-president, Arthur L. Caparn, gardener for Stuart Hartshorne; secretary, William Bennett, gardener for A. C. Van Gaasbeck; treasurer, Malcolm Mac Rorie, gardener for Mandeville Estate.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The retailers and markets report business as holding its own since Thanksgiving, but nothing out of the ordinary has developed. While mums are still slightly in evidence there are not enough of them to cut any figure, and carnations are more in demand and prices on them are looking up a little. Lilies have dropped out of sight with the mums. Since mums have shortened up there is a better demand for other stock, although the supply of roses is so great that while the specials and extras bring a fair price, the commoner grades go begging. The same might be said of all other stock; there is enough good to supply the demand and send the seconds to the dump.

A trip among the wholesalers finds them looking quite cheerful. The Florists' Exchange and J. B. Murdoch & Co., both assure me that business is very good. The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. was busy getting out orders of red bells and evergreen box-wood, which they say is greatly in demand. They report trade as up to the average for this time of year.

Various Notes.

The unusually dry season is making great trouble for some of our growers, as their water supply has gone back on them and they are compelled to haul water some distance to keep their places running.

Mossbaur & Dick opened their new store last Saturday, and, as they gave carnations to all visitors, they were the busiest house in town Saturday evening.

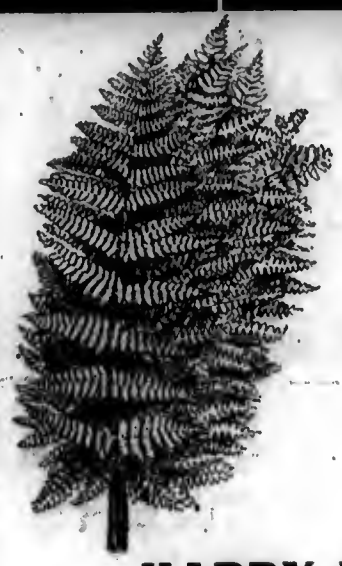
Wm. Faulk has purchased Sidney Gibbs' store at McKee's Rocks. As this is an old stand and the population of this bustling manufacturing town is increasing every day, he should make something out of it.

Miss Agnes L. Wells, of Steubenville, has moved into a new store, better located. She had her opening last Saturday.

Walter Breitenstein visited his old home in Beaver county, Saturday, and arrived just in time to carry the furniture out of the house, which was on fire.



Arthur Langhans, of Wheeling, W. Va., was a visitor the past week, looking at plants and anything new for Christmas.

Mrs. McLean and son, of Youngstown, were Monday visitors.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

We have had a mild, bright fall, which brought carnations out freely early in the season and has the rose crop so offish that a fear has been expressed that the crop may hit the holidays a body blow. Business has lately been good, with plenty of roses and too few carnations. While white is plentiful, it is color that is scarce, particularly red.

Wm. Cunningham has just recovered from a severe attack of appendicitis.

With some growers violets are doing nicely; with others, although the plants look fine and are in apparent good health, yet they are shy in blooming. It is expected that when the weather gets steady cold they may bloom better.

The Grand Rapids Florists' Association has been organized and has opened a stand in Chicago, 60 Wabash avenue, and will do a wholesale business. Crabb & Hunter have given up their stand and gone in with the association. Mrs. Jamison, who conducted Crabb & Hunter's stand, will be in charge. The association has nine members already, with the promise of several more. The promoters are Clarence Hills, Eli Cross, Henry Smith and Alfred Hanna. A meeting was held at Henry Smith's store last Monday evening to complete organization and attend to the details of handling the stand along lines similar to those of a commission store. G. F. C.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., C. N. Page, Des Moines, Ia; First Vice-Pres., L. L. May, St. Paul; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 23rd annual meeting will be held on the St. Lawrence, June, 1905.

ONION sets are again moving and at advanced prices.

THE KECK FLORAL CO., Washington, Ia., will put in a full line of seeds for the spring of 1905.

EGG PLANT seed is still hard to get hold of. Scarcity of good stock seems to be more than just a notion.

SAVOY LEAF SPINACH will be in demand later. Very short deliveries are being made, and no surplus was carried over.

ADDING Valentines to the very scarce stocks the bean situation at present is just as it was at this time last year.

REPORTS from Iowa and Nebraska speak of the very fine quality of the seed sweet corn now in the drying houses.

ALFRED EMERICH, of Vilmorin-Andrieux & Co., Paris, sailed from New York for home December 1 on the La Savoie.

CANADIAN-GROWN seed peas are not any freer of bugs that usual; otherwise the samples being received from that section are all right.

THE Western Seedsmen's Association is endeavoring to get the trade together on the line of uniform prices. Its management thinks that the sooner this can be done the better.

BEANS are still being received from the farmers. The unfavorable weather of early October is accountable for the late threshing, as well as for the unusual shrinkage owing to spoiled stock.

"NO WARRANTY."

In the Wandsworth County Court (England) on October 26, an action was brought by Van Til-Hartman, bulb growers, Hillegom, Holland, to recover the sum of £26 from K. Drost, nurseryman, Richmond, for tulip bulbs supplied. Mr. Drost raised a counterclaim for £15 for labor, etc., wasted on bulbs that failed. Counsel for plaintiffs stated that the bulbs had been supplied under their "terms of business," as printed in their catalogue, and which are those of the Dutch Bulb Exporters' Association. These include the following conditions:

Claims as to the quality of the goods cannot be entertained unless made immediately on receipt of same. The members of the association give no warranty, express or implied, and will not be in any way responsible for the results of planting or forcing of any bulbs or roots sent out.

Defendant refused payment on the ground that the bulbs had all failed through an attack of tulip-mold (Botrytis parasitica), the germs of which must have been present in the bulbs before they were planted, from the fact that no tulips had previously been grown in the soil, and that other tulips planted in ground near those supplied by plaintiffs were not diseased. Mr. Watson, curator, Royal Gardens, Kew, gave evidence in support of defendant's contention. His Honor ruled, however, that even if the bulbs supplied by plaintiffs had been diseased when received by defendant, as he had failed to detect it and did not complain at once to plaintiffs, the terms of business on which this firm stated that the bulbs were supplied entitled them to payment.

BOSTON.

The seed stores report a satisfactory bulb season, with stocks tolerably well cleared out ere freezing weather came.

J. P. Guerineau, of the Schlegel & Fottler Co., is quite sick with sciatic rheumatism.

James Farquhar leaves on December 8 for Porto Rico, where he will spend the winter. He will incidentally study the suitability of Porto Rico for growing various bulbs and plants needed by his firm and will probably establish a nursery there.

Schlegel & Fottler Co. will complete the extensive changes in their seed store in a few days. They will have one of the best appointed stores in the city, eight floors being utilized. The street floor will be used exclusively for counter trade, the offices and mail order department being on the second floor.

W. E. Cahill is president and secretary of the Boston Seed Trade Bowling League, J. P. Guerineau is captain of the Schlegel & Fottler team, Harry Jenner, of Farquhar & Co., Everett Wheaton, of Joseph Breck & Sons and Morris Field of W. W. Rawson & Co. The scores of games are attracting a good deal of interest locally.

ERFURT SEED CROPS.

The following is supplied by the Erfurt, Germany, correspondent of the Horticultural Trade Journal, under date of November 18:

Nearly all the seed of this year's harvesting is now in warehouse and the operation of cleaning and getting it ready for delivery is also well advanced. Oversea orders are beginning to come in and some early shipments are already leaving for America, Australia, etc.

Certain onions have turned out worse than expected, Strasburg, straw-colored and the red kinds, for instance, being decidedly short. In carrots, the long garden varieties have yielded under the expectations, some sorts, such as Brunswick (Long Surrey) being scarce, and the same may be said of some of the half-long varieties. Leek seed is always late in being delivered, but we still expect a good provision. The large stocks of radish seed will prevent this season's poor yield from being felt, but the new Crimson Giant variety is very short. Beans, as expected, are much under average on the whole. Runners, scarlet, white and Painted Lady, are all short, while many of the dwarf sorts have yielded badly also.

Borecole and parsley have come in beyond expectations as last reported. Cucumbers also have improved since last writing, and prices will go lower. Mangels of every sort are only middling, and prices will probably rise a little all round. Herbs are generally plentiful. French thyme and savory are short, while sage is only a moderate crop.

The previous estimates regarding most flower seeds still hold good. Dianthus, lobelia and tagetes have, however, done worse than expected. Mignonettes, on the other hand, have come out over estimates and are fairly plentiful. Verbenas will be in sufficient quantity to supply orders, while stocks and double wallflowers are not coming up to their early promise. Border carnations have done remarkably well.

As regards asters, I regret to say that now the seeds are being cleaned the results are mostly much poorer than was anticipated, and prices are sure to advance beyond early quotations. This applies with especial force to the more refined classes, such as Victoria, while the Comet section is little better, and even the common classes will all be short.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., E. W. Kirkpatrick, McKinney, Tex.; Vice-Pres., C. L. Watrous, Des Moines; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 29th annual convention will be held at West Baden, Ind., June, 1905.

THE call for cherry trees is steadily on the increase.

SHREVEPORT, LA.—Downs & Co. are successors to the Shreveport Nursery and Orchard Co. They say that the choice French roses are now in the lead in the South.

SUPT. J. H. HADKINSON, at the World's Fair is busy digging stock and packing it for shipment to exhibitors in his department. He hopes to have everything out in good season.

J. H. MCFARLAND, of Harrisburg, Pa., president of the American Civic Association, the other day told the Chicago branch of that organization that fruit trees instead of ornamentals should be planted along city streets.

THE prolonged season has been a favorable one for the nurserymen. Sales and deliveries have been good and the quantity of stock dug and in storage houses promises a much better spring business than was done this year.

J. M. HAMPTON, the florist, Charlotte, N. C., is reported to have control of the stock of a peach which is practically everbearing, beginning to ripen in August and continuing through until cold weather. The report states that Mr. Hampton has 50,000 budded for next season.

GEORGE ELLWANGER, of Rochester, celebrated his eighty-eighth birthday December 2 and to make the occasion memorable a number of his friends presented him with a handsome silver coffee service accompanied by a letter expressive of the high esteem in which he is held.

THE periodical bulletins of the New England Park Superintendents have become the "Items of Park News," published by the Park Department of the American Civic Association, G. A. Parker, Hartford, Conn., department vice-president. It will be made the medium for the dissemination of much valuable information. It will be sent free to those who ask Mr. Parker to put their names on his mailing list.

WORLD'S FAIR AWARDS.

For some time there have been rumors of trouble over the awards at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition. Here's what's the matter: it is from a letter from Senator Carter, president of the United States commission, to D. R. Francis, president of the Exposition company:

The commission cannot permit the use of its name or the name of any of its officers or members in connection with any diploma, certificate, or other evidence of award while any part of the proceedings rest under adequately supported and uninvestigated charges of bribery, attempted bribery, corruption, fraud or misconduct amounting to fraud.

The statement is made that about 1,000 protests have been filed with the management regarding the work of the jurors and that the United States commission has in its possession affidavits showing the solicitation of bribes for influencing awards. No names have been made public. The result is that all awards are hung up.

S. A. F. PROCEEDINGS.

The Proceedings of the Twentieth Annual Convention of the Socity of American Florists, held at St. Louis, August 16-19, have made their appearance in pamphlet form. It is a stenographic report, including, besides the essays and other matter published by the REVIEW at the time, the full text of the state vice-presidents' reports, lists of members, report of the Hail Association, etc., all carefully indexed. Accompanying the Proceedings, which make a total of 224 pages, come the constitution and by-laws in handy form and a pamphlet of twenty pages, being a list of all the plants registered by the society to October 1, 1904.

HOW to EARN $20 to $50 per WEEK
This is an advertisement but is worthy of your careful consideration, as it is a bonafide offer to the readers of the FLORISTS' REVIEW for their services this winter—whole or part time.
If you mean business it will pay you to write to the Spaulding Company and get their proposition. Whether you are experienced in their line or not they will outfit you free and instruct you fully each week, so that you will positively make as much as stated above, in cash, and in addition thereto will receive many premiums, not cheap, trashy things but useful and valuable articles which they send their salesmen free, from time to time, by way of appreciation and encouragement.
Working for them is not like representing an ordinary nursery concern, for they are nurserymen of national reputation and can be depended upon to fulfill all agreements with salesmen and customers. They will make life easy and prosperous for you if you give them the chance.
Write them to-day for full particulars.

SEDAMSVILLE, OHIO.

"Dick" Witterstaetter is at it again, having a few surprises in store which he may spring upon the unsuspecting growers during the Chicago carnation show in January.

There are seedlings and seedlings, some scarlet, some white, but mostly pink. Of the latter he has so many good ones that it makes one's head dizzy to try to determine "which is which."

To the casual observer it is a case of "all coons looking alike," although Dick knows the merits of each, having selected a few that in his estimation are well worthy of further test. His white one which he intends disseminating in 1906 is a variety that one need but see to appreciate its commercial value. His scarlets are equally fine and one in particular will be given ample room and special attention. Mr. Witterstaetter has enlarged his greenhouse plant by two modern houses, having also made various other improvements about his residence and grounds. X.

WASHINGTON, IA.—The Keck Floral Co., has its new offices nearly completed and now has a nice display window. Since the reorganization the officers are: President, E. C. Keck; vice-president and treasurer, C. H. Keck; secretary and manager, F. C. Creath. They propose to extend the business largely.

GRAND FORKS, N. D.—E. O. Lovell says Thanksgiving trade was much better than last year and trade in general is increasing and is a third better this season. The people through this portion of the northwest are beginning to appreciate the beauty and benefit which flowers impart, and are much more liberal along this line.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Since Thanksgiving business has been moving along in a quiet sort of way, with nothing unusual to turn it one way or the other. The demand has been only fair and scarcely up to last year. Prices on an average, too, are below last year.

The supply of stock is all that can be desired. Roses are in most cases of fine quality and in excess of the demand. Beauties and other red roses are still short but there are hopes of a good supply soon. There has been considerable call for Chatenay lately and many orders for this rose could not be filled. Some very fine carnations are to be had but there are none too many of them. Violets of good quality are first class property. The best bring $1.50. The cheaper grades do not go so well and some are hard to move at any price. Mums are still coming but very few large ones are seen. They are selling fairly well. Other stock is about equal to the demand.

The wholesale houses are indulging in the luxury of a cut price war on greens. Eastern ferns have been cut down to 15 cents per hundred, $1.50 per thousand. Galax, both green and bronze, goes at 75 cents per thousand, and leucothoe sprays at 50 cents per hundred. At these prices there is very little more than glory in handling them.

Various Notes.

R. Witterstaetter brought in some of his seedlings the other day and it would do some of our carnation specialists good to see them. Among them was 1021 B, measuring three and three-fourths inches, of a beautiful shade of pink. This variety has already received a certificate. Valentine is a magnificent light pink which made its presence felt at the Detroit exhibition last year. Improved Lawson is a beauty of dark pink color. Lillian May, which will be Mr. Witterstaetter's next introduction, is a white that will be worth watching. Afterglow appears to be a first-class commercial variety. The color is between Fiancee and Lawson. The Cardinal was also doing fine.

SOUTHERN GREENS.

The industry of gathering and shipping southern evergreens has become an important one, for the florists and decorators of the north have found many uses for this material since a safe and satisfactory source of supply has been provided. Literal train loads of wild smilax are shipped north from Alabama every winter and there is also a big business in sheet moss, palm crowns, needle pines, palmetto leaves and a number of other items which come under the head of southern evergreens, not including holly, which is generally from a source farther north than the locality which provides much of the other stock.

George W. Caldwell was the pioneer of the southern greens shippers and it is to him that Evergreen, Ala., must give credit for making the town known wherever there is a florist. He found it slow work at first, but when he succeeded in getting a few of the leading decorators in the large cities to make a trial of wild smilax in some of their good work, from that day the business began to increase at a wonderful rate. Wild smilax is the principal commodity shipped from Evergreen, Ala., and the amount of it which is annually used has resulted in a large number of gatherers starting in the business in competition with the pioneer, but he welcomes them all and says there is business for every one who will put up a first-class article and demonstrate that he is to be entrusted with orders for goods which must arrive on time or be valueless, as well as a cause of untold disappointment. Mr. Caldwell had an interesting article of the development of the industry in the December issue of Country Life.

KALAMAZOO, MICH.

Trade has been most gratifying with everybody. Prices are about the same as last year but there was a marked increase of local trade. Wholesale shippers state that prices do not come up quite to last year's quotations.

At Grofvert & De Smith's everything is in good shape and a heavy cut for Christmas is in sight. At the Dunkley Floral Co. I noticed a nice lot of poinsettias and everything looks well. The Central Michigan Nurseries, with Mr. Smith as foreman, make a fine showing. Their carnations are very good. They have two new carnation seedlings, one a scarlet of very pleasing shade, good stem and habit, the other a variegated which undoubtedly will prove a winner. A batch of very fine lily of the valley and a bench of single violets in full bloom, as well as cyclamens, primroses, etc., show the care of Mr. Smith.

Sam Batson's carnation houses are a mass of bloom and buds. Baby primroses for cutting are in full blast. Everything speaks well for Mr. Batson.

G. Van Bochove & Bro. have everything spick and span. Their roses and carnations are very fine and heavy cuts of each are coming just right for the holidays. Cyclamens, primroses and cinerarias are as fine as ever. Their mums were of extra quality but they were completely sold out two weeks before Thanksgiving. Their shipping trade is rapidly increasing and they will build a big range next year. They have bought thirty acres of ground, only twenty rods from the end of the trolley car line and well adapted for this purpose. They will erect 75,000 feet of glass of the most modern type of greenhouse construction. The ground is broken, orders for glass, pipes and other material are given. Two 150 horse-power boilers will be installed. Their old place will be taken down and removed to the new location in time and operations will begin at the earliest possible moment next spring. With this addition they will have nearly 150,000 feet of glass.

I am sorry to state we have lost an old friend, M. F. Kyle, foreman for the Dunkley Floral Co., where he was engaged for the past five years. He made many friends among the craft here and all are sorry to lose him. He will reside in Chicago. H. M.

BOILER ABOVE GROUND.

Some time ago L. C. C. gave me directions for heating three houses, 6,000 feet of ground covered, with hot water. I believe that if we had been able to follow directions we would have had a good system. The plan called for a deep r but we came to water at six feet and at between seven and eight feet there was such a heavy flow that we could not do anything with it. The party who was doing the steam fitting thought he could overcome the difficulty of having the boiler above-ground by running the main pipe up twelve feet, but it does not work. All the houses heat alike but some of the returns do not warm up. W. H. S.

I gather that you can get a dry pit six feet in depth. If so there should be no difficulty in obtaining a low down boiler which will give you satisfactory results. The Kroeschell No. 3 boiler is thirty-four inches high and the Superior boiler No. 000 is forty inches high without the ash pit. I believe either of these types will work in your system, with the piping arranged as I described in the September 1 issue of the Review. If you attempt to use a thirty or forty horse-power return tubular boiler eight to ten feet will be the required depth of the boiler pit, but with a self contained boiler, such as those above mentioned, I believe a six-foot pit will answer the purpose. It will be necessary for you to have the crown of the boiler below the lowest point in the returns in the house and the more this difference can be increased the better will be the results. The manufacturers of these boilers will give you the dimensions of a boiler with capacity for caring for 2,000 feet of radiation and from that you can determine whether or not these boilers will answer the purpose. If the boiler must be placed on the surface of the ground a circulating pump will be necessary. Such a pump can be arranged to operate with steam, water pressure or electricity. If the water or electricity are available, they will prove most satisfactory in a plant such as yours, where a night fireman is not kept on constant duty. L. C. C.

CAPACITY OF BOILER.

I am using an upright boiler five feet high with fifty 2-inch flues three feet long. Is it large enough to heat one house 17x48 and one 17x60? Side walls four feet, double boarded, with paper between. Have a coil under each side bench, of four 1-inch pipes with a 1½-inch feeder at the ridge. I must have 60 degrees, using steam. W. E. T.

In order to maintain a temperature of 60 degrees in your houses during severe weather, 636 feet of radiation should be supplied. The boiler you have has capacity to care for about 750 feet of radiation, or about 100 feet more than is required in the houses.

PACIFIC COAST.

TWO USEFUL SUBJECTS.

I have had very good success during the past two seasons, both in transplanting and selling our native azaleas and rhododendrons. The azaleas are found in great profusion in the higher latitudes of California and also in Oregon. They grow to a height of ten feet and make well furnished shrubs. There is no difficulty in handling them at this season of the year, as they are about as dormant as they ever get. I dug about 200 plants last year at about this time and potted them in 8-inch and 10-inch pots and they broke out with a heavy young growth of leaves and blossoms in the spring. The masses of flowers almost obscure the foliage, they are so prolific, and are of a creamy white and delicate pink tint, with a faint spicy odor. Pot plants, when in full bloom, are good sellers, easily retailing from $1.00 to $2.50 each.

The native rhododendron, although it does not grow as abundantly as the azalea in this portion of California, is found in quantity in the northern part of our state and up the coast as far as British Columbia. I do not find it quite as easy to transplant as the azalea, as it is inclined to grow on the rugged mountain sides and does not make many small or fibrous roots. In transplanting about 200 plants I lost about fifty, but the balance, some of which I pruned heavily, broke out strong and made splendid heads of foliage and masses of flowers. The blooms of the native rhododendron are not fragrant but they are very showy and beautiful and the plants, when established in pots, sold well. In fact, I sold all I had and could probably have disposed of more.

Both these native shrubs are valuable and because they are so plentiful in certain parts of the state they have been neglected by the dealers and only when seen in their magnificence in the summer and fall is their value realized. G.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Business has been extremely quiet since Thanksgiving. The weather is bright and warm again and flowers continue to be brought in by wagon loads. Chrysanthemums still hold their place as the season's favorite and, although the early blooming sorts are over, we still have an endless assortment of late varieties. Violets, although very cheap, are the best selling flower we are handling. They bring 75 cents per dozen bunches wholesale. Carnations are cheaper than they were a week ago and will not advance in price, unless we have cold weather, until the mums are over. The best of the fancy sorts cost three dozen for a dollar and other varieties sell at about 20 cents per dozen. Poinsettias are in and are of good quality. Narcissi of all kinds are a drug. Valley is daily getting more plentiful and sells at from $4 to $5 per hundred. Roses are only in fair supply but there seems to be enough to fill the demand. Green stuff is selling well but it is so cheap that a great quantity of it must be handled to make a few dollars. The dealers everywhere are hoping for a few sharp frosts to curtail the over-production of flowers.

MENLO PARK, CAL.

The second fall show of the Menlo Park Horticultural Society was a most pronounced success, owing to the efforts of President Sidney Clack and Secretary J. T. Lynch. The show was larger than before. The principal exhibitors and prize winners were S. E. Slade, Geo. Nunn, gardener; Timothy Hopkins, J. B. Coryell, A. McDonald, gardener; C. W. Smith, Thos. McIntyre, gardener; F. Mills, Palo Alto; P. C. Meyers & Co., Burlingame; Goerzhain Bros., Redwood City; Mrs. G. A. Bathchelder, Fair Oaks; Mrs. W. B. Weir, D. O. Tuttle, Geo. A. Pope, Burlingame, and Mr. Clack.

EXHIBITION SPACE.

The receipts for the sale of space to the exhibitors at the trade exhibition in connection with the St. Louis convention of the S. A. F. were $1,984.44 and the expenses of conducting the exhibition $898.34, leaving a balance of $1,095.60 to the credit of the St. Louis Florists' club. The possibilities for the sale of space to exhibitors at the Washington convention next year will be very great, as the meeting place is not far from the cities whence come most of the exhibits.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Trade the past week has been exceptionally good. Chrysanthemums being nearly all gone, roses and carnations are again in demand. Prices are good and the call for good stuff is brisk.

Azaleas, lilies and violets are just beginning to be seen in the florists' windows, which are commencing to put on a holiday look. The outlook for good business up to the first of the year was never better.

Various Notes.

C. M. Wise has started in business at Twenty-fifth and Holmes streets. He has already built one house 20x90 and intends to build two more in the spring.

W. L. Rock has a splendid new wagon in course of construction.

Walter Troup, formerly assistant decorator for Ed Humfeld, has accepted the contract of making holly wreaths for Arthur Newell. Walter is watching the trains looking for the holly to arrive.

Miss Dalley reports splendid business the past week and is already booking orders for Christmas.

Jas. Payne, at Union Cemetery, since taking charge of the place has built up a fine trade and is getting fine stock ready for the spring market.

I hope the boys will not let the chrysanthemum show next fall slip by. Let us get the business men interested and prepare to make it the best we have ever had.

Ed Ellsworth, of G. M. Kellogg's, is distributing souvenirs to his lady customers in the form of a pad of several blotters with a celluloid cover stamped with morning-glories in colors.

The W. H. Humfeld Floral Co. is finishing up the old year in good style. They have installed a fine new refrigerator in their cut flower room, which is presided over by J. Bingham.

Lawrence Schwager has opened a new retail store on Grand avenue.

John Schneider, on Walnut street, is doing a nice business these days.

R. S. Brown says it is a physical impossibility for any florist to handle and sell over 5,500 mums in a day. He has tried. NARCISSUS.

THE FARTHEST NORTH.

I would like to ask how far north a greenhouse can be made successful, or, more especially, be a success in growing roses, carnations, lilies, etc.? We understand there is the corn belt, wheat belt, etc. These cereals can be grown outside of this section, yet with poor results; climatic conditions vary, seasons too short and failure financially is the result. I have seen roses bloom far north in Dakota but not of salable size; stems small and limp; blooms very inferior. Can anyone answer this question? E. O. L.

IT'S NO TROUBLE HERE.

Ellenville, N. Y.—I have used your Fumigating Powder for the past five years in fumigating violets. I find it more effective than tobacco stems, easier to use, does not injure the plants or blooms. I have no trouble to keep down the green fly and black aphis, as well as the injurous gall fly. I can recommend it as a good article that will do business always. See page 162.

OCEANIC, N. J.

The Monmouth County Horticultural Society held its regular meeting December 2. The nomination of officers took place, as follows: President, Geo. H. Hale; vice-president, A. G. Williams; secretary, H. A. Kettel; financial secretary, Geo. Kuhn; treasurer, W. W. Kennedy. Fred Anderson was elected to active membership. The discussion of the evening was "Rose Culture under Glass." There was a nice display of roses. N. Butterbach exhibited some Golden Gate which received 90 points. His Ivory received 85 and Mr. Hale's Morgan scored 85 and his Mrs. Oliver Ames 85 points. J. E. Haines, of Bethlehem, Pa., was awarded a certificate of merit for his red carnation seedling. The judges of the evening were W. W. Kennedy and A. G. Williams.

A committee was appointed to make arrangements for the annual dinner, which will take place on December 22, at Sheridan Hotel, Red Bank. Those on the committee are N. Butterbach. Geo. H. Hale, W. W. Kennedy and John Yeomans.

WORLD'S FAIR ATTENDANCE.

The St. Louis World's Fair closed December 1 and as an indication of its value to all classes of exhibitors, including those in the department of floriculture, it may be stated that the attendance in the 187 days of its existence was 18,767,457. At the same time the attendance at Chicago in 179 days was 27,539,521, which shows what location will do, for the St. Louis show was larger and cost nearly twice as much as the Chicago exposition.

RED SPORT (Of Maceo.)

This new "Bread and Butter" commercial brilliant "Crane" Red Carnation, now in its fourth year, has the hardy constitution of General Maceo, with a stronger heavier growth, longer and stiffer stem and a larger flower. Growing under the same conditions and in the same house with Flamingo and Estelle it has produced four times as many blooms as the former and twice as many blooms as the latter. The color is as good as Estelle and the bloom brings as much as does Estelle at its best. Every flower is of a uniform brilliant red, perfectly double with an ideal calyx, in fact we never saw a split one.

Red Sport is perfectly healthy, an easy variety to grow, an early and continuous bloomer, throwing its heaviest cuts around the Christmas holidays and during the Winter months when red is in demand. Red Sport will keep longer and travel farther than any other red carnation, and will prove a bonanza to the grower who does a shipping business. If the scarcity of reds in the market that now exists continues Red Sport will pay better to the square foot of bench than any other variety of any color to date. Every florist who has seen Red Sport growing has placed an order for rooted cuttings, which tells the tale. All our stock is sold up to January 25th. Orders filled in strict rotation from that date on. Price, 12 for $1.50, 25 for $2.50, 50 for $4.00 all post paid. $6.00 per 100, $50.00 per 1000, by express. We guarantee all cuttings to be well rooted and to arrive in good condition.

HEATING.

I have two houses, the one 17x48, the other 17x60, with side walls four feet high, double boarded and with building paper between. The houses are piped with four 1-inch pipes under each side bench. Can I use the present coils as feeders and put in 1½-inch pipes for returns to the boiler for use with hot water? How many such returns will it take to keep the houses at 60 degrees? Would one 2-inch pipe from the boiler be large enough for a feed pipe? The boiler is at the high end of the present 1-inch coils. I have a heater five feet long, shell three feet wide with fifty-two 2-inch flues. Would this heat these houses? W. E. T.

The four 1-inch pipes are not sufficient to maintain the desired temperature. The system can, however, be easily modified to meet the requirements. Run a 2-inch flow pipe under the ridge of each house from the boiler to the most distant end of the house and in the house 17x48, returning under the benches in fifteen runs of 1-inch pipe or twelve runs of 1¼-inch pipe, if steam is used, or eleven 2-inch pipes if hot water is used. The house 17x60, in addition to the 2-inch riser under the ridge, will also require fifteen runs of 1-inch pipe or twelve runs of 1¼-inch pipe with steam or eleven 2-inch pipes if hot water is used. The returns from each house, if steam is used, can be concentrated into one 1¼-inch pipe and returned to the boiler. A pipe of this size would, in fact, be ample to care for the condensation for the whole system but for convenience the 1¼-inch pipe can be used for each house. With hot water a 2-inch or 2½-inch return should be provided for each house. A 2-inch flow is amply large for houses of these dimensions on a steam system, but with hot water 2½-inch flows will be more satisfactory. The 1-inch or 1¼-inch pipe is specified for returns in the heating coils for steam because these sizes are more easily handled and installed than are the larger sizes. With hot water, however, no returns should be smaller than 1¼-inch and 2-inch is better. The friction in the small pipes retards the flow too much. L. C. C.

ALTHAEA FICIFOLIA.

Many prefer the single hollyhocks to the monstrously doubled florists' flowers now generally met with in gardens, which entirely lack the grace of form shown by the blossoms of the cottagers' plants, with their doubled center and clear guard petals. Of all the singles the most delightful is the species known as the ficleaved hollyhock, althæa ficifolia, which is worthy of inclusion in the best herbaceous border. It does not attain the great height of the ordinary hollyhock, rarely exceeding a stature of five feet or at most six feet. Its flowers are of lemon-yellow color, three to four inches across, of delicate texture and very refined appearance. The leaves are large palmate, and five to seven-lobed, somewhat resembling those of fig-tree. From July to September this hollyhock creates a beautiful picture in the garden. As it does not appear to be so susceptible to the dreaded disease as the florists' varieties, it is rarely seen in bad health. It is a native of Siberia, and has been known for over 300 years, says the Gardeners' Chronicle.

CHICAGO AS A FLOWER CITY.

Chicago is steadily advancing in fame as the largest producer of cut flowers in this country and the industry is beginning to receive recognition in the daily papers. The following is an editorial from the Chicago Inter-Ocean for November 15:

Those uninformed and misinformed people who regard Chicago in the light merely of a big industrial city may be surprised to learn that it is the greatest flower market in the United States, but those who are familiar with the facts will be surprised only that persons of ordinary intelligence should be ignorant of its pre-eminence in this as well as in many other esthetic respects.

The taste and inclination of our people have always been in the direction of the beautiful. This is evident to the casual observer in the universal fondness which is exhibited here and throughout Cook county for the cultivation of flowers. With few exceptions every Chicago and Cook county householder who possesses a front or back yard, a little patch of land, or window or porch space sufficient for a flower box, is unhappy unless he is raising plants of some kind, even though he succeed in producing little more than a few modest little pansies.

On the other hand, those who can afford to indulge the luxury cultivate flowers here for their own enjoyment upon a magnificent scale, while acres of ground are covered by the hothouses of the professional florists.

The success achieved by Chicago and Cook county in the cultivation of flowers may be in some degree due to our skill and in some degree to our soil, but it is, perhaps, mainly attributable to our climate. The pure air and the genial sunshine which abound here the greater part of the year are highly conducive to the growth and beauty of our buds and blossoms.

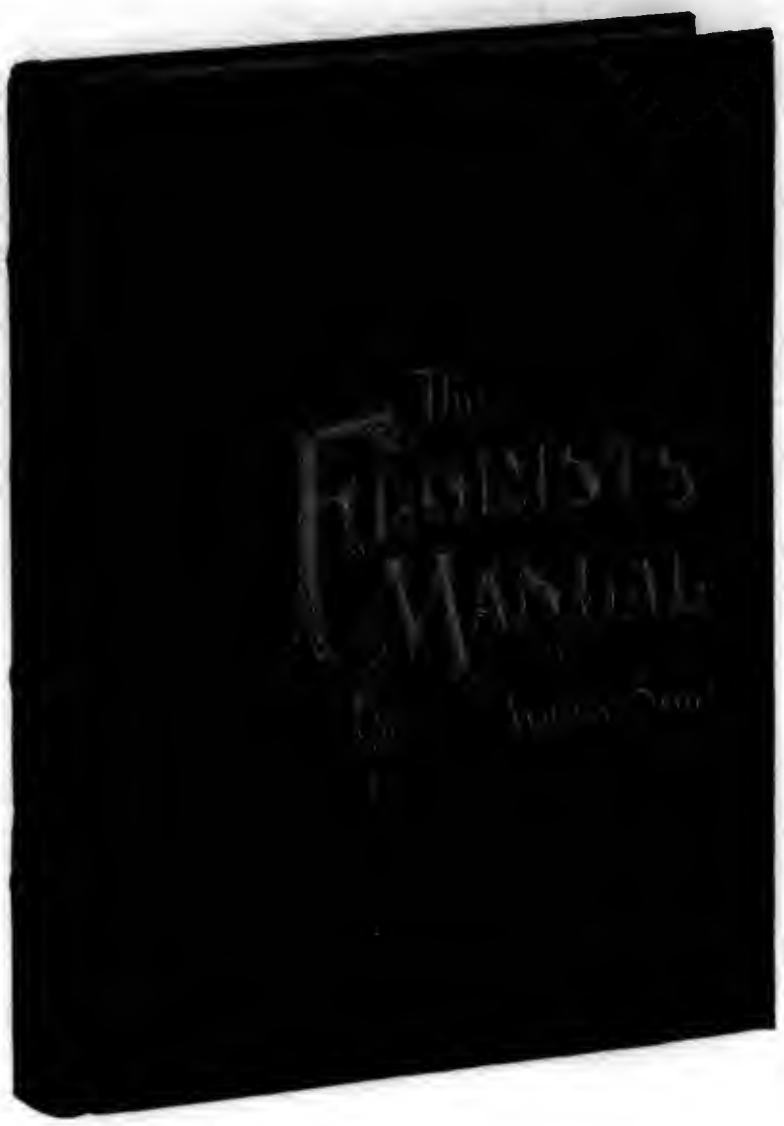
Chicago is proud of the fact that, almost without striving, it has gained fame in this particular, and that from the variety and profusion of Cook county's blooms it is able to distribute among its sister cities the most glorious colors, hues and odors that nature is capable of producing.

INDEX KEWENSIS.

The utility of this monumental work is daily appreciated by those who have to deal with the names of plants and their synonyms. The original work, prepared by Mr. Daydon Jackson under the superintendence and with the co-operation of Sir Joseph Hooker, was completed in 1895. In these volumes are recorded all, or practically all, the names of plants from the time of Linnæus up to the end of 1885. A first supplement, prepared by M. Durand and Mr. B. D. Jackson, is in course of publication, and has reached the letter "Rhv." This supplement is intended to bring the record down to 1895.

Proper names, when used in the form of adjectives, are now spelt, in accordance with the present Kew usage, with a small initial letter. In the original work they are spelt with a capital. For the sake of uniformity it would probably have been better to have maintained one usage throughout.—Gardeners' Chronicle.

A BIT OF FUCHSIA HISTORY.



Probably but few persons who attended the meeting of the Royal Horticultural Society on July 23 noticed in the foregound of a collection of hardy flowers a few plants of a small-flowered fuchsia in pots, bearing the name of Mme. Cornellisen, and having white corollas. This was probably the first fuchsia with a white corolla and red tube and sepals raised on the continent; and it is interesting to note that, notwithstanding the flood of new fuchsias put into commerce during the last forty years, this variety should have been preserved, to reappear on the above date. Madame Cornellisen was distributed by Thibaut & Keteleer, florists, of Paris. F. W. Burbidge puts the year of sending-out as 1860, but there is reason to believe an earlier date should be named, and there are those who believe it to have been the first fuchsia with a white corolla seen in this country.

If it be correct that, as Mr. Burbidge states, Madame Cornellisen was not distributed until 1860, then the honor of raising the first fuchsia having a white corolla belongs to W. H. Story, who in 1853-54 produced the variety Queen Victoria, having a scarlet tube and sepals, and a pure white corolla, which, with other varieties, passed into the hands of E. G. Henderson & Sons for distribution. The advent of this interesting novelty naturally aroused a great deal of interest, but at the time Mr. Story was afflicted with a severe illness which resulted in death, and he was thus unable to afford any information as to the parentage of Queen Victoria; but it was believed that Mr. Story obtained pollen through Mr. Veitch, of the Exeter Nurseries, from a species or variety with a small and almost white corolla, and by using this on, it was said, a dark variety, there was ultimately produced the batch of which the variety Queen Victoria was one. The last-named was put into commerce about 1856-57.

Among our modern fuchsias there are very few single varieties which are white. Messrs. H. Cannell & Son, whose list is a comprehensive one, name but three. The early forms were spare of bloom, and it is probable that defect is somewhat hereditary. But of white double varieties there are several, and they are generally free-blooming; one named Ballet Girl is largely grown by Geo. Reynolds in the form of big bush specimens in pots for the decoration of the terrace in front of the mansion. This variety is very free and one of the best of the group. Occasionally one of this class is shown as an exhibition specimen, but a single white variety rarely, if ever.

Mr. Perry strongly recommended Madame Cornellisen as a bedding plant; small plants appear to bloom freely, the flowers are small, but they are graceful in form, while the habit of growth as shown by small plants is desirable. It affords another instance of an old plant coming to the fore in after years, when there was reason to believe it had been lost.—Gardeners' Chronicle.

Are all flower growers liars?

SURELY this cannot be true; well, we have over 100 growers who have written us, a large majority without request, their opinions; we publish a few of these letters in the columns of this paper; see on pages 148-153-165-168, what they say about the FUMIGATING KIND TOBACCO POWDER. All began with a five-pound trial bag at our expense, which gave them an opportunity without cost to prove its GOODNESS and our assertion that it was the most effective, cleanest and quickest, as well as cheapest (10 cents per 100-foot house) article to fumigate with, and that all kinds of aphis can be killed in one night. Let us send you a five-pound trial bag by express, it will cost you nothing but the express charges on it, and be convinced that what your brother growers say of it is true. Our booklet tells of it; we mail it on request.

A LABOR SAVER.

Time is often a very important factor in the satisfactory execution of funeral pieces. It is a usual occurrence that a great amount of work be required in a very brief time and anything which will facilitate the execution of orders is of considerable value. There are millions of toothpicks put into designs made up on wire frames and while the time spent in attaching the wire is only an instant for each individual pick, in the aggregate it runs into a great many hours every year. The retail florist is not as quick as might be supposed to take advantage of any new device offered him, but in the last year or two the sales for the ordinary wooden toothpicks and the box of wires have been very materially cut into by a ready-wired pick designed to economize the design-maker's time. These ready-wired picks are sold for only a few cents per thousand more than the cost of picks and wire, being wired by machinery, and effect a saving which is very considerable when the time of the florist is taken into consideration. They are now in use in practically all the up-to-date flower stores throughout the country and are handled by most of the dealers in florists' supplies.

WORMS IN BOWLING GREEN.

Will you please tell me through the REVIEW what to do with a bowling green that is very badly infested with worms, which caused much damage? J. L.

For a lawn badly infested with worms, such as your correspondent describes, nothing could be better than a liberal dressing of soft coal soot. If necessary give the lawn two applications. It will be found to materially strengthen the grasses and is very distasteful to the worms. If soot cannot readily be procured use Canadian wood ashes, the potash in which is not to the worms' liking. Use some fine bone with the ashes, which are not in themselves a complete fertilizer. We would not recommend the use of lime. Keep the bowling green well rolled after copious rainfalls. This in itself should largely tend to alleviate the evil. W. N. C.

YOU may discontinue my advertisement of violet plants. I have sold all the stock I had, which shows that it certainly pays to advertise in your paper.—G. M. NAUMANN, Cleveland, O.

TO-BAK-INE PRODUCTS THEY KILL BUGS

The great popularity of TO-BAK-INE FUMIGATING PAPER, TO-BAK-INE LIQUID and TO-BAK-INE FUMIGATING POWDER has resulted in a call for a Fourth Product described below:

TO-BAK-INE DUSTING POWDER

This is for Sprinkling or Dusting Purposes only and will not burn for fumigation. This DUSTING POWDER differs from any other on the market in being FREE FROM ANY TOBACCO OR TOBACCO ODOR and in ALWAYS CONTAINING A DEFINITE AMOUNT of FREE PURE NICOTINE, which is added to a specially prepared powder. The nicotine being in a free form, is gradually given off, killing all insects on flowers, plants and vegetables, leaving a perfectly ODORLESS POWDER OR RESIDUE, which is readily shaken or washed off, and SHOULD any remain it will NOT DECAY or ROT, thus differing from tobacco dust, etc. The advantage of this Powder should strongly appeal to Greenhouse Vegetable Growers, whose products must be free from foreign or objectionable tastes.

50-POUND BAG, $1.50; 100-POUND BAG, $3 00 Send for our Booklet, "WORDS OF WISDOM," by leading Growers, containing full directions as to exterminating all greenhouse pests.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH.

C. C. Warburton's office, potting shed and contents, one entire greenhouse and contents and one end of another greenhouse and the stock were destroyed by fire Sunday morning, November 27, the money loss about $3,000. He will at once rebuild the office and potting shed and the burned portion of greenhouse least damaged and will try to get ready for spring trade, although his spring stock was all ruined. Stock was in fine condition and everything prosperous, but the hard work of four years was lost in two hours.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

The monthly meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held November 29, President Ballantyne in the chair. J. Woodcock and G. Fresennis were elected to active membership. Nominations for active membership were A. A. Petit and A. Collins, Noroton, Conn., and J. Brinyess, Irvington.

H. Nichol's prize was awarded to J. Featherstone, gardener to Samuel Untermeyer, Yonkers, for Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. Mr. Featherstone was also awarded a certificate of merit for two very fine specimens of seedling begonias, Ensign and Winter Cheer. The F. R. Pierson Co. received honorable mention for Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. The T. A. Lee prize was awarded to L. A. Martin, gardener for C. G. Matthieson, Irvington, for selling the greatest number of tickets for the November exhibition, having sold sixty-one. T. A. L.

Superior Boilers Are Good Boilers.
Read what our customers say about them:

South Bend, Ind., April 4, 1904.
"Superior to any Hot Water Boiler we have ever used. You certainly have placed the right name to your Boilers; no effort at all to keep the temperature at desired points when zero weather comes. Night after night the past severe winter weather gave your Boiler a good test. We are more than pleased with the Superior Boiler." Yours truly, TREANOR & RETTIC.

A Happy and Prosperous NEW YEAR!

A HAPPY and prosperous new year awaits the florist who buys from us, because he will be saved the worry of uncertainty and he will be given the certainty of the best goods at the least prices.

We are shipping specialists, growing flowers only for the shipping trade and growing only such flowers as are particularly suited for shipment.

We have what is universally conceded to be the best plant, equipment and organization in the country for the handling of this class of business and we handle no other class.

Ours have been the finest Roses in the market this season, and for many seasons past and this is equally true of our other flowers, as is shown by our large and steadily increasing business with our old customers and with new ones.

We treat every one of our customers as if he were the only "one" we had and we are building our business by helping our customers build their businesses. What helps our customers must necessarily help us, as our customers really constitute our business.

If you should like to do business on this basis, we would be glad to have you write us about it.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

HOLIDAY SUGGESTIONS.

Embellishing the Plants.

Nowadays the arrangement, staging and decoration of plants is as important as the tasteful and delicate blending of colors in cut flowers. We have come to expect that everything that can put forth, or be made to put forth, a bloom stalk at Christmas must be top dressed with ribbons and petticoated in tissue paper. Already this craze has reached its limit, and this year we are seeing a healthy reaction. Now, instead of seeing a display of blooming plants bedecked with huge bows and hoods, we see, first of all, clean bright foliage and new or scoured pots, with saucers to each size, and plants stripped of every suggestion of loose or yellow foliage. Here and there one is placed in a modestly colored jardiniere, another has an olive-green crepe paper pot cover tied with baby ribbon to match the paper or blending with the color of the flower. Another has a wider ribbon, if the flower is not a showy one, with a neat rosette bow. In neither case is the paper cover very much higher than the top of the pot, and it is frilled out only a little. The lower part has the same finish and covers the outside edge of the saucer.

Sensible florists will provide the heavy water-proof paper which the supply houses offer for an occasion of this kind, thus guarding against the wilting down and discoloring which takes place the minute a drop of water touches the surface of ordinary crepe paper. One roll of paper will make a dozen plain covers for 6-inch or 8-inch pots. Cut in two lengthwise and each piece will be enough for six covers.

Pot Covers.

Many serviceable and neat covers can be bought ready for use, in different sizes, with elastic bands and colored linings which are fringed at the top. The latter feature is the main objection to this style.

Some amateurishly-figured materials have been observed in pot covers. These are not at all to be recommended, even for flowerless plants. The safest color for a pot cover for any plant is the plain dark olive-green without lining. Then there is no objection to using a not too brilliant bow of ribbon to tie.

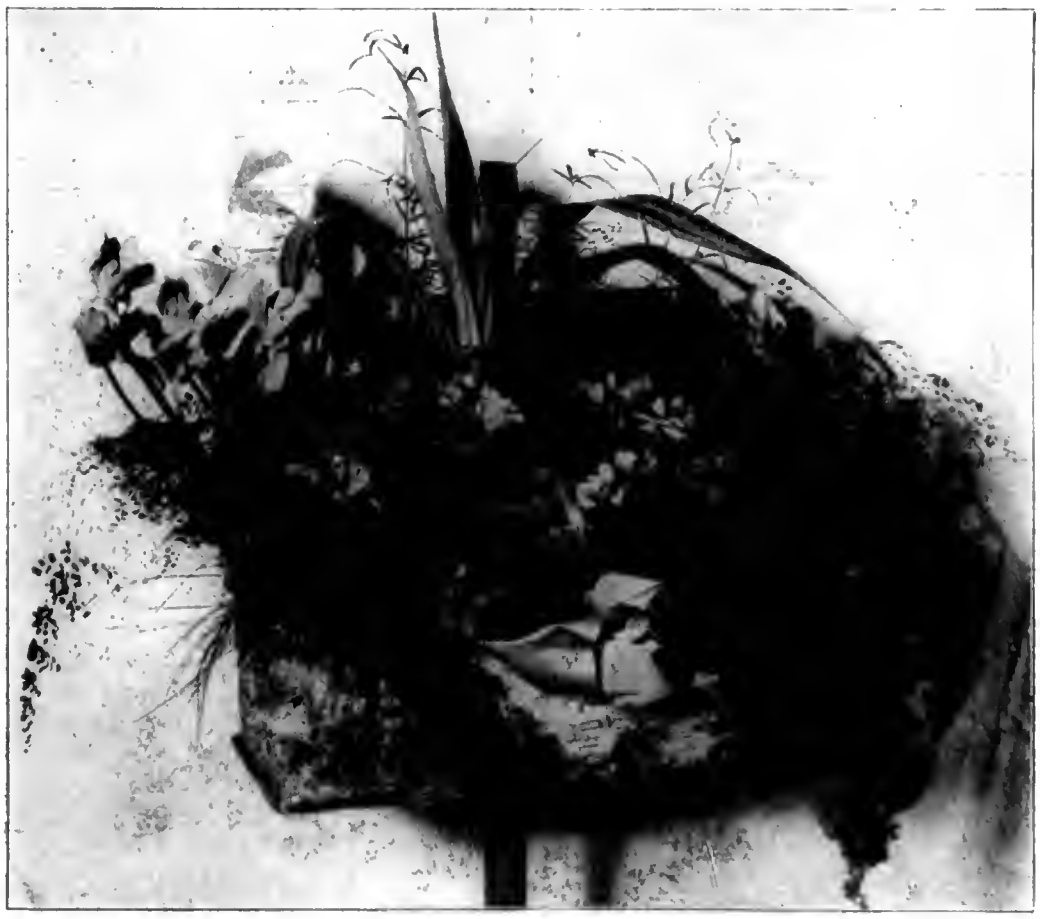
Birch bark pot covers are especially good, both on account of the modest grey and brown coloring and their durability. There is nothing prettier for an araucaria than this rustic setting.

Get in the touches of brilliant color on the ferns, araucarias and palms, which have no flowers to brighten them. A new pot cover of this kind is made as follows: First cover the pot with waterproof paper; then "tack" a few short pieces of well-berried holly on a short piece of sash ribbon in scarlet or olive-green of a width to match the depth of the pot and fasten around the pot with a short, bunchy bow at back. Water plants carefully and scantily after covering and decorating the pots.

Use Little Ribbon.

As a rule blooming plants should not be decorated above the pot. They are sufficient in themselves. Therefore approach the decorating of the plants themselves with fear and trembling. Select one here and there only. In most cases gauze ribbon in grey, pale yellow, white or light lavender or pink is best. Many of these neutral tints have a dainty stripe of a darker color running along the border. Make a fluffy bow of this material under the foliage of an azalea or pepper plant. Lavender or light green tulle looks airy and dainty among the soft green of the primrose foliage. The only bow permissible on an araucaria is one preferably of thin taffeta or gauze ribbon between the first two whirls, and only one. Many customers will, however, choose holly red ribbon for Christmas plants with which it harmonizes.

A word as to the displaying of plants. Avoid steps. Make groups, some low in clumps, others high on iron stands, with medium and low stands in front and around them, and set other plants on the floor in front. Then make a solid wall of say, Boston ferns as a background to other varieties. Of something like primroses or cyclamens make a border or a long line.



Baskets and Hampers.

Reverting to pot covers, there is one kind which should be largely used, and that is the basket cover. We see them in scarlet, green and soft yellows as well as pink. Use no ribbon with these, unless it be the green. Many of them are good enough to be provided with an inside zinc pan to catch and hold waste water. Hampers in large sizes are pretty receptacles for an assortment of foliage plants. The small sizes are suitable for flowers. Where a hamper is filled with plants a large bow may be used on the lid, if it is thrown back. Don't attempt to tie a ribbon around a hamper. It used to be a very general practice and is still done by many but the decorators in the east who set our floral fashions now recognize that it is in better taste omitted. No very tall plants should be used in this style of basket.

Where a tall palm is used with other plants in a large jardiniere or basket-cover, group a Boston fern or two, with two or three other kinds of ferns, like Pteris tremula and P. serrulata in a thick mat of foliage around the foot of the palm.

Ferneries can be filled either after the style of the preceding group of plants, with a Cocos Weddelliana in the center and low ferns around, or with an even low top. Cover the soil with a low growing lycopodium or club moss. Cocos Weddelliana in a half cocoanut shell suspended like a hanging basket is a taker for Christmas. Hang with three cords of scarlet or narrow ribbon.

Japanese hanging dishes of decorated china filled with long-leaved ferns are also attractive. Hand-painted china dishes of the same style may be suspended with cords or chains and filled in the same way. These china dishes are not drained, of course, and watering should not be overdone.

A Hamper of Christmas Plants Arranged by E. Wienhoeber Co., Chicago.

Wreaths and Gift Boxes.

There is considerable call for cemetery wreaths and bunches for Christmas, most of which perhaps are holly or lycopodium in some attractive form, with cut flowers. Besides the holly wreath there is the plain lycopodium wreath with a scarlet bow, the red immortelle wreath with a spray of lycopodium under a tie of holly ribbon, a good large flat bunch of holly with red carnations, or white carnations with a scarlet bow, a cluster of California peppers on a lycopodium wreath with ribbon to match.

For the better class of gift boxes smart tags with a holly spray are to be had for the address. For the visiting card which goes inside the box a sharpened piece of holly may be drawn through one corner in two slits like a jeweler's mounting card.

Pleasing Combinations.

Many pleasing color combinations may be suggested for gift boxes, like these:

Holly lining inside the tissue or wax paper which lines the box, with Bradt carnations, poinsettias and stevia.

Square design box, lycopodium wreath with scarlet tie; fill in center of wreath with Roman hyacinths or valley; lay in loose, with stems one way under the wreath.

A fancy box lined with mistletoe, with violets, tied with gold cord, is a fetching combination. Use mignonette and scarlet carnations with holly; mignonette and Golden Gate or Bridesmaid roses; box lined with Florida moss, with crimson and Enchantress carnations; fern lined box with Bridesmaid, Bride and Golden Gate roses; Bridesmaid roses and Paper White narcissi.

Bridesmaid roses and Shasta daisies, Golden Gate roses and violets are good; also poinsettias, Paper Whites and scarlet carnations; Perle roses and Chinese lilies; scarlet, Bradt and white carnations and holly; salvia, white carnations and Florida moss; Harrisii, poinsettias and Paper Whites for tall vase pieces.

A red immortelle wreath with mignonette and white carnations makes a nice box, also purple pansies with Bridesmaid or Golden Gate roses; Lawson and white carnations; Lawson with Enchantress carnations; Bridesmaid or Golden Gate roses with Farleyense ferns.

For a lycopodium wreath with sprays of mistletoe all around, or as a lining, tie with a cluster of narrow scarlet ribbon bows. For the same with a cluster of red carnations tie with holly ribbon.

Combine Forget-me-nots, mignonette and Perle roses.

American Beauties need no other flower but are often tied with a big bow of ribbon matching the color. Liberty or Meteor roses may be used with Golden Gate. Adiantum Croweanum, mistletoe and Bride or Kaiserin roses make a fine box; Chatenay with Ivory or Bride roses; Sunset and Meteor roses.

White roses, white carnations or Romans, if left on hand, can be brightened with brilliant coleus foliage and holly tied with scarlet ribbon.

Tie the outside of the more expensive boxes with holly ribbon or a smart clip of holly in the tie of white or scarlet ribbon. Spread good impressions on the outside of the box as well as inside.

Bring one contrasting color literally under another and the effect will be to add to quantity. Throw a few of shorter stems end for end across the stems of longer stock.

Scarlet green and white are preeminently Christmas colors. Keep the blues, lavenders and yellows at a respectful distance.

Hang scarlet bells between festoons of lycopodium wreathing and tie with long loops of holly ribbon.

Tie pots of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine with narrow pink gauze ribbon. Group by themselves to have the best effect.

If possible let all cut flowers have an over-night stand in water. Clip the ends of the stems of flowers and greens as they are sent out. Gertrude Blair.

BEGONIA LORRAINE.

How and when is the best time to propagate Begonia Gloire de Lorraine if bottom heat to an extreme degree is required?

When should lilac be brought in from the cold house for Easter forcing?

J. H.

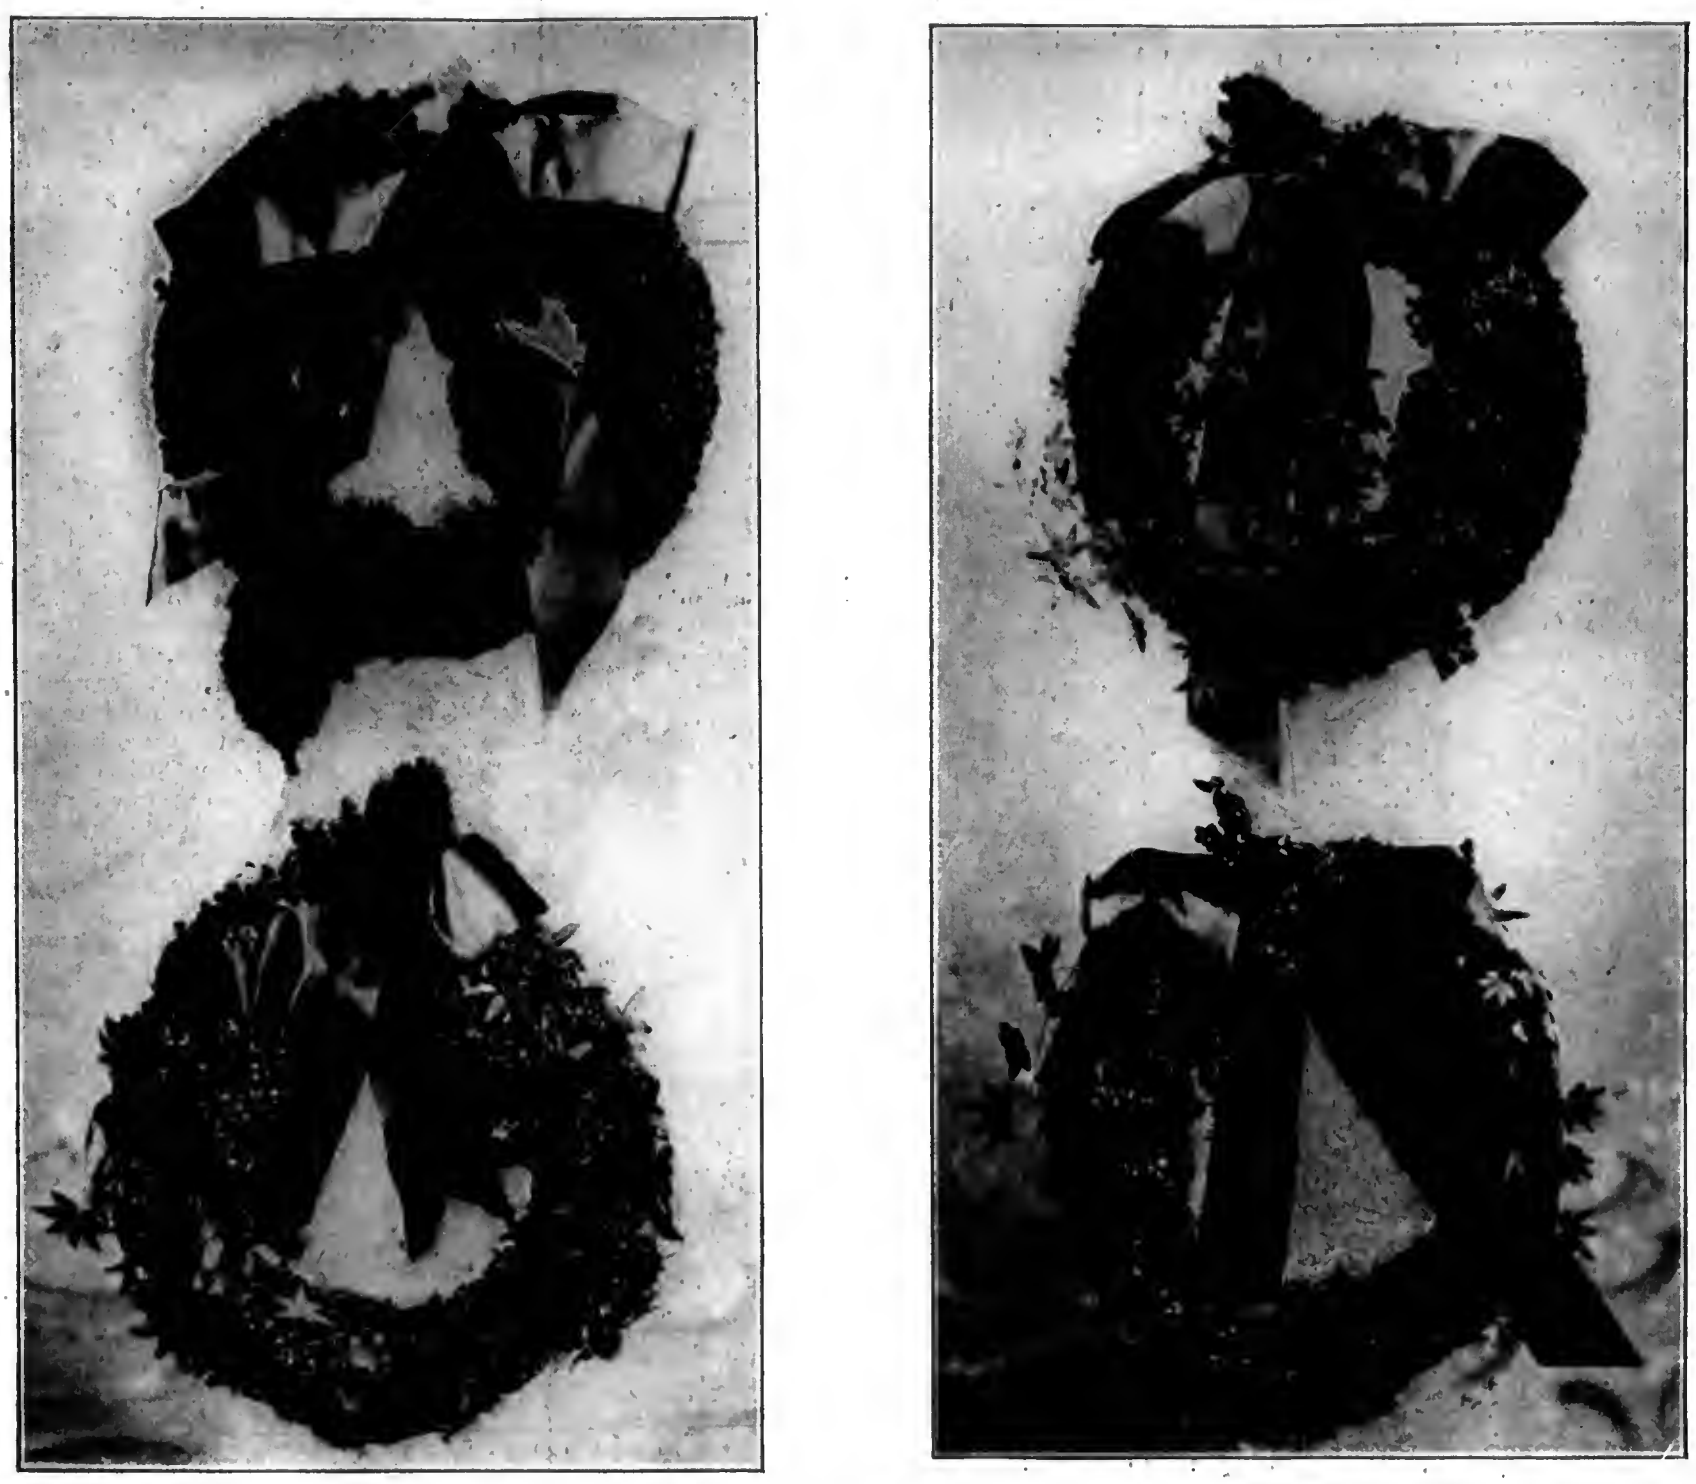
If you can get a crop of nice young wood from your plants you should propagate at once and on all occasions whenever you can secure this class of wood. If you wish to adopt the method of leaf propagating, these will have to be inserted as soon as they have attained a proper condition of ripeness. This is indicated by the leaves assuming a bronzy tint. The greener and fresher looking leaves are more liable to damp off.

As Easter will be late, the time to bring lilacs into flower for that occasion will be considerably shortened; in fact, they will require little forcing at all. The beginning of March would be about the time to bring them in, placing them in a temperature of 50 degrees till the eyes break, when they can be subjected to a higher temperature as the leaves develop, if required. R.

TROUBLE WITH LILIES.

I'm in trouble with my Harrisii lilies. We potted them August 20, and the tallest ones are now eight inches high and the most of them four and six inches. There are only a few of them diseased and the plants seem healthy enough, only they have such a short-jointed growth. We have kept the temperature at 56 to 58 degrees. Is that too low? Does a damp atmosphere help them along? I have a patch of Japanese longiflorum coming up. What temperature for them? Would nitrate of soda be a good stimulant? If so, what proportion of nitrate of soda to water?

M. S.



There is always more or less trouble with Harrisii lilies, especially the earlier potted ones, in regard to length of stem. Weed out all the diseased ones as soon as they appear and raise the temperature of the house to 60 or 62 degrees. Use a little weak manure water once a week, and, as the stems reach out, gradually increase the strength of it until it is of the color of beer.

The increase in temperature will also encourage the increase of green fly, which will require careful watching. Frequent and light fumigation will prevent them from making much headway, but this should be persisted in, whether they are visible or not.

Harrisii delights in a rather humid atmosphere till the buds begin to appear, when a drier atmosphere is necessary to give a firmer texture to foliage and bloom.

The longiflorums, if intended for Easter blooming, should not yet be showing above the surface. They will be early enough if brought into the house by the first week of January and placed in a temperature of 50 degrees till the stems have attained a height of four inches, when the temperature can be raised as high as 62 degrees, if the case demands.

Easter being so late in 1905, great care and judgment will have to be exercised not to allow them to get too far ahead. Remember it will be easier to push them along than it will be to retard their growth during the first weeks of April. Nitrate of soda, being quick in its action, should only be used in small quantities and only when plants are making their best growth. One pound to fifty gallons of water is sufficiently strong for even such soft-wooded plants as L. longiflorum. R.

CINDERS—IDLE BENCH.

Is it advisable to use soft coal cinders in place of sand under pot plants on a bench? What would be best to plant in a carnation bench where the plants have died out? Would asters fill the bill, and what kind? E. S. F.

After long experience and careful observation I have found no material superior to coal ashes as a bed for small pots. Sand after a short time is liable to become muddy and is at all times liable to shift when watering is being done. So long as ashes are kept fresh there is little danger from earth worms, which are so destructive to drainage.

Where carnation crops have failed and the house is not suited for a stock house or where it cannot be utilized for bedding stock, a crop of cut and come again stocks of the Princess Alice variety can be made to pay. There are other crops, such as Gladiolus Mav and Blushing Beauty, mignonette and, even late as it is, Lilium longiflorum, which will pay better than asters. Any of the standard varieties of asters which are suitable for forcing may be used with success. R.

ADIANTUMS.

Can adiantums be grown with success under benches that are about half lighted? What is the treatment they need if grown on the benches? Do they need a temperature above or below 50 degrees? We have had no success with them at all. H. O. C.

Adiantums cannot be grown profitably or satisfactorily under the benches in a half lighted location, there being usually too much drip from the bench above, too many snails and other vermin on the ground beneath, and in addition to these disadvantages the fronds grown in so poor a light are too soft to be useful in cut flower work.

The culture of adiantums for cutting is very briefly stated as follows: Fill a bench to a depth of four or five inches with good rose soil, then plant strong young adiantums from 3-inch pots twelve to fifteen inches apart, this being preferably done in July in readiness for the following winter. Water in the newly planted stock, but do not get the soil sodden, thus giving the plants a chance to root better. Keep the glass shaded until about the middle of October, after which the full sunshine will be beneficial.

Ventilate quite freely as long as the weather will permit and, as the plants become established, water more freely, but avoid souring the soil, and as the days grow shorter be sure to water early in the day, so that the plants will dry off before night. The best temperature at which to grow these ferns is 60 to 62 degrees at night.

The worst pest one has to contend with in growing adiantums for fronds is the common snail and various remedies are suggested. Among the best is pulverized camphor sprinkled sparingly among the plants. An occasional dusting of slaked lime over the surface of the soil also discourages snails to some extent and is also beneficial to some soils.

HYDROCYANIC ACID GAS.

In a former communication I alluded to my experience in the use of this powerful agent as unsatisfactory and uncertain. I have experimented with it cautiously but persistently for at least five years. I have destroyed millions of insects in that time, but I have also sacrificed hundreds of dollars' worth of valuable crops. It seems as if I had tried it in every degree of temperature permissible in a greenhouse, on wet nights and on dry ones, and yet I know nothing for certain.

The minimum quantity of cyanide of potassium recommended by our friends Scott and Croydon, is two and one-half ounces to 2,000 cubic feet of air space. My houses contain from 40,000 to 60,000 cubic feet of space, which would allow, if not require, from fifty to seventy-five ounces of cyanide of potassium, twenty to thirty quarts of sulphuric acid and twenty to thirty quarts of water.

In such a house, 30x175 and eight feet to the ridge, I recently put three jars, each containing two ounces of cyanide, three ounces of sulphuric acid and four and one-half ounces of water. White flies in the winged state were quite thoroughly killed and the tender ends of plants for nearly a foot seared as by fire. What would have happened had I multiplied the dose by eight or ten I can hardly imagine. I have sometimes used heavier quantities with less effect.

We always buy the best quality guaranteed cyanide of potassium but it is not always the same. Sometimes there is a heavy residue of salt left in the jars but some we now have leaves the water perfectly clear. This may account in part for the different results, for sometimes we hit it right, killing the insects without injury to the plants.

When Mr. Scott recommended five ounces of cyanide for 2,000 feet of glass I thought the printer had left off a cypher, but when I find it repeated this fall I can't understand it. The only point I would make is that people had better begin very small and increase as necessary. G. C. A.

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

Marketing the Holiday Cuts.

Growers sometimes complain of the small returns received from certain shipments and of course the blame is laid to the commission man, who in all probability is not in the least at fault. The grower is to a certain extent in the hands of his agent but the law of supply and demand makes prices. If the man at the scene of demand is ignorant of the supply, he is in the position of a lawyer from whom his client has withheld an important point in his case.

Keep your commission man fully informed as to what you will have and are likely to have. He will then be able to take orders in advance from buyers who will change their plans if any uncertainty exists. The grower should confine himself to furnishing the supply and let demand be handled by those best versed in its intricacies and whims.

It is obviously better to ship regularly a prime article and receive a fair return than to send at the last minute a large consignment of stock which, even if it did not include some pickled goods, arrives too late to be sold with the best advantage.

The above is especially true with regard to trade around the holidays, when the consumer is looking for an article of extra quality. Decoration day calls for quantity rather than quality but at Christmas buyers are extremely critical and there is no flower so lasting and at the same time within the reach of all classes, as the carnation.

Forcing Christmas Crops.

There is little that can be done now to increase the supply except to increase the temperature by degrees from three to five points. Let this increase consume at least a week and the decrease to normal temperature the same. If your plants are not in the best of health on no account raise the temperature.

Last, but not least, do not cut everything in sight. Besides being a severe check on the plants, regular shipment is interfered with and this is disappointing to the commission man, who can often fill orders directly after Christmas at high prices. Geo. S. Osborn.

CARNATION NOTES.—WEST.

Handling the Christmas Cut.

Just ten days from the time these notes appear in print you will be in the thick of the Christmas rush. Even now you are wondering where you are going to cut all the blooms your customers are asking you to supply and wondering whether you will be blest with sunny weather during the next two weeks. Much will depend on the weather. Not only will you be able to cut a great many more blooms, but with sun you can force the plants a little with far less harm than you could if the weather were cloudy. Every experienced grower knows full well that his plants will thrive in a much higher temperature when the weather is bright than they will during cloudy weather; in fact, our sunny day temperature is always 10 degrees higher than the cloudy day temperature. So in case of bright weather very little or no unnatural forcing will be required to make the plants do all that ought to be asked of them.

The temperature can be raised 5 or 6 degrees at night during the last few nights without harm to the plants if it is done gradually, say a rise of a degree each night until 6 degrees have been added. A sudden jump of 6 degrees would be very apt to burst many calyxes for you, besides weakening the plants materially. The size of the bloom will diminish more, too. So go gradually.

In case of cloudy weather, then is when the grower has his trouble, especially if the weather had been moderately bright up to the last week. Even with a considerable rise in the temperature the plants will not give the blooms they would give in bright weather and so, instead of cutting an increased crop, you will have trouble in getting your usual cut. It takes a level head to keep balanced at such times. The public wants the flower regardless of sunshine and you are expected to deliver the goods. You will have to bring into play every wrinkle and trick you know of to increase your output during the last three days, always bearing in mind, however, that whatever you put out shall be first class in every respect.

Saving up bloom must be practiced to some extent, but it should not be practiced to the extent of pickling. Many growers injure their reputation through this practice for the sake of a very few dollars. Carnation blooms cannot be saved up two weeks and then expected to stand the handling they are invariably subjected to during the Christmas rush. They may look nice and fresh and crisp when you take them out of the cut flower room but every little knock will bruise them, when a fresh cut bloom would show not the least effect.

You can, however, save up your blooms a week and have them in good condition if you use good judgment in cutting and handling. You can't save every bloom a week, either, but you can save most of them. There will be some blooms that will be less firm than others, and some varieties will not store as well as others. These you must watch and market them before they deteriorate. The different colors will have to be handled differently. For instance, most of the white varieties become whiter as the blooms develop. Some of the reds become a deeper, richer red, while others lose their brightness. Some of the pinks become washy, while others of a darker shade will take on a prettier, lighter shade. Most all of the light pink varieties fade out badly and especially so if the sun is strong.

To save the colors you will have to cut them and set in a cool place, where the light is not too strong. A cool, dry cellar in which the temperature stands about 45 to 48 degrees is an ideal place. Let them have plenty of fresh air but no draughts on the blooms. If you tie them in bunches of twenty-five it will save much wear on the blooms while caring for them. Don't tie the stems tight, but just enough to hold the bunches together. Have the stems even; then when you want to cut the stems you can take one bunch after another and with a sharp knife cut the stems all at one time. Before sending them out you must look over the bunches carefully and replace any blooms which did not keep perfectly.

Do not crowd too many blooms in one vase and do not put them in vases that are too deep. Occasionally we see carnations with stems fifteen inches long chucked down into a 12-inch vase. They settle down into the vase until the blooms become wedged together into a small bunch, instead of each bloom standing away clear. If the stems are stiff a vase that will reach not more than half way up the stem is plenty deep enough. With such a vase the blooms can spread out over a space six times as large as the vase and no crowding is possible. A. F. J. Baur.

Carnation Abundance, White, as Grown by Rudolph Fischer, Great Neck, L. I., N. Y.

SLEEPY CARNATIONS.

Please tell me the cause of my carnations going to sleep in from twelve to twenty-four hours after being picked quite close daily. I have grown carnations for many a year, but have never seen anything like this. I have Enchantress, Estelle, Higinbotham, Morning Glory, Lawson, Melba, Armazindy, Gomez, White Cloud, etc. The stock looked fair when planted the latter part of August, in soil left in the houses where carnations grew last year, turning it over and adding an inch of manure on all and a slight sprinkling of bone meal on some benches. I am growing them quite cool, between 50 and 60 degrees in the day time and 46 to 54 at night. I have them on the dry side; at times the soil runs through one's fingers like sand. I understand this soil has grown carnations for a good many years. My experience is that carnations go to sleep after being fumigated strongly with tobacco stems, but these go to sleep when they haven't been fumigated for weeks. B. J. P.

Your method of culture is not such as one would expect very high grade blooms from. I cannot point out any one thing that I could say positively is causing your trouble, but there are several which could materially aid in bringing it on.

The old soil may be the cause of it. If carnations have been growing on it, as you say, for several years, certain elements of a perfect soil may have been exhausted. You are allowing too wide a range in temperature; 46 degrees one night and 54 degrees the next is sure to cause trouble. A variation of 2 degrees is enough to allow. You allow them to dry out too severely, too. Soil in which plants are growing should never become so dry that it will run through the fingers like sand. The carnation is a water loving plant when in vigorous growth.

I have several times said in these notes to run them just a little on the dry side during dark spells. By that I mean that the soil should be in such a state of moisture that you can crumble it readily in the hand. Try to keep the soil in an even state of moisture all the time. Perhaps you pick your blooms too close, too. At this time of the year we find that carnation blooms keep best if allowed to open up pretty well on the plants; not what we term over-ripe, but just when they are full open.

I would advise you to begin watering them carefully with a view to keeping the soil just about the same right along. Keep the night temperature 50 to 52 degrees, day temperature 60 degrees on cloudy days and 65 to 70 degrees on bright days. Lawson wants 4 degrees warmer at night and on cloudy days. Give a crack of air whenever possible and all you can on bright days. A light sprinkling of air-slaked lime watered in might help some, too; it certainly could do no harm. Drop a pinch of sulphur on one of the steam pipes about every twenty feet. Next season try to plant in new soil. A. F. J. BAUR.

CUT AND COME AGAIN.

The accompanying illustrations are reproductions from photographs of Abundance, white, the most wonderfully prolific carnation in existence, or that ever has been in existence. One picture shows three plants potted from the field September 23 and photographed October 10. One plant has thirty-two flower shoots and the other two twenty-eight each. They were not the largest plants by any means, as I planted numerous plants with forty and fifty shoots. Every shoot brings a flower and as soon as a flower is picked the eyes below the cut send up other shoots in a very short time, making it a continuous bloomer. Growers will note the absence of grass at the bottom of the plants, as cuttings do not stay there but spring right up to business.

The plants grow so fast that during their life in the field they had to be cut back four times. The last time the shoots were so numerous that we had to resort to harsh measures to save time; we took hold of the entire shoots of a plant with one hand while with the other we cut below with shears to the desired length! It is certainly the greatest thing for growing I or any one else ever saw. My benches are a sight to see, and will be all winter long.

I have four center benches ninety-six feet long by eight feet wide and three side benches 100 feet long by two and one-half feet wide planted to it, and would have more if I had room. I raised it from seed eight years ago. It is a cross between Scott and McGowan. It shows strong characteristics of both parents but is a great deal more prolific than either; in fact there is nothing to compare with it for blooming quality.

It is not a fancy carnation that has to bring fancy prices to pay, but it is a pure white, of medium size, highly scented and wonderfully prolific, just what every florist wants who is growing carnations for a living and not for pleasure alone.

The other picture is from a photograph of a plant left out after the houses were filled, to show the fibrous roots and how they retain the ball of soil, but the ball is not necessary, as it grows, no matter how or when planted. I have filled a bench as late as the middle of November, after Jones chrysanthemum was cut, and they have done finely, not one missing.

R. FISCHER.

TEMPERATURE.

Will you kindly tell me what average temperature to keep for a house with Prosperity, Lawson and Enchantress carnations, also, how to burn tobacco dust to fumigate the houses? C. H.

You will find it impossible to run the temperature so that it will exactly suit all three of these varieties. Mrs. Lawson wants a temperature higher than any other carnation we have; 55 degrees suits it best. Enchantress is just the reverse, while Prosperity is well suited with a medium temperature. If the temperature in your house varies somewhat between the two ends and you have Enchantress planted at the cool end, Prosperity in the center and Lawson at the warm end you need not have much trouble, but if Enchantress is at the warmest end and Lawson the coldest, then you will have trouble all winter. Lawson will split badly and Enchantress will come sleepy. Between the two evils you will have to choose which will be the most costly to you and act accordingly. Lawson wants 55 degrees; Enchantress should not have over 50 to 52 degrees.

To burn tobacco powder take a piece of tin 12x18 inches, bend upward and outward about two inches at each end. Lay on top of this a piece of wire fly screen the same size as the tin and bend the two ends down over the ends of the tin, so the screen will hook onto the tin securely. Spread on the screen a piece of paper sprinkled with kerosene and on this spread your tobacco powder. Light it around the edges and be sure the tobacco catches fire; sometimes the paper alone will not start it, but if it starts in three or four places it is sufficient. Tobacco dust will not make a dense smoke, like the stems, but the fumes are just as strong and effective. Use about a 4-inch or 5-inch pot of powder on each screen and one screen to each twenty-five running feet in a house twenty feet wide. Start these in the evening, as it takes several hours for one of these piles to burn up. The above quantities are what we find effective with To-bakine Fumigating Powder, but I suppose others use about the same.

A. F. J. Baur.

OVER-FEEDING.

My carnations are coming sleepy and the trouble seems to be increasing. My soil is about one-fourth cow manure and good clean loam. The plants were housed about the middle of September and what flowers I cut were all right, with a few exceptions, until about Thanksgiving. I have been giving them some liquid dressing of late, as the blooms were growing smaller. I ran the temperature 48 to 50 degrees until lately I have let it go up to 55 degrees at night, but they came sleepy before I raised the temperature or used liquid dressing. Twice in the liquid I put two ounces of nitrate of soda to a barrel for a house 28x100. Now what shall I do to bring them out of it? I shall have to use liquid fertilizer to get good blooms. The plants look very healthy and are putting up a large crop of flowering shoots with good length of stems. The varieties are Crane, Joost, Hill and Queen Louise. G. P. G.

While there may be other causes for the sleepiness of your carnations, I feel certain of one thing and that is that you are over-feeding them with manure. One-fourth manure is the greatest of plenty for carnations, and carnations that are planted in such a rich soil the middle of September surely do not need any extra feeding by the first of December. Instead of piling on the liquid manure you would better give them a sprinkling of air-slaked lime to set free what food there is already in the soil and a little bone to give them substance. Give plenty of ventilation whenever possible. There may be other causes, but I feel sure you have erred along this line.

A. F. J. Baur.

COMMERCIAL VARIETIES.

The market for cut blooms has been better than for several seasons and commercial growers generally are fairly well satisfied with their returns for the year. Local conditions vary so much that it is presumptuous to say that the kinds mentioned below will suit every taste, and, again, a heavy call develops in some sections for early flowers, while the demand in another section for similar stock may be almost nil. There was a frantic call this year in the New York market for good early flowers, particularly of yellow varieties, and Monrovia was wholesaling for $5 a dozen on October 1 that would not bring nearly half as much two weeks later. This demand was due largely to the fact that a killing frost had wiped out the dahlias, cosmos and other outside stock in many sections before the end of September. This naturally created a shortage in flowers and the mum growers benefited very materially, and, while we do not want to see the dahlia men go out of business, we hope we may get our share of the early market next year.

Even admitting that we are not favored with an early frost every year, the grower who has good flowers early in October is more likely to make money than the grower who tries to hold back for Christmas. The first flowers have the charm of newness and change, whereas by Christmas the public has had enough and the novelty has gone. Early varieties also are more profitable by reason of the fact that they are sold off early and the bench space can be immediately utilized for some other purpose, which is quite an important consideration to the average florist.

The varieties here mentioned are given in the order of their flowering:

Yellows: Merstham Yellow, Monrovia, Reveil A'Begles, Halliday, Appleton, Yellow Eaton, Bonnaffon.

Whites: Polly Rose, Alice Byron, Clementine Touset, White Coombes, Eaton, Chadwick and Merry Christmas.

Pinks: Pacific, Lady Harriet, Mrs. Coombes, W. Duckham, Mrs. G. Mileham and Maud Dean.

I mention Merstham Yellow first because if it comes as early next year it will be the first of the yellows fit to cut. It is, of course, a novelty yet, and in a sense untried, so we must wait another year for final judgment. Reveil A'Begles is also a novelty though I have heard it highly spoken of. The other yellows are, of course, well known, and, if a grower could have only one yellow, that one should be Col. Appleton. Bonnaffon, while it has been ousted by Appleton as a midseason, is still largely grown for a late variety, and fairly good flowers are still in sight for Christmas.

In whites, Polly Rose comes first and with this, as with its parent, the pink Pacific, it would be better if more of the growers tried to grow better flowers and not so many of them. Polly Rose is a very dwarf grower and when it is pinched and several shoots taken up, it means that a lot of short-stemmed, small flowers are thrown on the market that come into direct competition with the late asters; whereas, had the mums been better grown and sent in with good stems their superiority over the asters would be self-evident. Polly Rose brought this year from 3 cents each up to 40 cents each and the range of quality was about as variable as the price.

Clementine Touset is a new arrival about which I know little, though it is large and early, two very desirable features. White Coombes is in every respect a replica of its parent, Mrs. Coombes, except in color and will be largely grown in the east next season as a second early white. With us it will take the place of Robinson, which has become so soft as to be practically worthless. White Coombes was certificated by three committees, New York, Boston and Philadelphia. The other whites are standards and well known.

In pinks there is little change. Duckham will be grown more largely with us than any other pink. Maud Dean in many sections is still the best late pink. Those growers who have been handling Viviand-Morel as a pink will find Leila Filkins an improvement on it in every way, but most growers run entirely to the incurving types, as they ship better and do not need so much care in packing.

There are several varieties that cannot be classed as either white, pink or yellow, which have begun to make their mark in the trade and among these are W. R. Church, Harrison Dick and Donald McLeod, the two latter being very beautiful varieties on the bronzy-crimson order that light up wonderfully. Church is a purple-crimson that oftener than not shows a bronze effect. It is a peculiar color and very distinct but the floral artist has put his approval on it and Church will be grown in considerable quantity next year.

S. T. Wright, while sent out as a crimson, sold fine as a bronze, this peculiar state of affairs arising from the fact that on an early bud this variety incurves so closely as to entirely hide the crimson and show only the golden bronze reverse.

There are many varieties that do well and sell well in different sections of the country, that are not heard of outside the home circle, so to speak, and where a grower has such a variety it would be foolish to discard it.

Occasionally one hears of a variety that drops out of sight to reappear in a year or two as something entirely new. Such a variety is the Dorothy Faust that has appeared at Philadelphia. From the information to hand there seems no question but that it is Mrs. Robert McArthur, a variety introduced by Spaulding in 1897. This is the second time that this variety has come up under a new name, which is a tribute to its staying powers as a variety, if nothing else. There is no desire on anyone's part to willfully deceive, so far as I know. A label lost or transposed will easily account for these things but if we are to grow this variety again we may as well grow it under its original and true name.

PROPAGATING.

Having invested in some choice stock plants of chrysanthemums, I planted them in six inches of good, strong soil. How shall I proceed to secure the greatest number of good plants from them?

Why does Viviand-Morel sometimes give blooms of very delicate pink and cream? They grew in soil two-thirds loam, one-third cow manure, and were moderately fed with bone meal, blood and very weak solution of nitrate.

J. J. L.

The correspondent does not state whether he has planted out his stock plants in a bench or box. If they are in a box they can be easily moved to a warmer house, but if in a bench the house should be kept at about 50 degrees at night, with a corresponding rise during the day. Do not water too much during the winter months and do not, as soon as a small cutting appears, trim it off with the idea of getting all you can. Let the plant make a little top growth to encourage root action and you will ultimately get more cuttings.

When Viviand-Morel is taken on the crown bud it not infrequently produces flowers streaked and marked in the manner described. The feeding as given would not affect the color at all. Morel has seen its best days; Leila Filkins will give a flower just as good with far less trouble. Late buds of Viviand-Morel, that is to say, buds taken after September 1, would not show the pale coloring but would run an even pink all through the flower.

CHRYSANTHEMUM MRS. WEST.

Gustav D. Lotze, Glen Burnie, Md., who is one of the most successful growers of chrysanthemums for the Baltimore market, has formed a very high opinion of Mrs. D. V. West, which is one of his best white varieties, worthy of a place in the collection of any grower of exhibition blooms. The form and character of the flower is shown in the accompanying illustration, from a photograph of one of Mr. Lotze's blooms.

CHRYSANTHEMUM FIDELITY.

It has been suggested that Elmer D. Smith, of Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., has formed an alliance with the man who names the sleeping cars. Evidence of this is found in the names Mr. Smith has given to some of his 1905 set of chrysanthemum novelties, for instance, Okolona and Kinkora. At any rate it is a great improvement on Dr. Oronhytheka, by which original name very few trade growers would recognize Yellow Eaton.

Another good name chosen by Mr. Smith for one of his 1905 set is Fidelity, pictured herewith. This may be termed an improved Alice Byron, from which it is a seedling. It inherited the pure white color and growth of that excellent variety, but is much larger, more artistic in form and of fine substance. Owing to these qualifications it will be a welcome addition to the commercial list. The height is three feet, at its best November 5 to 10. It was the winner of the silver cup for best white seedling at the World's Fair flower show and was certificated by the C. S. A.

DECORATIVE MUM PLANTS.

These are becoming more frequently asked for yearly. Varieties that are free-flowering when grown in a natural bush form or bush standard, such as are seen at some of the nurseries and parks in groups, are invaluable for this purpose. Quite recently there have been several new additions to the decorative section by a continental raiser, M. Auguste Nonin of Paris. He has this year sent out some useful Japanese varieties, free-flowering plants of good habit, that make nice little bushes, and are not, like some of the older sorts, unduly tall. Of these I should be inclined to recommend Etoile d'Or, a bright golden-yellow flowered Japanese with medium-sized flowers; Primevere, another, but with rather larger starry-shaped flowers, pure pale yellow shaded buff; Etoile Blanche, rather large, color pure paper white; Acajou, a pretty medium-sized flower, color dull crimson-red, florets flat, of medium width, very free; Innocence, a nice little white flower of considerable decorative effect; Jason, lemon-yellow.

Sometimes, by way of a change, the single-flowered varieties are used in this way. Ladysmith, rosy-purple, is one of the prettiest. Paris Daisy is a little gem, white with yellow center, a starry flower. Helen Skinner is quite new, large in size, florets flat, color a fine shade of velvety purple-amaranth, center yellow.—C. H. Payne, in Gardeners' Chronicle.

AMERICAN MUMS.

The chrysanthemum writers of the European trade press frequently allude to the fact that, while so many splendid new sorts are constantly coming from Australia and from France, as well as from English raisers, little in the way of new sorts comes to them from America. But if the gentlemen who feel that America has not contributed her share in this direction will turn from the exhibition table to the market reports they will find that at about Thanksgiving the leading varieties in quantity and salability in the London market were Major Bonnaffon, Western King and Niveus. Bonnaffon was raised by F. Dorner & Sons Co., Lafayette, Ind., and sent out in 1894. Western King is one of Nathan Smith & Sons' varieties, disseminated in 1897, and Niveus came from the same source in 1893. The English market grower makes his money growing American varieties and spends it trying French and Australian seedlings.

THE WELLS-POCKETT SET.

A surprising number of very fine chrysanthemum novelties are now coming out of Australia each year, and of the raisers there none is more conspicuous for his success than is T. W. Pockett, most, if not all of whose productions reach the trade through W. Wells & Co., Earlswood, Redhill, Surrey, England, who sent the wonderful collection of cut blooms to the Chrysanthemum Society of America show at Boston this year. This contained many of the 1905 set of novelties. In writing to an American correspondent Mr. Wells says:

"You may be interested to know something about our novelties for 1905. Well, they must be branded as the best lot we ever had and we could easily have made another set of twenty, and then there would not have been a bad one. These are really the pick of 3,000 plants (seedlings) which Mr. Pockett raised in Australia in 1902, which flowered over there for the first time in April, 1903, eighty of which he sent to me. These we flowered in our nurseries this fall and those named are the cream of the eighty varieties, but it is almost a shame to throw away quite thirty other good ones, but people on this side are all clamoring for size. You will see 'size' among these next fall and quality thrown in. They may be well termed the Gold Medal set.".

Livingston Seed Co.'s Fourteen Favorite Mums.

THREE OF A KIND.

The accompanying illustrations show the three fine chrysanthemums which John Breitmeyer's Sons, Detroit, have been exhibiting at the fall flower shows. These were raised by H. W. Rieman, of Indianapolis, and sold to the Breitmeyers, who early recognized the commercial value of the set. They have grown them for their own trade but never exhibited them until the World's Fair flower show, at which Majestic took first prize for 100 white in a class with a larger number of entries than were ever before staged; no less than fourteen finely finished vases of 100 blooms each. Adelia is also white and Fred Breitmeyer thinks it is fully as good a thing commercially as Majestic. Madonna is shell pink. All three are of much the same form, of good growth and fine substance. They should be good shippers. After standing the week at the Chicago show a bunch of petals could be plucked from a flower and it would fill up the hole so that they would not be missed; nor would other petals fall under violent shaking.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

Eugene Dailledouze, chairman of the committee for examining seedlings in New York, reports that the variety Dorothy Faust, presented to that committee December 3 is identical with the variety Mrs. Robert McArthur certificated by the society in 1897. The same variety was presented to the same committee a few years later as David S. Ward. Mr. Dailledouze was a member of the commitee which granted the original certificate.

As the result of a misunderstanding by the secretary of the C. S. A., all the varieties of chrysanthemums introduced in the spring of 1903 were omitted from the report and lists recently published by the society. These varieties will be included in the annual report for 1904, to be issued soon.

LIFTING BULBS.

I have a large lot of bulbs bedded, such as hyacinths, tulips, narcissi, Spanish iris, crocus, etc., which, after they flower in the spring, I deem it best to lift so as to use the ground for other purposes. How can I tell by the tops after they have flowered the proper time to lift the bulbs, as I desire to again plant them in the fall and want them in a proper condition before taking them up? H. L. W.

If lifted the tops should be about ripe before the bulbs are disturbed. If lifted as soon as the flower is faded you arrest the process of storing up strength for the following year.

"SIX DAYS SHALT THOU LABOR."

We serve the public, but is that any reason why we should work seven days for a week? "Six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work," was the Divine command, which goes on enumerating every member of the family and the stranger within thy gates, also thy cattle. Why should we as florists be compelled to break this command, rising early and working late? Can we be expected to give our best service when every nerve and fibre of our being has been taxed to its utmost capacity? Formerly the banks kept open until 10 o'clock Saturday nights, but they have learned a better way. The same amount of business can be accomplished in less time. Our young people hesitate to engage in a business which permits no respite. The Sunday closing laws are not enforced, yet every florist knows he would be better off physically, mentally and morally if he kept closed doors one day of the seven. Other cities do it, why not in St. Louis? Occasionally there is an order that cannot be given during the week, but once let your patrons know you must have time to rest and breathe outside of your business and they will soon fall in line. M. S. N.

FARTHEST NORTH.

In answer to E. O. L., who wants to know how far north cut flowers can be grown, I would like to say that I don't think the distance north has anything to do with the growing of roses and carnations. Cost of growing may be greater; on the other hand prices are higher. I am not an expert. The fact is I don't pretend to be a florist in the real sense, but my carnations compare very favorably with those of Chicago growers, stems not quite as long, and as for roses, James River valley of the north is the home of the finest roses grown in the open air; why not in the greenhouse? The trouble with the greenhouses in North Dakota has been they have been operated by men with neither experience nor sufficient capital.

HEATING VIOLET HOUSES.

In answer to the query of P. W., who wishes to know if violets can be grown in houses where steam heat is employed, I would say that we have grown them equally well in houses heated by steam as by hot water. In either case you must have your heating system so arranged that you can control the heat and keep the house or houses at the desired temperature. To accomplish this the grower who uses steam entirely should have his houses piped with several coils so that he can have little or much heat, as the weather calls for. Otherwise, if he has to turn on a large coil in order to have any heat at all it will be too much in mild weather. Really it is the best to have a valve at each end of each run of pipe so that one pipe at a time can be added as it grows colder and this is easily arranged if, when piping the house, you make up your coils with headers or branch tees. In fact, every house should be equipped with at least one such coil, as in this way you can graduate your heat to a nicety, be it either steam or hot water, especially the former, and there is then no excuse for the fireman giving a house a too high temperature, which he is liable to do otherwise.

FUMIGATING VIOLETS.

Please tell me how to kill the little bugs on my violets with this hydrocyanic acid gas. I have used tobacco in every form without result, and smoking hurts the sales. J. K. P.

The formula for fumigating with hydrocyanic acid gas is as follows: Water, one quart; cyanide of potassium, five ounces; sulphuric acid, one quart. This is the quantity for 1,000 cubic feet of space. The correspondent will have to compute the space in the house and use a corresponding amount of the formula.

Any deep earthen jar will answer the purpose and the water and acid should be mixed first and so placed that the package of cyanide can be lowered into the jar by a string from the outside of the house. Have the jars located in the lowest places in the house, as the gas is so light that it rises fast and under no circumstance attempt to drop the packages otherwise than from the outside, as the gas forms so quickly and is so deadly that it would kill one before he could get out of the house; in fact, I never like to tell anyone to use it for fear that some accident will happen. Do not allow anyone to go near the houses till they have been aired, and you should have the ventilators so that they can be opened without entering the house.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY

The Central Passenger Association and the Trunk Line Passenger Association have granted the rate of a fare and one-third to the members going to the meeting of this society in Chicago, January 25 and 26. It is presumed that the other associations will fall into line and help make this the best meeting and the largest attended of any we have yet held.

There will be a supplement to the premium list to go to press December 27. Anyone wishing to offer special premiums or advertise in this supplement should get into communication with the secretary at once.

ALBERT M. HERR, Sec'y.

PROPAGATING BEAUTIES.

In selecting wood from Beauties for propagating purposes the greatest of care is necessary in order to secure wood of uniform ripeness, so that all the cuttings in the batch may form roots about the same time and that all may benefit by the uniform conditions of temperature, moisture, etc.

The practice of cutting long stems which are dilatory in showing bud and utilizing them for propagating wood is a fruitful source of failure, because in a stem of four or five feet in length, upon which there are perhaps twenty eyes, the eyes near the base and the eyes near the top are far removed from each other in point of ripeness and if these are indiscriminately placed in the sand it is obvious that there cannot be any uniformity in root formation.

To secure uniformity it is advisable to select short and close-jointed shoots, which may possess only four or six eyes, sufficient to make from one to three cuttings. These form roots in nearly the same length of time, are less liable to shed their leaves and make a much thriftier plant than do those from longer-jointed wood.

In nearly all Beauty houses some plants are found which are tardy in forming flower buds, but possess an abundance of wood and these are often called upon to furnish the wood for propagating. For years I have been carefully avoiding taking wood from such plants and find that this class of plant can by this method be greatly reduced.

By selecting wood from our most free blooming plants and persisting in this practice year after year we propagate only those plants which possess good characteristics, which are almost certain to be perpetuated in the young stock, thus securing stock of a more floriferous character and although we may not get quite so many extra long stems we will have a house of more uniform growth and a greater quantity of medium length stems, which are certainly the easiest sellers and most profitable.

Beauty cuttings of course require a good deal more room in the bench than teas do, as it is advisable not to allow the leaves to overlap each other, as this prevents them from drying out quickly after syringing. In order to prevent the loss of foliage in the cutting bench great care is required in watering, as the least excess of moisture in the sand is almost certain to cause it, while over-dryness will have the same effect, and as a cutting without foliage, no matter how well it may be rooted, can never make a good, robust plant, its vitality having received such a check, it is safest to discard all such.

Beauty cuttings when rooted require much the same treatment as teas, but if the weather is bright it is better to give them the benefit of shading a day or two longer, the foliage being so much larger that if it is allowed to wilt or curl it takes a longer time to recover.

When in the younger stages they are very subject to the attacks of green fly, which are hard to dislodge, by reason of the foliage lying so close to the pots and it requires more care to keep them clean than Brides, Maids or even Meteors.

After they get a start in 2-inch pots they grow very rapidly and should be carefully watched so that they do not become pot-bound, as this condition is a very serious set back to young Beauties.

RIBES.

SOIL FOR ROSES.

I send two samples of soil and some foliage of Golden Gate and Bridesmaid roses. They were benched June 1 and made a very good start. I took a small crop in September and since then the growth and blooms have been weak. There has been much blind wood, flowers off color and weak necked. Have run the houses 58 degrees at night, 62 to 70 degrees in the daytime, with air as long as possible. The benches are made of 6-inch boards with cracks three-quarters of an inch wide. We used sod, grass side down, with about four inches of soil like sample No. 1. Is the fault in the soil? Sample No. 2 is of sod prepared this fall for use next year. J. P. K.

The treatment accorded these roses should have produced better results and, had sample of soil No. 2 been used in a properly composted condition, there is little doubt but that the crops would have been satisfactory. Sample No. 1 is very poor and not at all suited for roses.

This method of laying the sod on the bottom of the bench is not the best way of getting the most out of it. In my experience I have found it more satisfactory to chop up all the sod and thoroughly incorporate it with the manure, using only a light covering of rye or wheat straw to cover the cracks. This serves the purpose of keeping the soil from running through till it gets set, when if the soil is properly handled there is no more danger from this cause. Sample No. 2 is a good rose soil and, if composted in April, chopped up and turned over a couple of times previous to using, there is no reason why it should not produce good crops.

ADVICE FOR A BEGINNER.

I am a beginner in floriculture, and there are some things I wish to know which I presume you will think even a beginner ought to know. I shall build a greenhouse next summer for roses and I wish to stock it with roses for forcing for cut flowers. Should I buy small plants, say rooted cuttings, and set them in nursery rows to be cultivated during the summer and then transplant them to the benches in the early fall, or would I better buy older stock in the fall to be planted in the benches at once? How close will they bear to be planted for best results? The house I propose to build will be 20x70 feet. I have a small one which I filled with carnations this fall. J. C. H.

From the nature of the queries propounded by J. C. H. it is quite evident that he is a beginner. I would advise him to study some good work on greenhouse management before he builds. He ought to equip himself with sufficient knowledge on this subject to give himself a fair chance of success. Such knowledge is contained in Scott's Manual, a work which no beginner should be without.

The safest kind of stock to purchase for a first planting, say in June, would be from 3-inch pots, and plant in the bench at once. By planting in the field you have to wait until the plant becomes dormant before it can be lifted with any chance of success. Brides and Maids require from 144 to 165 square inches of root area, Beauties about 225 inches.

RIBES.

A BEGINNER'S TROUBLE.

I am sending you some buds of my roses and ask your advice as to what would be the best course of treatment to improve the stock. The roses have been carried over from last year. They had been badly neglected when I took them over in the middle of September. They had contracted mildew, were only watered once in two or three days, weeds allowed to over-run them, etc. On taking possession I immediately got the weeds out, cut out all dead and some blind wood, then mulched them with well rotted horse manure, the only kind at my disposal. I watered them as frequently as they needed it, ventilated carefully, got nearly rid of the mildew by dusting on sulphur, also painted the pipes, syringed on fine days but find red spider still. The houses are two in number, 20x100, even span, running north and south. I am advised not to open the ventilators now, as the houses are rather high, and am told that opening the door on one end will give sufficient ventilation. The houses are heated by hot water. What temperature should I keep at night? I am covering the benches, on top of the mulch, with soil, as they did not seem to have enough and I found it difficult to get the dead leaves out of the mulch. What causes the leaves to drop off in great numbers?

H. B. S.

The sample buds reached me in good condition and after carefully inspecting them in the light shed by the foregoing letter I would advise careful and ample ventilation on all favorable occasions, using the ventilators for the purpose for which they were intended and avoiding ventilating by the door-way. I am also of the opinion that the stock was not in proper condition to use the mulch when it was applied and would advise not to add any soil to it until the plants are stronger and the season a little farther advanced. This is undoubtedly the cause of the leaves continuing to drop. Horse manure, if fresh, contains more ammonia than rose foliage cares for and this also tends toward the shedding of leaves.

The temperature for Bride, Maid, Chatenay and Golden Gate is 56 degrees at night, rising to 70 or 75 degrees, according to intensity of sunshine.

For red spider keep the syringe going every bright day and manipulate the spray so that the under side of each leaf is thoroughly washed, using sufficient force to dislodge the spider and break up the web. Do this early in the day, so that the foliage may become dry before sundown.

I have had about as good success with roses in houses running north and south as with those running east and west. I am aware that this statement is contrary to the accepted theory as to the aspect of rose houses but it is based on facts and "facts are chiels that winna ding, an' daurna be disputed," and can also be substantiated by fairly good reasons. RIBES.

THE BABY RAMBLER.

When a buyer pays a good price for a foreign novelty he does not always get the full value of his money unless it is arranged that the novelty shall be sent out simultaneously in Europe and America. To let a good thing loose in Europe means that it is sure to find its way into the trade in the United States, perhaps even before the purchaser of the American rights is ready to send it out. A case in point is Rose Mme. Levavasseur, which is popularly known as the Baby Rambler. There are seeral large and a number of smaller stocks of it in existence in this country, all obtained from perfectly legitimate sources, although the raiser sold the American "monopoly."

NEWBURY, O.—Reinhold Hoffman asks $5,000 damages of the county because of the building of a new road in front of his place which left his greenhouses about four feet below grade. The county commissioners contend that the damages asked are too near the original value of the property and offer $250 in settlement.

I HAVE certainly been well pleased with the REVIEW and would not like to be without it; I think every florist should take it.—C. L. SHANKS, Newton, Kan.

Vegetable Forcing.

VEGETABLE MARKETS.

CHICAGO, Dec. 14.—Cucumbers, 50c to $1.15 doz.; head lettuce, $3 to $4 bbl.; leaf lettuce, 30c to 40c case; tomatoes, $2.25 to $2.50 case.

BOSTON, Dec. 13.—Cucumbers, $6 to $7 box; seconds, $2 to $4 box; tomatoes, 20c lb.; asparagus, $5 doz. bunches; mushrooms, 60c to 70c lb.; lettuce, 25c doz.; mint, $1 doz.; radishes, 25c doz. bunches; parsley 50c to 75c box.

REGULATION OF TEMPERATURE.

We are now in the middle of the dull, short days, when more common sense must be exercised in the regulation of temperature than at any season of the year. It is quite a simple matter to keep up a certain temperature, provided the houses are well supplied with pipes and ample heating power behind them, but the trouble is that a given temperature is not what is necessary to promote the most healthy growth. The lack of fresh air to strengthen the growth makes it imperative that the forcing process be limited according to the amount of fresh air that can be given, so that what growth the plants make will be sufficiently strengthened for the best development of the crop.

Scientists could no doubt tell us just what component parts of the air are missing in a house filled with plants, where fire heat is used to maintain a certain temperature, but where the amount of fresh air is limited on account of the coldness of the atmosphere outdoors. But I must confess that I am no scientist, and I hardly think there are many employed in the forcing of vegetables. Wider and more remunerative fields are no doubt attracting their attention. Perhaps this is our misfortune, and perhaps if we could approach the matter from a scientific point of view we would not be a great deal better off than we are, and we might not be able to produce any better results than we now can by keeping hammering away by rule of thumb, observing as closely as possible the requirements of our plants, and doing the best we can to strengthen their weak points under whatever circumstances we find them.

If we find that the plants are making a weak growth, that they are losing the desired dark green color or the foliage getting thin in texture; if the conditions are so that we cannot admit sufficient fresh air to adequately strengthen the plants, it is better to begin at the other end and reduce the amount of growth by a reduction of the temperature until more favorable conditions prevail. To continue hard forcing against natural conditions is not only a waste of fuel and energy but a serious detriment to the health of the plants, leaving them less fitted to respond to forcing when more favorable conditions prevail, besides leaving them far more liable to the attacks of diseases and insect enemies.

Happily we are not liable to have protracted dull spells, even during the short mid-winter days, but it does not take many days of fire heat to weaken such subjects as lettuce, and once weakened they are sure to be attacked by leaf burn whenever they are again subjected to the flagging influence of sun heat.

W. S. Croydon.

COST OF FUMIGATING.

I should be obliged if Mr. Croydon or some other reader would give the cost of fumigating with hydrocyanic gas, and if it is not dangerous to use in large houses, being deadly poison. J. V. L.

Sulphuric acid costs about 30 cents per quart and cyanide of potassium about 6 cents per ounce. One quart of acid and five ounces of cyanide would cost about 60 cents and is sufficient for 4,000 cubic feet of space, which is quite a good-sized house. To kill scale insects and mealy bug it would require to be nearly as strong again. In a large house, where several jars are needed, the cyanide can be safely dropped by hand into the acid, provided it is wrapped in two thicknesses of paper and paper and all dropped in; it takes the acid a little time to eat through the paper before it can reach the cyanide. If the operator begins at the farther end of the house, drops the paper as quickly as possible in the jars while making for the door, there should be little danger of the gas overtaking him. W. S. Croydon.

SOIL FOR TOMATOES.

According to many growers the character of the soil for forcing tomatoes is not a matter of great importance. It is necessary that there be good drainage, but both light and heavy soils have been used with good results. Nevertheless, those who get probably the best results commonly use a light sandy loam.

A compost—one used for many crops—consisting of three parts light sandy loam and one part well-rotted horse manure, serves very well for tomatoes. The proportion of manure in the soil has been considerably varied, but the results do not appear to differ in proportion to the variability of the compost. In addition to stable manure, dried blood is often added to the compost at the rate of 100 pounds to every five cubic yards of compost.

When good stable manure is not available for the compost an excellent soil may be obtained, according to Voorhees, by adding to every 100 square feet of bench the following fertilizers: nitrate of soda, one-half pound; superphosphate, one pound; sulphate of potash, one-half pound. This holds good until the fruit begins to form, when it is well to give one-fourth pound of nitrate of soda every week, and every two weeks one pound of superphosphate and one pound of sulphate of potash. These may be applied in solution, or sown broadcast between the plants and well worked in before watering. Highly satisfactory results have been obtained by using coal ashes and five per cent of peat moss added with various fertilizers. This method has been productive of a yield of two or more pounds of fruit per square foot of bench surface.

It seems that there is but little danger of overfeeding the tomato. Still, while abundant fertilizers may not be injurious to the crop, there is a point beyond which manuring is needless; that is, feeding up to a certain point produces a larger and better crop, but beyond this, although the plant may take up all that is offered without diminishing the yield of fruit or even injuring its quality, it is manifest that feeding above this optimum point is waste. Of course there is a point to go beyond which it is not only waste, but will result in injury to the crop.—Gardeners' Chronicle.

PRONOUNCING DICTIONARY

COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY FLORISTS' PUBLISHING COMPANY, CHICAGO.

Frequent inquiry as to the correct pronunciation of plant names has led us to compile the following list of names, selecting those in most common use in the trade, and including botanical terms most frequently met with in articles upon plant culture.

In our list we have used the following

VANDA SANDERIANA.

The accompanying illustration of Vanda Sanderiana is reproduced from a photograph made in the greenhouses of Harry G. Selfridge, at Lake Geneva, Wis., and the following note is supplied by C. H. Gebhardt, the head gardener there:

"The leaves are twelve to fifteen inches long, one inch broad; seven to ten flowers on the spike. The flowers are three and one-half to four an one-half inches in diameter, pale brown at the base, the upper portion light purple, bracts pale yellow green; sepals broadly obovate, the dorsal delicate rose color with white, the lateral tawny yellow with red, petals colored like the dorsal sepal, with a tawny blotch, spotted red, lip variable in color, dull tawny yellow, streaked with red on the inner side. It is from Davao, on the southeast coast of Mindanao, Philippine Islands, and was discovered by M. Roebelin in 1882 and sent to Messrs. Sander & Co. It is a very rare orchid. Some say that it is extinct.

"Vanda Sanderiana produces the largest flowers of any plant of the vanda tribe. We keep the vanda (or as it is rightly named now, Esmaralda Sanderiana), in the hottest part of the East Indian house and give liberal water to the roots. We always keep them sufficiently moist to preserve the leaves from turning yellow or shriveling. We give them an equal mixture of osmunda roots and live sphagnum moss and mix in a few pieces of charcoal and pot shreds. We grow them in baskets suspended from the roof and give them rather little shade. The less they have the better they will flower."

AMONG THE GROWERS.

In the Boston District.

A considerable number of florists' establishments are to be found in the Dorchester district of Boston. Chances for their expansion are lessening each year, as the rapid spread of the city is enclosing some of them to such an extent that they must soon go farther afield. Some of the growers sell practically all their output at retail, while others wholesale everything. While none of the plants are as extensive as some a little further away from the city, in the aggregate they cover a large area of glass. More than one short day is needed to visit these places and those omitted will be looked up at a later date. The Dorchester florists seem to be a happy, contented, industrious, and in most cases a prosperous class. They seem to get a good measure of enjoyment out of life and very naturally class their section as one of the best in the United States.

Samuel Niel.

Our first call was at Samuel Niel's, on Washington street. Sam seems as young and athletic as when we first met him, some years ago. Two of his sons are with him in the business and are bright, hard working young men. While a variety of stock is grown here, carnations are given the most space. Varieties succeeding particularly well are Lawson, Fair Maid, Queen and Boston Market. Some fine poinsettias were noted in benches. Quite a number of azaleas are grown for retailing, including a fine batch of that bright little variety, Firefly, which is counted the best seller. Roses, violets, palms and bedding stock are handled, nearly everything being sold at retail.

C. E. Dickerman.

C. E. Dickerman, at Harrison Square, has a carnation house 59x160 feet containing over 10,000 plants, in charge of Charles Matthews. White Lawson was the best of its color. The Queen and Boston Market are also grown. Maceo and Roosevelt are grown as crimsons. Flamingo as a scarlet would need to sell at $10 per hundred to be profitable in winter, as it was giving very few flowers. Fair Maid, Enchantress, Mrs. Patten and Lawson are other sorts grown. One house is devoted to Princess of Wales violets.

F. W. Holbrow.

F. W. Holbrow, on Harvard street, brother to E. E. Holbrow, of Brighton, has a nice, steam-heated plant. A house of Brides and Bridesmaids 17x166 looked well, as did a similar-sized one of carnations. Fair Maid, Wolcott, Lawson and Queen were very good. In another house, mostly planted with double violets and grown very cool, a bench of Fair Maid carnations planted late were noticeable for their large flowers, fine color and stiff stems.

Patrick Boyle.

Patrick Boyle rents the C. V. Whitten plant, at one time managed by Lawrence Cotter. In the old range two houses each of Carnot and Kaiserin looked first-class. Two houses were devoted to Easter lilies and one to Carnation Boston Market. In the new ranges two large houses each are filled with Bride and Bridesmaid. All these were in very fine condition. Several houses are also devoted to carnations, principally Lawson, Maceo and Boston Market. A house of Lawson grown inside all summer was a mass of bloom and the stems were double the length of those grown outdoors during summer. Quite a lot of bedding stock is raised here, also Boston ferns and Asparagus plumosus. Mr. Boyle certainly has everything in excellent shape here.

L. H. Foster Estate.

At the Lucius H. Foster place we found Daniel E. Sullivan, who, with Philip J. McGrath, his partner, manages this and the Thos. H. Meade place, which they hire. They have about 35,000 square feet of glass in all. These two obliging and hard working young men seem to be doing well and their stock is in fine condition. Boston ferns are their leading specialty, house after house being planted with them. Very few of the variety Anna Foster are now grown, on account of its variability, but we noted some 400 plants of an extremely promising sport from that variety with the characteristics of Anna Foster at its best. Not a single frond has so far shown any tendency to revert to the Boston type. Trade in Boston ferns has been extra good this season and business very satisfactory. In addition to ferns, palms and Dracæna Australis are grown in quantity. About 125,000 bedding plants, such as geraniums, coleus and alternantheras are provided for spring sales. Everything on this establishment is sold at wholesale.

Thomas Stock.

Thomas Stock, on Minot street, has two houses 35x135, snugly located on a side hill. About 10,000 carnations are grown. Flora Hill is considered the best white and looked well, as did Fair Maid and Lawson. Hardly any other sorts are grown. Princess of Wales and Farquhar violets looked well, the last named especially so. Cornflowers are grown in considerable quantity and a bench of pink bouvardia was in fine shape for Christmas trade.

Hannan & Son.

William Hannan & Son have a fine, up-to-date plant on Codman street. Heating here is all by steam. Three large houses of Brides and Maids could hardly have been better. Carnations filled two houses, varieties grown being Fair Maid, Lawson, Wolcott, Boston Market and Roosevelt. These were all in fine shape. Two divisions were devoted to chrysanthemums. A good batch of that fine old yellow variety, W. H. Lincoln, would be just right for Christmas.

terprising firm has a large and increasing plant trade, not only in Boston and vicinity, but in quite distant points. Palms are still one of their leading specialties and all the popular trade varieties are grown in quantity. In addition to Kentia Belmoreana and K. Forsteriana and Areca lutescens, which are most largely grown, smaller lots are seen of a number of other sorts. Areca sapida and Caryota majestica were especially noteworthy. The last named is much better than C. urens. Kentia Sanderiana and K. McArthuri are classed as of no value as trade varieties. A limited sale is found for Phœnix rupicola and P. Canariensis. Cocos Weddelliana in small sizes is handled in quantity for the center of fern dishes.

Dracæna terminalis is a popular sort and batches of D. Godseffiana and Sanderiana are also grown. Rubbers, araucarias, crotons, Pandanus Veitchii and P. utilis, aspidistras, Aralia Sieboldi variegata and marantas are also grown. About 12,000 genistas in various sizes are handled. Acacia armata is the only species of that family grown. Azaleas are one of the specialties for which this firm is noted, 8,000 being disposed of during the season. A house containing 1,200 was just in the right condition for the Christmas trade. A few of the leading sorts grown are Vervæneana, Simon Mardner, Professor Wolters, Flambeau, Deutsche Perle, Firefly, classed as the best seller on the list; Mme. Van der Cruyssen and Emperor de Brazil.

Several thousand lilies are grown for Easter trade. A good lot of the buttercup primrose, probably a form of Primula sikkimensis, was noted flowering with great freedom. A starter in orchid culture was evidently a batch of that grand winter flowering variety, Calanthe Veitchi. Small ferns in thousands are han-

Conservatory of H. H. Rogers, Fairhaven, Mass.

Callas, stocks, stevia and a few other catch crops are also grown.

Leuthy & Co.

The plant of A. Leuthy & Co. is not in Dorchester, but it is only a short walk from Dorchester to Roslindale. We were fortunate in finding David Lumsden, one of the firm, at home. This endled for use in fern dishes, pteris in variety being mostly handled. Everything on this place reflected credit on the two energetic members of the firm. We expect to see them increase their plant ere long. W. N. Craig.

The California tomato seed crop is proving disappointing all around.

OIL KING'S GREENHOUSES.

The garden committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society paid a visit on November 2 to the greenhouses of H. H. Rogers, the well known Standard oil magnate, of Fairhaven, Mass., to inspect his house of specimen chrysanthemums arranged with foliage plants and entered for the John A. Lowell special prize.

The house containing the plants was seventy-five feet long and contained some remarkably fine specimen plants, which averaged five to six feet in diameter. Some of the best varieties in the collection were W. H. Lincoln, Mutual Friend, Dr. Enguehard, which makes a beautiful specimen plant; General Maceo, a fine crimson; Wm. R. Church, Calvat's 99, Columbia and Kate Broomhead. A large quantity of plants were grown in 6-inch pots, carrying one flower each, and were well done.

Victoria, a seedling anemone, raised by Mr. Garthley, the head gardener to Mr. Rogers, and certificated in Boston on November 19, was much admired. Some fine plants of the popular Garza were also seen. Mr. Rogers opened his greenhouses to the public for several days during the second week in November and a large number of residents in Fairhaven and New Bedford availed themselves of the opportunity to view the collection. SHAW'S GARDEN.

The following is an extract from a paper by Wilhelm Miller read at the meeting held at St. Louis early in November for the inception of National Council of Horticulture:

Henry Shaw was an Englishman who made a fortune in the hardware business in St. Louis, retired early, made the most famous private garden between the Mississippi and the Pacific coast, and got from a return trip to England the idea of an institution in St. Louis, like Kew, the most famous botanical garden in the world. The time was not ripe for a great scientific institution. There was no first class university in St. Louis, nor in the prairie states for that matter, with which the garden could be advantageously connected, for Washington University was then a small affair and not very promising, although it has developed so astonishingly in the last five years that it is now rapidly forging to the front. Doubtless Mr. Shaw was wise in preferring to have the garden pay $25,000 a year taxes than to dwarf the enterprise by making it a mere annex of a struggling young college. The history of the first agricultural college in the world, the one at Michigan, shows the same thing, for it would never have amounted to anything as a department of the state university, since the agricultural college was a protest against the classical education of the day and one of the first expressions of a desire for technical training in the practical business of life. It was the misfortune of Mr. Shaw's time and place that he could not make a successful triangular bargain with a college and the city, so that he could not get the peculiar multiplying value that comes from such a junction of forces.

Nevertheless, the Missouri Botanical Garden has made a splendid showing. The one thing that the horticultural visitor to the World's Fair cannot afford to miss, is a visit to the Garden. He can well afford to omit the Pike in its favor. He will be too late to see the showy outdoor features, but he will find that every greenhouse has a theme of its own, one house being devoted to orchids, another to acacias, another to century plants, and for every man in this audience it is the chance of a life-time to see a big collection of cacti and other desert plants. The visitor will see the great botanical and horticultural library of 36,000 volumes, including the wonderful collection of herbals and pre-Linnean works given by Dr. Sturtevant, formerly director of the New York Experiment Station; the herbarium of 400,000 specimens, which will settle for you any troublesome question about a species that you are likely to have. You will get some glimpse into the wonderful method of working and note-taking which enabled the leading German physician in St. Louis, Dr. Engelmann, to achieve a world-wide reputation in botany and to earn the title of "the most painstaking botanist America has ever known." You may see the valuable work which is being carried on in diseases of trees and the preservation of railroad and ship timbers in co-operation with the United States Department of Agriculture.

There is so much to see that the visitor may be tempted to omit the training school for gardeners, but anyone who can see with the eye of imagination should not fail to catch a glimpse of the two great new plantings in which hardy trees and shrubs will predominate, sixty acres of which will be a North American tract, representing the passing botanical system of Bentham and Hooker, while eighty acres will be devoted to the coming system of Engler and Prantl.

One phase of the Missouri Botanical Garden is sure to strike every visitor. It is no cold-blooded, abstract institution, with no care for the real wants of the people, but a place that is full of the personality of a man with good red blood in his veins. Here is the man's country house, just as it was in his lifetime, his city house moved thence and set up again to serve as herbarium and office, his vegetable garden, his smoke-house, where he prepared his own hams, and a hundred other things that speak of a gentleman's estate. Henry Shaw liked flowers and lots of them and he fixed it in his will so that there would be plenty of flowers for the people, arranged in forms that they can really enjoy. If you despise carpet bedding, barely tolerate parterre work and take only the mildest interest in formal gardening of every kind, it is because you have not visited Shaw's Garden and seen some really good examples. Is it any wonder that Shaw's Garden has a unique place in the affections of the people of St. Louis? The horticultural visitor who comes out of the World's Fair and inquires of the nearest policeman or citizen the way to the Missouri Botanical Garden is likely to be answered with, "Oh, you mean Shaw's Garden. Why, you take the Olive Street car to Vandeventer and take a south bound car marked Shaw's Garden." There could be no surer sign that this scientific institution is in close touch with the people.

But this very warmth of personality which makes every visitor's heart kindle toward the place is itself a limitation to a certain extent. Henry Shaw made mistakes. He was shrewd enough about the things of his own time, but he could not foresee the future any more than we can. Perhaps there were good reasons in his time for not letting the people enjoy the garden on Sundays, but there is no good reason for it to-day save the dead hands that reach out of the past and keep the gates shut except for two Sundays during the summer, when by the provisions of the will the public may enter. Forty-three thousand persons did enter Shaw's Garden on those two Sundays last year. Again, Henry Shaw believed that the best way for the garden to make money was to hold forever all the lands he gave it and not part with any portion of it only on long-term leases. He could not foresee that a certain part of that property could never be made to yield an income on that basis. Fortunately the courts have allowed the Garden to sell this portion and invest the money in a more profitable way, so that the income of the Garden is greatly increased, a result which Henry Shaw would never have deprecated.

ST. LOUIS.

Club Meeting.

The December meeting of the Florists' Club Thursday afternoon, December 8, while not so largely attended as was expected, proved very interesting. The meeting was called to order by ex-President Beneke, as President Juengel was reported sick and Vice-President Pilcher absent, but the latter took the chair later and filled it in an able manner. Three new members were elected, Swan Peterson, of Gibson City, Ill.; C. C. Sanders and F. H. Weber. The trustees were not ready to report on the list of essays and were given until the next meeting.

After the regular business of the meeting was transacted the question came up as to what disposition should be made of the money left over from the guarantors' fund of the S. A. F. convention. After heated argument it was decided that the money should be paid back to the members in proportion to their subscriptions. The treasurer's report showed that the club is in fine shape financially, also in membership. The chair appointed a committee of three to ascertain how many members will attend the carnation meeting at Chicago next month, also to look up best possible rates. The committee is J. J. Beneke, F. M. Ellis and J. F. Ammann, and will report at the next meeting, which will be held January 12, at 2 o'clock, at which time a discussion is invited on Christmas business by some of the leading retailers and wholesalers. An exhibition of new carnations is also expected.

The Market.

Trade during the past week was somewhat quiet, many of our retailers complaining. Shipping orders with the wholesalers are, however, up to the average. Some of our west end florists report quite a few Christmas orders already placed.

From advance price lists for Christmas flowers it looks as though stock is going to be high priced. As to supply, we are still in doubt at this writing. There is sure to be a better supply of carnations this year. These flowers are at present plentiful and of fine quality and prices continue good. Roses, too, are in abundance just now, especially Bride and Maid. Some extra fine Liberty and Meteor are also in; Golden Gate and Carnot not so many. Beauties are scarce, that is, in the long, fancy grades.

There are plenty of double and California violets in the market, with the demand a little slow last week, quality extra fine. Good valley holds up in price. Romans are very plentiful and so are Paper Whites. Harrisii and callas continue to improve in quantity. There is plenty of good smilax to be had, also other greens.

Orders for Christmas greens are reported good. Some very fine holly and mistletoe are in the market. Lycopodium is reported scarce, commission men holding out for $6 and $7 per crate of 100 pounds. Holly is $5 per case.

Various Notes.

George M. Kellogg was in town Thursday to attend the Florists' Club's meeting. Mr. Kellogg reports trade fine at his place, with plenty of shipping orders for the holidays.

Wm. Winter, Henry Berning and F. W. Ude, Jr., were out visiting the craft in St. Louis county the past week.

A. Jablonsky is again in line with a fine lot of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, for which he has a big shipping trade, also supplying the local trade for Christmas.

Fred Ammann, of Edwardsville, and Henry Johann, of Collinsville, Ill., attended the Florists' Club's meeting last week. Both are shippers to this market.

E. W. Guy and Henry Emmons, of Belleville, Ill., were also on hand at the meeting. Both report good local trade in cut flowers.

The Bentzen Commission Co. is handling some extra fine holly, mistletoe, lycopodium and other Christmas greens.

Wm. Bouche, the landscape gardener, has plenty of work on hand for the Park View Real Estate Co. and Richmond Heights Co., which are laying out large plats of ground near the World's Fair.

Wm. Lorenzen, of the Park Floral Co., reports trade good in funeral work and plants.

C. Young & Sons Co. is showing a fine lot of blooming plants at the store on Olive street. Business in fall bulbs has been brisk.

Miss Theresa Badaracco reports a big run on funeral work the past week. Trade is also good in cut flowers and bunches.

J. J. B.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The supply of cut flowers has been further reduced by the severe weather, which has set in early this season. The week opened with the thermometer 2 degres above zero. On Sunday morning another snow storm followed, interfering considerably with business. Prices are higher on choice stock. Roses and carnations are in demand. Violets and valley sell slowly, while Romans and Paper Whites are overdone.

Leo Niessen, in discussing the outlook for Christmas business, said he believes the supply of flowers will be very large, despite unfavorable weather; that the demand will equal the supply, at prices which, on roses at least, will not be higher than last season.

A Notable Dinner.

The dinner given at the Bellevue-Stratford at noon last Saturday by Thomas Dolan, to the Contemporary Club, was a remarkable affair. The table was laid in the clover room, the guests, 200 in number, being seated around the outside of a hollow oval. The open space in the center was about 30x70 feet, laid out as a park, with trees, deer and blooming plants. The effect was very striking. Poinsettias, Easter lilies, Beauties and choice ferns were used in masses. The boutonnieres were Prosperity carnations, very appropriate for so successful a body of men. The work was executed by J. J. Habermehl's Sons.

Christmas Flowers.

The experience of past years has shown that there is usually an excellent demand from December 19 to 22, to which the supply has not been equal, that from December 23 to 25 many stale flowers have come to market that have been sold at low prices or wasted entirely. It is necessary for the grower to hold back a day's cut, or even two days', before Christmas. But the grower who does more than this is simply throwing away money, besides doing his business a distinct injury.

Godfrey Aschmann.

I met David Rust the other day in front of the Cut Flower Co.'s place on Sansom street. "Oh, by the way," he said, with one of those joyous smiles of his, "you must go up and see Godfrey Aschmann." A few days later the chief sent this laconic order, "Call on Godfrey Aschmann." Now, when the opposition and the government do chance to agree on anything, that thing is pretty sure to happen, so putting aside the promised visit to John A. Shellem, I repaired forthwith to 1012 Ontario street. Godfrey Aschmann was at home and very courteously conducted his visitor through his greenhouses. The Christmas stock, consisting of araucarias, ficus, azaleas, solanums, Boston ferns, primroses, etc., has evidently been going out rapidly. There are still quite a number left, but not more than seems probable will be required in the remaining days before Christmas. There was a clean, nicely budded lot of azaleas being carried cool for Easter, also a large block of lilies carefully labeled with size and name of grower to test their quality. Most of them were healthy, stocky-looking plants, nicely started. Cinerarias will form a very important part of the place during the next few months. So also will the Dutch roots and bulbs. Three of the houses have been rebuilt with Lord & Burnham material, as previously mentioned in this column. The thing that most impressed me about Godfrey Aschmann's place was Godfrey Aschmann himself, the pluck, perseverance and shrewdness that has enabled him to carry on so large a business. His orders have come from as far west as California and Oklahoma and embrace nearly all the central states, as well as those of the eastern seaboard.

Various Notes.

Do not pickle your stock.

A. B. Cartledge returned from a gunning trip in the south a few days ago.

Pickled flowers do not pay.

Paul Berkowitz, of the firm of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., returned on Monday from a very encouraging business trip.

Flowers that will not keep until Christmas will bring good prices early next week.

Edward Reid has returned from the south.

Full blown, faded or discolored flowers do not pay at Christmas, or any other time.

John Wilson is in charge of J. J. Habermehl's Sons' beautiful new store in the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel.

Arthur Zirkmann, with M. Rice & Co., has returned from a successful business trip.

A serious fire broke out in the boiler shed of William Berger, on Queen street, one night last week. The shed, the ends of the nearest houses and some of the stock were damaged. The loss is estimated at $500.

Eugene Bernheimer is receiving some choice Golden Gates.

Edward Reid is receiving some very fine valley.

Berger Bros. are making hardy ferns of good quality a specialty.

The Flower Market is strong on Beauties and poinsettias. They also handle William K. Harris' choice Christmas blooming plants. PHIL.

We are very glad to state that William Scott is recovering from his severe illness and we hope that within a few days he will be with us again. R. A. S.

BOSTON.

The Market.

We are now having very cold weather, winter having apparently started in good earnest. Conditions in the market show no important changes since our last report. The cold weather has hurt business to some extent, retailers purchasing more sparingly. This was particularly noticeable on Saturday. There is little change in the price of roses. Best Brides and Bridesmaids clean out at $12.50 per hundred. Carnations sell at $3 to $4 for select stock, some extra fancies bringing up to $6. Prospects are for a comparatively light crop of these for Christmas. Violets are rather scarce and clean out readily. The best poinsettias have brought $6 per dozen. Quite a number of Lilium Harrisii are now coming in, E. N. Peirce & Co. bringing the largest quantity to the Park street market. Mignonette is selling at higher Show Case in J. J. Habermehl's Sons' New Philadelphia Store.

BUFFALO.

During the past week one of Buffalo's most popular business banks was forced to close its doors. Many of the Buffalo florists were among the 8,000 depositors, but none were so unfortunate as to be heavy losers. We hope this will have no bad effect on the Christmas trade but with 8,000 depositors and six millions deposits it is sure to cause some effect.

The flower stores are filled with the Christmas novelties and all things point to a good Christmas. The main show is mostly made up of Lorraine and poinsettias. A great many baskets are being used, especially the moss work.

We are receiving very few visitors at the present time. Mrs. Walker and McLean, of Youngstown, spent a few days here last week. Mr. Peterson returned rates, the most select going for $8 per hundred. Paper White and double Roman narcissi and Roman hyacinths sell rather slowly, as does bouvardia. Stevia is in good demand. Green stock is unchanged. A good many holly and other wreaths, with a variety of other Christmas greenery, are now coming in.

Horticultural Society.

The following are the committees appointed to serve for the year 1905:

Committee on prizes and exhibitions, J. K. M. L. Farquhar, chairman; A. H. Fewkes, J. A. Pettigrew, W. N. Craig, W. H. Spooner and W. W. Rawson.

Plants and flowers, A. H. Fewkes, chairman; James Wheeler, Robert Cameron, William Nicholson and W. N. Craig.

Fruits, Warren Fenno, chairman; Charles F. Curtis and J. W. Hill.

Vegetables, W. W. Rawson, chairman; Warren H. Houstis and J. C. Stone.

Gardens, Oakes Ames, chairman; George Barker, W. P. Rich, J. A. Pettigrew, A. H. Fewkes, C. W. Parker, H. P. Wolcott and W. N. Craig.

School gardens and native plants, H. S. Adams, chairman; C. W. Jenks, Miss Mary Rodman, W. E. C. Rich and W. P. Rich.

Finance committee, Walter Hunnewell, chairman; A. F. Estabrook and George F. Fabyan.

Library committee, C. S. Sargent, chairman; Samuel Henshaw, C. W. Jones, H. P. Wolcott and T. Otis Fuller.

Lectures and publications, J. W. Manning, chairman; James H. Bowditch, E. W. Wood, R. T. Jackson and E. B. Wilder.

The following prizes have been awarded by the garden committee: Best house of chrysanthemums in pots arranged with other plants, first, Converse estate, D. F. Roy, gardener; second, H. H. Rogers, James Garthley, gardener. House of chrysanthemums grown in benches, first, M. F. Plant estate, T. W. Head, gardener; second, Converse estate. House of palms and foliage plants, first, Joseph H. White, James Wheeler, gardener; second, Mrs. J. L. Gardner, Wm. Thatcher, gardener. House of carnations, first, M. F. Plant estate; second, E. A. Clark, W. A. Riggs, gardener. House of roses, first, M. F. Plant estate; second, Joseph H. White. Special gratuities were awarded to W. G. Winsor for dahlia gardens, T. D. Hatfield for superior care of Hunnewell estate, N. B. White for improvement in native grapes and H. A. Stevens Co. for house of mushrooms. The estate of Mrs. J. L. Gardner entered for the Hunnewell triennial premium for first year was favorably reported on.

The Stevens Place.

The garden committee on December 9 visited the establishment of H. A. Stevens Co., Dedham, to inspect their cellar of mushrooms. The cellar utilized for mushroom culture covers about 2,000 square feet. American pure culture spawn is used exclusively, and the results certainly justify the selection, for the beds were simply white with mushrooms in various stages of development and the members of the committee were unanimous in pronouncing the crop far the best they had ever seen. Mr. Stevens states that the temperature of the cellar varies from 50 to 54 degrees and, while the mushrooms do not grow so quickly in this temperature, they are harder and better for marketing than when grown warmer.

An inspection of the houses of carnations grown by the firm was also made, all the plants being in fine condition. Fair Maid, Mrs. Patten, Enchantress, Lawson and other leading sorts are grown. Several good seedlings are also under trial.

Various Notes.

The Boston Co-operative Flower Market, better known as the "new market," will offer prizes for the following at the exhibition at Horticultural Hall on February 11. Fifty Carnation Fair Maid, twenty-five carnations, any variety not in commerce; twenty-five red roses, American Beauty included; 100 Princess of Wales violet, 100 Campbell violet, 100 sweet peas, twenty-five spikes mignonette. These added to the prizes offered by the society and the members of the Park Street Market will insure a fine winter show.

Latest reports from J. T. Butterworth were rather more encouraging and his many friends hope that the worst is now over and that he may soon be strong enough to be removed to his home.

Donald Carmichael, of Wellesley, showed two seedling carnations at the new market on December 10 which attracted much favorable notice. One is a pure white seedling from Prosperity, about four inches in diameter. The other is a dark pink variety, a cross between Lawson and another of his own seedlings. The flower is over three inches in diameter, finely fringed and has a delightful odor. Each of these is likely to be heard from in the future.

E. N. Peirce & Co. have a new scarlet seedling carnation, Lawson x Crane, with an improved Crane flower and Lawson habit, which seems likely to be a winner. They have about 400 plants and intend to cut all these down for propagating purposes after Christmas.

The new market managers want to impress the fact upon visitors that theirs is purely a wholesale market and have just had large signs prominently placed with the wording, "Positively no flowers sold at retail."

Robert Montgomery is bringing in some fine Mrs. Oliver Ames roses to the new market. These sell readily at $6 to $8 per 100.

Gardeners' Club.

The attendance at the next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club is likely to be a record breaking one, unless all signs fail. Numerous proposals for membership will be presented. Quite a number of rose and carnation novelties will be shown, including Richmond rose, Fiancee and other new carnations and other interesting flowers. E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., has been one of our visitors during the present week and has been looking up some of our leading carnation, rose and chrysanthemum specialists. Probably he may remain over until our next club meeting, which would give him just time to get home for Christmas.

David Lumsden, of A. Leuthy & Co., will be the speaker at the club meeting on December 20, his subject being "Ferns." Indications point to a good delegation visiting Framingham on the next field day, December 17. Members will go by Boston and Worcester air line electric, leaving Park Square at 12:45 p. m.

H. M. Robinson & Co., on Province street, are doing a big business in Christmas greens at present and carry an enormous stock of holly, box green and laurel, as well as immense quantities of galax leaves, smilax and hardy ferns.

Prospects are good for Christmas flower trade. If too much of the pickling process is not tried growers will be able to sell out everything in sight, as some crops promise to be comparatively light at that time. W. N. Craig.

BAY CITY, MICH.

With an abundant crop of roses, carnations and violets in sight for Christmas, Boehringer Bros. are by no means worried over the prospects. Business, in fact, was brisk all through the season, stock of all kinds selling readily at fair prices. A bench of poinsettias in full bloom, with stems nearly touching the glass, is one of the interesting sights on the place. What is equally interesting to the proprietors is the fact of the entire lot being sold weeks in advance.

Another attractive feature on the place is a house of seedling carnations of various sizes and colors, which for quantity of bloom surpass the few standard varieties, such as Lawson, Enchantress and Flora Hill. Although no exhibition varieties, they are money makers, a thing worthy of consideration. Chrysanthemums sold well and more will be grown next season.

There will be extensive alterations and improvements made on the place in the early spring, chief of which will be the rebuilding of three houses, each to be lengthened 100 feet. X.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

A week of cold weather was followed on Monday by a downfall of the beautiful that presages an old-fashioned Christmas. The market has been holding up its head and putting on airs accordingly. Retail stores are alive with business and busy with preparation for what promises to be a record Christmas. The men who buy flowers have been making money.

The daily demand cleans out the supply of roses that now reach the market. If a healthy, natural and daily shipment is made for Christmas, growers, wholesalers and retailers will all be satisfied. But it is too much to hope for. Experience teaches year after year and still the growers pickle. If the wholesalers will unite loyally to each other's interests to stamp out this practice by refusing to accept kept-over goods or marking such shipments "unsalable" on their returns, one such lesson would open blind eyes.

The indications now are for a demand which will take everything good at good prices. Roses have all advanced and are already close to Christmas values. Carnations are abundant, but prices are at an encouraging standard. All the novelties are in great demand, Enchantress, Victory, Prosperity and Robert Craig especially. A few good chrysanthemums remain. Doubtless a few will hold until the holidays. Lilies sold as high as 20 cents each during the week. Violets hold steady at $1 to $1.50 for the best, the latter price being reached but seldom and only for specials in bunches of 100. The prospect is for an abundant supply for the holidays.

The general demand for orchids is on the increase. Calls are made on the New York wholesalers from all the large cities. A wonderful increase in their popularity is developing. Cattleyas in some cases brought $1 each this week and it looks as though the retailers who want a supply for Christmas would act wisely by placing orders without delay.

No plant this year seems to be so universally popular as Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. Every window is now full of them. The great supply prepared for the New York market by the Cottage Gardens, Julius Roehrs and other plant experts of this vicinity will be completely depleted. The grand display of this plant in all sizes at Mr. Ward's, filling house after house, was one of the most interesting features of the New York Club's outing.

Club Meeting.

The final meeting of the Florists' Club for 1904 was held on Monday evening, President Traendly in the chair. Notwithstanding a miniature blizzard, the attendance numbered over eighty and it was one of the most interesting meetings of the club's history. The committee of awards brought in its several reports conferring certificates of merit upon Victory, Lieut. Peary, Robert Craig and Phyllis.

E. J. Taylor, Southport, Conn., was elected a member and Robert Simpson, Geo. Darsley, M. Matheson, C. H. Totty, John Zoller and Jas. Hart, Jr., were proposed. Secretary Young was called upon for a report of the club's outing at Cottage Gardens and gave an interesting address. Mr. O'Mara also paid tribute to the kindness of Mr. and Mrs. Ward and a vote of thanks was given for their delightful hospitality. After Mr. Burnie, Mr. Langjahr, Mr. Butterfield and Mr. Elliott withdrew as candidates, the election of officers proceeded, with the following result: President, F. H. Traendly; vice-president, J. A. Shaw; secretary, John Young; treasurer, C. W. Weathered; trustees, W. F. Sheridan, John Scott, Alex. Burns, L. B. Craw, J. I. Raynor. Beginning with the president, each was called on for a speech, those who were re-elected modestly giving credit to the membership itself for the year's success, the others pledging their best efforts. J. B. Nugent addressed the club, humorously summing up his commissary contributions of turkey and champagne as a "dose of indigestion." The vote of thanks he received was very enthusiastic.

The resignation of one of the club's oldest and most honored members, John Morris, was accepted with regret. A letter from Henri Beaulieu was referred to the trustees. The announcement of the death of Mrs. Henry Hentz, mother of Henry Hentz, Jr., of Summit, N. J., was made and F. L. Moore, H. Beaulieu and S. C. Nash were appointed to draw up resolutions of sympathy. Messrs. Haffner, Sheridan and Weathered were appointed a committee to arrange for the club's annual dinner.

All the exhibits of the evening were highly commendable. Benj. Dorrance, of Dorranceton, Pa., staged Rose No. 6, a light pink, resembling Perle in bud and stem. The E. G. Hill Co. had Richmond and Rosalind Orr English. The new rose, Wellesley, from the Waban Rose Conservatories, of Natick, Mass., was also shown. Among the carnations were Fiancee, Lady Bountiful, Eclipse, Victory, Lieutenant Peary and Robert Craig. Mr. Ward also showed two unnamed seedlings. Geranium Telegraph was shown by DeVoy & Son, of Poughkeepsie.

A. J. Guttman read a paper giving the history of Victory and detailing its good qualities. An interesting address was made by E. G. Hill, who received a cordial welcome from the club. He commended the exhibit in the club's meetings and gave good accounts of the western flower shows. Mr. Duckham endorsed the remarks of Mr. Hill and commended especially the American Beauty exhibit at St. Louis. He also referred to Mr. Hill's modesty in making no reference to Richmond, which he had seen at headquarters and for which he predicted a great future. Mr. Dorrance said Richmond is the best red rose that has been produced in America. He asked the club to take more interest in the Rose Society. Mr. May spoke of the Wellesley rose and its keeping quality and Mr. DeVoy dilated upon the many merits of his geranium.

Cottage Gardens Visit.

The club's outing last Thursday, which the courtesy of C. W. Ward made possible, was a red letter day in every respect. A special train carried over eighty to Cottage Gardens, where the day was spent in visiting the houses of carnations, Gloire de Lorraine begonias, the nursery, the cold storage houses and all the other interesting features of this great enterprise. Mr. O'Mara made an eloquent address in presenting the thanks of the crowd to Mr. and Mrs. Ward for their hospitality, to which Mr. Ward happily responded, according much that was being accomplished to the faithful cooperation of his assistants, of whom J. C. Gowing, the secretary and treasurer of the company, and M. Matheson are especially worthy of appreciation. A bountiful repast was provided.

Various Notes.

N. Lecakes & Co. have their Christmas branch this year at 37 West Twenty-eighth street, close to Broadway, where their windows are made very attractive with bell decorations. Their wholesale cut flower department is proving a genuine success.

Messrs. Kreshover, Fellouris, Cotsonas & Co., the Kervan Co., Herrmann, Hanfling & Kleppner and all the supply houses are simply overwhelmed with business. All say it is the greatest year they have ever experienced and at the present rate of demand there will be little of anything to shelve. Geo. Cotsonas & Co. have a large force at work night and day.

Sigmund Geller is delighted with the establishment of his headquarters on the ground floor. Not only has he found it an advantage in artistic window decoration, but his many customers appreciate the facilities for rapid selection.

Schloss Bros. made special preparations for Christmas and report a season of unequalled prosperity.

Lion & Wertheimer number among their patrons hundreds of the leading florists of the country, but their florists' department is only a small part of their extensive ribbon business.

The Hinode Co., with headquarters at Whitestone, is now ready for Christmas, both at the new houses and at Woodside. They have a grand stock of lilies, azaleas, ardisias and Japanese novelties.

Guttmann & Weber report many orders for Victory in 5,000 and 10,000 lots. It is not to be sent out for a year.

Charles Millang has excellent facilities for handling and exhibiting his stock, both cut flowers and blooming plants. The plant department was an instant success.

Jas. A. Hammond's Christmas would not be complete if he did not sell 1,000 orange trees. He has them, or had them before the orders began to arrive. He had booked over half of them a week ago.

Traendly & Schenck are closing a banner year. Their new store proves none too large for their enormous business. Chatenay and Uncle John roses are among their specialties.

Jos. S. Fenrich has adopted a good motto, "The reliable house," and is building fast on that foundation.

James Hart seems happy to be at the old stand again. Since 1871 he has held the fort. His son James, Jr., is a popular lieutenant and there is no reason why 1971 should not see the pioneer's name perpetuated.

We were indebted to J. K. Allen for the carnation list of Thanksgiving supply. In fact he had every kind enumerated on sale and will have again for Christmas. They talk of running him for mayor over in Jersey, where he sleeps.

The Beauty king anticipates no surplus of fine roses for Christmas. The record here is 12,000 Beauties in a day, but it will not be Christmas, 1904, when it is beaten.

W. H. Gunther is preparing for his usual violet business during the holidays. His business during 1904 was ahead of any previous year and he takes a very optimistic view of the future.

Everything in roses, carnations and violets is on exhibition, as usual, at Ford Bros., violets without limit.

The Queen of Edgley is handled by Moore, Hentz & Nash and the supply never approaches the demand for it.

A. H. Langjahr is handling a fine grade of carnations and roses and anticipates by far his largest Christmas. Mrs. Langjahr, while making her holiday purchases last week, was relieved of her purse containing her watch and money. Mrs. Junus Kretchmar, of West Nyack, aunt of Mr. Langjahr, has undergone a successful surgical operation.

A. L. Young & Co. are progressing and Mr. Young seems quite encouraged by the generous recognition he has received.

George Saltford's new store proves none too large for his increasing business. It has doubled in 1904. Clarence Saltford is an able vice-admiral.

John J. Perkins is receiving steady supplies of cypripediums.

Bonnot Bros. are shipping daily to Pennsylvania towns.

Frank Millang has always a good supply at his corner in the Cut Flower Exchange. The new rule adopted lately closes the exchange promptly at 5 p. m. Phil Kessler is now in charge and the new office and ice box are metropolitan.

Walter Sheridan keeps on the even tenor of his way unruffled by market fluctuations.

At John I. Raynor's, Croweanum still finds a resting place, but it doesn't rest long. The demand for it grows.

The output of the Cottage Gardens is at John Young's, as usual. Mr. Ward has a great supply for this seasan, as the cuting showed.

Wm. Ghormley reports 1904 a record breaker in every way. Renewed health and increasing numbers in the growing department indicate a continuance of the year's prosperity.

The orchid record for 1904 is history. The popularity of the flower has wonderfully increased and the demand grows constantly. Among others, with a commendable insistency, Jas. McManus has done his share to emphasize the importance of the orchid and to popularize it. His trade has increased with his enterprise.

The weather is the cause of several cases of colds that are persistent. Alfred Dimmock and Julius Roehrs have both suffered. Several of the wholesale cut flower men had been laid up a few days. Dan Sullivan, of the Cut Flower Co., has lumbago.

Suzuki & Iida's stock of pear seed has arrived in excellent condition. Their cold storage valley is close to the borderland. Another week will see the supply exhausted.

H. H. Berger & Co. have re-incorporated under the present firm name, which has been in use since 1878. The same conservative management as heretofore will be in charge. The members of the firm are H. H. Berger, H. B. Berger and John Graham.

One of Reed & Keller's Christmas specialties not before mentioned is rock verdigris green work in all varieties of form. Their business they declare to be the largest in their career.

Krick's new store at 1164 Greene avenue, Brooklyn, is very convenient and the manufacture of his letters and other novelties and inventions goes and grows merrily on.

W. H. Siebrecht, of Astoria, is now shipping daily to Alex J. Guttman, of West Twenty-ninth street, valley, hyacinths and other bulbous stock.

Young & Nugent have a very beautiful window for the holidays. They are handling exceptionally fine roses and orchids and their new store is proving a most satisfactory enterprise.

Crawbuck & Wiles are now permanently established at 370 Pearl street, Brooklyn, a fine central locality. They have a large supply of princess pine, a scarce article across the bridge.

Hicks & Crawbuck, the only florists' supply house in Brooklyn, report a large trade in this line, as well as in cut flowers.

Wm. H. Kuebler, at 19 Boerum place, Brooklyn, at Langjahr's old stand, has just installed a new ice box and completed a new office and is doing well. Two of his brothers are associated with him.

The F. R. Pierson Co. is much pleased by the reception given their new fern, Elegantissima. Its record at the show is certainly a credit to the firm.

W. E. Marshall & Co. are now established in their new quarters, 146 West Twenty-third street. They handle seeds, plants and bulbs and have a fine location.

The Review's New York representative had much to be thankful for at Thanksgiving and he wishes for all his friends and patrons as merry a Christmas and as happy a New Year as his own. J. Austin Shaw.

BEST IN CIRCULATION.

Enclosed find check to cover bill. Had very good success; sold out everything advertised. You have the best advertising medium and all-around florists' paper in circulation; anything else I have you will do the job. Geo. Milne.

The Market.

Demand has been slow the past week but receipts have been light, so that values have been well maintained and advancing on certain lines. The call from out of town continues to take a general line of stock, except valley, Paper Whites and Romans, which are not wanted, but city business has been largely in the line of funeral work; consequently white carnations have at times been hard to find.

Receipts of roses increased to a considerable extent last week, but Beauties do not come under this head. They are still below the demand and prices working toward the holiday level. Brides and Maids are of a quality to afford greatest satisfaction. Some good Liberty are seen but cuts are decreasing, except with two or three exceptionally fortunate growers who bid fair to hit Christmas just right. Very fine Chatenay are offered, likewise Uncle John.

Carnations are in increasing supply, except white, but receipts are irregular, presaging stocking up for Christmas. When the growers interrupt the regular daily shipments it always happens that they ship on the days of light demand and do not ship the day the market is full of orders. Hudson river violets are not reaching this market so heavily as last season, the result of better values in New York, but sell well. Singles do fairly but Campbell again has slow sale. Mignonette is received in fair quantity and prices vary greatly, as does the quality. Stevia is abundant.

"Green goods" are plentiful but generally making good prices.

Christmas Prospects.

There is improved prospect for Christmas crops. Beauties, Liberties and red carnations are pretty sure to be short. Maids are likely to be fairly plentiful. Carnations give every indication of exceeding previous anticipations by a large degree and other items are likely to be equal to the very large demand which is already being felt in advance orders. There will be enough violets if the growers do not hold them back too long. The price lists, however, are all "subject to change without notice."

E. C. Amling calls attention to the fact that white carnations, and to a lesser extent Bride roses, are never wanted for Christmas and hang on until everything else is gone. He believes growers will get the most money out of this stock by sending it in right along, for there will be little stock in market for the next week.

Holiday Greens.

There is now a very active demand for both bouquet green and holly. There is enough lycopodium but good prices are being cheerfully paid, as it is all in competent hands. Holly averages no more than satisfactory quality although now and then a car of really high grade arrives. Prices are well maintained for up to this writing South Water street has not had its usual consignments, partly because neither railroads nor shippers made money on holly last year. Barnard & Co. have their usual big force at work winding green and making wreaths. A look at the stock passing in and out would indicate that trade requirements are large but can be fully met.

Various Notes.

J. A. Budlong looks for a big Christmas business, the Beauties and Maids being in good crop for the holiday. Their Enchantress carnations are also in exceptionally good shape. Mr. Shoup, who manages the selling end, reports a big shipping demand right along.

E. C. Amling is handling considerable quantities of bouvardia.

The Benthey-Coatsworth Co. reports the new aster going to the ends of the earth next month. They have received many orders from far distant points, to which the fame of the variety spread last summer. The crop of seed came up from New Castle last week and will soon be ready for distribution.

Kennicott Bros. Co. reports that mahonia leaves are going very well. They are very graceful, serviceable in a great many ways and keep indefinitely. They first introduced mahonia about five years ago but found only small sale for them; by now, however, the retailers have awakened to their usefulness.

Weiland & Risch are cutting Brides and Maids with stems like Beauties.

E. F. Winterson Co. has filled all the vacant space to be found in their place with girls making wreaths and wreathing, for which they report a big demand.

M. Winandy is reaping the reward of a season's work in a big cut of roses and carnations when they are most wanted.

Gus Alles, of Wietor Bros.' city salesroom, whom everybody likes, has the sympathy of all in the loss of his five-weeks old baby, who died on Sunday.

E. H. Hunt was first in the field with a calendar for 1905. It was mailed with the catalogue of Christmas goods; each was a very handsome piece of printing.

The Florists' Club met last Thursday night. Little was done beyond appointing committees to take charge of the club's activities this season.

Emil Buettner was down town on Monday for the first time since his operation for appendicitis.

George Reinberg's cut of Beauties is nearly all in the very first letters of the alphabet.

N. J. Wietor says he expects a good Christmas supply of roses.

Orchids are reported short crop for Christmas. McKellar says the demand is heavy.

Peter Reinberg, John Muno and Adam Zender have hung up their guns until after Christmas.

The Grand Rapids Florists' Association, represented at the Growers' Market, has organized by the election of the following officers: President, C. R. Hills; vice-president, G. F. Crabb; secretary, N. B. Stover; treasurer, Henry Smith; directors in addition to above, Eli Cross, Alfred Hanna and Chas. Chadwick. It is asserted that the association controls a million feet of glass.

In the advertisement of L. H. Foster, Dorchester, Mass., on page 236, the prices of Boston ferns should be "each" instead of "per 100."

Springfield, O.—C. L. Reese walked into his greenhouse on a recent Sunday evening and surprised a well-known young man with an armful of flowers.

NOTE:
"Special" Stock billed accordingly.

THERE NEVER WAS a time in recent years when there were too many good flowers for Christmas. Almost always there are too few. But cut flower buyers may rest assured that there is no other source of supply where one can be more certain of getting what he wants. If seasonable flowers are to be had in Chicago, they are to be had at Amling's.

We shall have large supplies for Christmas

No doubt of that, but just what we can do on late orders it is impossible to foretell. That's why we urge early correspondence; give us an insight as to your needs. It will be to mutual advantage.

But if you find yourself running short, don't hesitate; wire us and we will help you out if stock is to be had in Chicago.

We have the cuts of some of the largest growers for this market and our force is ample to handle every order promptly.

ED. A. HUMFELD, of Kansas City, writes that the statement in last week's REVIEW that Walter Troup was formerly his assistant decorator is not true. Mr. Troup was formerly in his employ but in another capacity.

GLASGOW, MO.—One greenhouse, packing shed and contents were completely destroyed and another house so badly damaged that the stock is a loss December 6 by fire at the establishment of Henry Schnell. The loss is $1,500, with no insurance.

CONNELLSVILLE, PA.—It is reported here that Peter Demas, proprietor of the Pittsburg Florists' Exchange, and local capitalists are organizing a company with a capital of $100,000 to build one of the largest greenhouse establishments in this part of the state.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—Charles E. Krueger, a florist at 485 Monroe avenue, was arrested December 3 charged with signing other men's names to checks for small amounts. Krueger said he was not guilty, that he was intoxicated at the time, and the case was continued.

ENCLOSED is $2 for two REVIEWS for 1905. Thanks for your Pronouncing Dictionary; hope you will continue it until it will cover the whole field.—J. J. LONG, Turners Falls, Mass.

HARRISII IN UNDRAINED POTS.

Robert Sydenham, a seedsman of Birmingham, England, has been making successful experiments in growing Harrisii in various ornamental vases without drainage at the bottom or means of exit for water. Moss is used as the potting medium, some ground shell being added to the moss fibre when the operator is about to pot up the bulbs. The vessels employed may be of glass or stoneware of any ornamental design, the object being to grow bulbs in such a way that they may be introduced to dwelling rooms without having the danger of water running about the tables on which the plants are stood. The bulbs are potted in these vessels much in the usual way, making the moss firm about the bulbs. The jars or ornamental pots are then placed in an airy cellar or room, not necessarily light, but at the same time they must be airy if the health of the plants is studied.

After the plants show themselves well above the moss, the ornamental vessels that contain the bulbs must be brought into a well-lighted position with plenty of air to prevent the foliage and stems from getting drawn. The after treatment is the same as for bulbs grown in ordinary pots. Watering, however, is quite a different operation, and must be carefully handled to retain the growing plants in a healthy condition. It is best to be careful at the commencement, and the operator must rub the moss or squeeze it until it is all equally loose before commencing to pot. It must also be carefully mixed with the shell. The object of loosening it is to make it equal in density and composition, so that when water is applied all parts will be equally moistened. If this compost is just moistened before the potting operation, very little watering will be necessary for some time afterwards.

The best plan for beginners would be to examine the pots twice weekly to determine the conditions of the compost as to moisture. Water should never be given in such quantities as to render the compost soddened, but just sufficient to keep it moist. Beginners would also do well to frequently lift the vessels in order to ascertain their weight, because if too much moisture were present it would collect in the bottom of the vessel to the injury of the roots. The vessels might also in such cases be held upside down, so that all unnecessary moisture should escape.

The careful cultivator, however, will make certain not to apply water in such quantity as to keep it standing in the pots; only just sufficient should be given to keep the moss equally moist and all will be well. Besides lilies, daffodils, polyanthus narcissi, hyacinths, tulips and other spring flowering bulbs may also be successfully grown in this way. The merit of this method of culture is the ornamental effect obtained by the use of vessels of ornamental pattern, and the absence of risk in spoiling furniture with water draining from pots, but in these days of such tasteful pot coverings the process seems hardly worth while save for a few plants for novelty's sake.

WE would not do without the REVIEW at twice the present subscription price.—G. H. TAEPKE, Detroit.

WE are sending a dollar for the renewal of our subscription to the REVIEW, which has proven very satisfactory to us; we shall give you all the advertising we have to do in the future.—WEBER BROS. Ironton, O.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., C. N. Page, Des Moines, Ia; First Vice-Pres., L. L. May, St. Paul; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 23rd annual meeting will be held on the St. Lawrence, June, 1905.

VISITED CHICAGO.—W. H. Grennel, Cape Vincent, N. Y.

No one has said recently that there will be any shortage of cucumber seed.

FARQUHAR & Co., of Boston, will ask $1 per ounce for a strain of forcing cucumber seed.

THE Louisville onion-set dealers feel that it will be a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

No information that a uniform scale of wholesale prices has been adopted has come to hand as yet.

THE Chicago seed houses which supply bouquet green and holly to the trade report a brisk business.

PETER HOLLENBACH, Chicago, returned this week from a trip to Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington.

THE percentages of deliveries on beans are very disappointing to the contract buyer. Better things were hoped for.

IT is rumored that a California seed growing firm is canvassing for the market garden trade at some of the principal eastern cities.

ANYTHING may be fair in business that is open and above board, still the local dealers at certain points have cause for objection if the grower they buy from hustles out to sell his goods to their customers.

SWEET CORN FOR SEED.

The Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station has just issued, as Bulletin 96, a pamphlet entitled "Sweet Corn; Breeding, Growing and Curing for Seed."

In the preface the Director of the Station says:

It has been fully demonstrated that the character of seed used has much to do in determining the quality and quantity of the crop produced. Again, it has been shown that it is not only necessary to have seed from stock giving good crops, but for best results seed should also be from acclimated plants.

Maryland stands fourth in the production of canned corn, devoting annually about 17,000 acres to this crop for canning purposes, and packing about 1,000,000 cases. Besides the amount of corn grown for the canneries there are large areas grown for immediate consumption in the green state. Maryland growers purchase annually from 3,000 to 4,000 bushels of sweet corn seed. The bulk of this seed is grown in the New England states and northern Ohio.

The reason that our farmers purchase seed from the north is due to the prevailing opinion that northern-grown seed will give a sweeter corn than the home-grown seed. Then, again, many farmers say that sweet corn will soon run out and deteriorate in other ways, when grown in this climate. In view of our present knowledge of the corn plant these statements did not seem reasonable, and upon investigation they were not borne out by the practices of some of the most sucessful and advanced growers and packers of sweet corn in Maryland.

Before preparing this bulletin the author took a trip to Connecticut, and studied the methods of growing and curing as practiced there by the largest and most advanced seed growers, and the results of his observations are given herewith.

The facts, as set forth by Dr. Stabler, in the following pages, prove almost conclusively that Maryland farmers can not only grow their own sweet corn, but by doing so, can, with reasonable care improve the yield and quality of the corn, and get a more desirable crop in many other ways.

Seedsmen who may wish to study the Bulletin will be supplied with copies by addressing Agricultural Experiment Station, College Park, Md.

ALFALFA SEED.

The increasing acreage of alfalfa, not only in the western irrigation districts, where it first became popular, but east of the Missouri river, is making alfalfa seed more important to the seed dealer, who is finding it more necessary to determine the quality of alfalfa samples and their freedom from weed seeds. A valuable treatise on this subject has been published by the Department of Agriculture, as farmers' bulletin No. 194, from which the facts given herewith are taken.

The seed crops of 1902 and 1903 were short, resulting in scarcity and an advance in the price of good seed. The temptation to adulterate grew with the possible profit, resulting in a low average quality of commercial seed. Yellow trefoil, the seed mostly used in the United States as an adulterant of alfalfa seed, is darker green than alfalfa, so that a sample containing it looks brighter and better at first glance than slightly discolored alfalfa seed.

Although yellow trefoil is of no value as a grass, about 200,000 pounds is imported annually solely to adulterate alfalfa and red clover seed. Analyses of commercial samples of alfalfa seed by the seed laboratory of the Department of Agriculture showed adulteration with from thirteen to forty per cent of yellow trefoil. Bur clover is the common adulterant of alfalfa seed in Germany, and is found in seed imported into the United States. One consignment of imported alfalfa seed, amounting to 33,000 pounds, tested less than fifty per cent pure and contained 12,000 weed seeds to the pound. Three lots of seed, aggregating 67,000 pounds in weight, were more or less shriveled, and could not be sold on the retail market on account of the dark brown color. These worthless lots consist of dead seed and screenings and are imported for about 2 cents per pound, to be mixed with good seed costing 15 cents per pound.

A simple test for germination is to mix the seed thoroughly and count out 100 or 200 seeds, just as they come, making no selection. Put them between a fold of canton flannel or some similar cloth, taking care not to let the seeds touch one another. Lay the cloth on a plate, moisten it well, but do not saturate it, cover with another plate and keep at a temperature of about 70 degrees. Every day count and take out the sprouted seeds. In from four to six days all the good seeds will have sprouted, and the percentage of seed that will grow is known.

GEE, WHIZ!

Since going to press with the outside form of this week's REVIEW, containing, on page 235, the advertisement of poinsettias of C. W. Reimers, Louisville, Ky., we are in receipt of the following letter from Mr. Reimers:

Gee, whiz! Take my adv. out of your paper. The florists took to it as the bankers did to Mrs. Chadwick.

The Louisville news letter this week says that Mr. Reimers has three whole houses of poinsettias for Christmas delivery.

WHO'S YOUR COAL MAN?

The REVIEW has felt that the wholesale dealers in coal were overlooking an opportunity to do business by not advertising in this paper. We are confident that it will pay them because we believe they can offer better prices, more uniform quality, etc., than can the local coal dealers.

W. S. Harman, 303 Dearborn street, Chicago, from whom the J. D. Thompson Carnation Co. and a number of other florists buy their coal, has given us an order for an advertisement to see if we are right that the REVIEW will prove his best salesman. The advertisement appears for the first time in this issue. Mr. Harman sells several grades of bituminous coal in car lots and up. To those who are in the market for coal it is suggested that they get his prices for comparison with those of their local dealers. Then it is up to Mr. Harman.

As a trade paper the REVIEW is second to none and I don't want to miss an issue of it.—FRANK MORRISON, St. Clairsville, O.

YOU may discontinue my advertisement of cyclamen; have sold out and could have sold as many more.—S. M. HARBISON, Danville, Ky.

WHITE SATIN TIES
Embellished with Violets.
LION & WERTHEIMER
463-467 Broadway, New York City.

WELLSVILLE, O.—W. A. Herbert has built a new house 12x100.

RICHMOND, IND.—The E. G. Hill Co. is this week putting in 40,000 to 50,000 cuttings of their new rose, Richmond. Mr. Lemon says that the free flowering qualities of the variety are a surprise even to themselves. Richmond is the Mecca for many pilgrims this year. They expect a particularly large number of visitors just before and just after the Chicago carnation show.

GALVESTON, TEX.—Mrs. Charles Eickholt returned late in November from Dusseldorf, Germany, where she has been for nearly a year. She underwent a serious surgical operation while there and was months in the hospital. She has not fully recovered but is again able to give her personal attention to business, which is very good. She has had a large number of large decorations recently.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Business is light and it does not look very encouraging till the Christmas rush starts in. The retail as well as the wholesale trade in this city is very much off color. A very good shipping trade has been the salvation of the wholesale men and they have been able to take very good care of the out of town demand.

Flowers are not plentiful. There are more roses, perhaps, than anything else, but none too many of them. Carnations are scarce. Bulbous stock is plentiful and sells well. Callas and Harrisii are in very good demand and many more could be disposed of. The supply of all kinds of green goods is first-class. Violets are selling very well, especially those of best quality.

The Christmas outlook is none too bright so far as the supply of stock is concerned. Carnations will be especially short. All kinds of red roses will be far short of the demand. Bulbous and other stock will just about meet the demand. All things taken into consideration, we can scarcely expect this Christmas trade to be up to last year, but I do not think that we will have any cause to kick, at that.

Various Notes.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Society was held last Saturday. H. Weber & Sons, of Oakland, Md., sent a vase of their new white carnation, My Maryland. The blooms arrived in fine shape and made a very favorable impression. The committee gave it 86 points.

The market is now well supplied with holly and other holiday decorative stock and many of the retail men are busily engaged in decorating the down town stores. Most of the holly has not been up to standard. Many cases are almost worthless. There are any number of paper immortelle and sawdust Christmas bells, but the price has been cut on them so that there is very little money in them for the retailers.

Frank Huntsman has been quietly raising a few seedling carnations at his Kentucky plant. He has several that will bear watching, one especially, a very good pink.

Hardesty & Co. are making a great show of flowers in their Fourth street store. They handle some of the finest stock seen in this city and their show windows are always very attractive. This, by the way, is the very best advertising that a retail store can do.

Geo. S. Bartlett reports business very good in the fertilizer line. His bone meal is in steady demand.

H. Schlachter has been confined to bed for several weeks with a severe attack of rheumatism.

J. A. Peterson has returned from his Eastern trip and reports a very good trade.

E. T. Grave, of Richmond, was a visitor this week. C. J. OHMER.

TORONTO.

The Market.

With the sudden turn to cold weather supply of stock has shortened considerably and the increase of prices has somewhat cut off the demand. But prospects for Christmas trade are bright and the demand for Christmas supplies of all kinds has been extremely good. Poinsettias are being shown by our retail men in large quantities and are very attractive. Whether the supply will last for Christmas may be a question. The demand for bulb stock, such as hyacinths and paper Whites, is very slow and many of the growers say they will grow but few next year.

Various Notes.

Among the recent events was the assignment of T. H. Milligan, who took over the greenhouses at Mimico asylum and also ran a store on Queen street West. The assignment was made to the Conger Coal Co. and we understand that they have sold the lease and stock of the Mimico houses to E. Graham, who has been for the last few years with W. J. Lawrence, of Eglinton. The place is now in a very much run-down condition, but as his expenses are low Mr. Graham is hopeful of pulling through the winter with a small balance on the right side. J. D.

A SCOTTISH EXHIBITION.

The Scottish Horticultural Association closed an exceptionally fine show November 19 at Edinburgh, one of the best both in quality and display that has been held for years. The cup went for the sixth time, though not in succession, to Thomas Lunt, gardener to Captain Sterling, of Keir. The exhibit was in fine shape and the blooms characterized by great depth and brilliancy of color. Among those shown were: Miss Stopford, pure white; George Penford, crimson and gold; F. W. Vallis, bronze, which got the silver medal for the best bloom in the show; Lady Conyers, pink and silver; Henry Stowe, pink; Calvat's 99, creamy white; Bessie Godfrey, yellow; W. R. Church, crimson and gold, and Miss O. Millar, pink. F. S. Vallis was in many prize collections. Mary Anderson still held the lead among singles and the pompons were above the average.

A trade floral exhibit was highly commended, one of the novelties being a lady's hat entirely composed of fresh flowers.

An interesting incident was reported in connection with the white variety shown last year under the name of Lady Cranston and which was then a prize winner. It was a sport from Mrs. Barkley, pink, but this year it reverted to its original color and has become lost.

"I could not possibly do without the Review; when I fail to get it of a week I am completely lost."—J. R. Farrant, Newport, Vt.

That little one-inch advertisement in your valuable paper did the work all right, as usual.—J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill.

Enclosed is a dollar to pay for another year of good reading and valuable information; we find it in the Review.—L. Thublin, Mobile, Ala.

Holly is likely to be scarce this season. We advise you to order one or more of our selected cases; the price is $4.00 a case. We also advise you to order some of our cut Poinsettias, they are the best in the market and can be had either in large, medium or small sized flowers with stem to match.

It seems likely that American Beauty Roses will be in heavy demand at Christmas; better place your order early to insure getting a supply of this popular rose.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Although we are in the midst of the season there is nothing outside the ordinary run of business. Most of the stores are kept quite busy with the regular trade and getting ready for the expected Christmas trade. Stock of all kinds has shortened up the past week, especially the better grades of carnations, and they took quite a jump in price, but there was enough to go around at the price.

Various Notes.

John H. Orth will open a branch store at Monessen and if his business keeps pace with the growth of the town, John will do well.

The unsatisfactory way in which the shippers of holly have treated their customers in this section in times past has brought them their reward. Most of the holly coming here now is handled by the commission men and is sold from cars, the good holly only bringing a price, the poor stock being left on their hands. When we placed orders we usually got it in the proportion of one good and two bad cases.

Large handsome wreaths of box-wood, which sell for from $5 upward are among the Christmas novelties, used for cemetery decorations. One florist says he has orders for a number already.

The Florists' Club smoker happened as scheduled. It was well attended and all report having had a royal good time. Music, songs, speeches, cards, lunch, pipes and cigars filled in the evening and the affair reflected credit on the committee, E. C. Reineman and Gustav Ludwig.

The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. showed some very fine Beauties and violets the past week.

Wm. Cromack, of Irwin, is arranging for the erection of several new greenhouses.

The next meeting of the Florists' Club, Tuesday, January 3, will see the nomination of officers. Hoo-Hoo.

MONTREAL.

The Montreal Gardeners' and Florists' Club held its seventeenth annual meeting at its hall on St. Catherine street Monday evening, December 5. There were thirty-nine members present. The report of the secretary and treasurer showed the club to be in a very flourishing condition, with a good balance on the right side of the ledger. The report of our last chrysanthemum show was very satisfactory. The exhibits on the whole were better than in previous years but the attendance was far short of what so good an exhibition merited and the financial result was not what it should have been, although everything worked out satisfactorily. The reports of all standing and other committees were read and adopted. After the close of regular business, officers were elected as follows: President, Jos. Bennett; vice-president, A. Gibb; second vice-president, A. Walker; secretary and treasurer, W. H. Horobin; assistant secretary and treasurer, H. J. Eddy; executive committee, E. Hayward, J. Walsh, Wm. Alcock, J. C. Eddy, J. Kirkwood, J. Pidduck; social committee, H. J. Eddy, G. Robinson, J. Pidduck. It was decided to hold the annual dinner early in January and a special committee was appointed to make all arrangements.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—The Powers Mercantile Co., which had a large cut flower department, was burned out on the night of December 13.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—At a meeting of the Minnesota State Horticultural Society, December 6, a paper was read by C. S. Harrison, of York, Neb., on the "Possibilities in Floriculture." He said that more effort should be made in developing flower growing and declared that there was a gold mine of pleasure in every front yard if proper attention was devoted to their cultivation.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., E. W. Kirkpatrick, McKinney, Tex.; Vice-Pres., C. L. Watrous, Des Moines; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 29th annual convention will be held at West Baden, Ind., June, 1905.

THE sale for fruit trees, while already great, is only a fraction of what it may easily become in the west and northwest if developed along right lines.

PETER BRONDYKE, of Morrison, Ill., expects to engage in the nursery business at Grand Rapids, Mich.

W. V. EBERLY is now manager of the California Nursery Co., Niles, Cal., succeeding the late John Rock.

SADDLER BROS., nurserymen, Bloomington, Ill., are building a large storage and packing house to cost $5,000.

AT Flintville, Tenn., H. L. Brown, F. M. Copeland and W. A. England are preparing to start in the nursery business.

THE sale for hybrid perpetual roses is increasing annually and each year one or more desirable varieties is short of the demand.

THE planting season for nursery stock is practically at an end and in general it has been a good fall business. Storage houses are well filled for spring.

WM. A. PETERSON, Chicago, and his family started December 12 for Los Angeles, where Mrs. Peterson and the children will spend the winter. Mr. Peterson will remain a month.

THE Iowa State Horticultural Society is in session at Des Moines this week. Among the nurserymen on the program are Silas Wilson, C. L. Watrous, C. R. Bechtle, M. J. Wragg, H. A. Terry and C. F. Gardner.

AN economy of space is secured by planting trees by the triangular or equilateral rather than the square method. To determine the number of trees required per acre, divide the number required by the square method by the decimal fraction .866.

THE Kansas State Horticultural Society will meet at Topeka, December 27 to 29. Many western nurserymen will be present, also J. H. Hale, of South Glastonbury, Conn., who is on the program for an address on peach growing, also for one on the work of the American Pomological Society.

WHEN peach trees are planted twenty feet apart each way 109 are required to the acre; twenty-two feet, ninety trees; twenty-four feet, seventy-five trees.

A CONSTANTLY increasing number of florists are handling nursery stock, principally flowering shrubs. They planted considerable stock this fall and the nurseryman who takes good care of their orders will find them increasingly valuable patrons as they enlarge their operations, as they are certain to do.

THE U. S. Department of Agriculture has been experimenting ever since the big freeze of 1898, with a view to securing an orange which would be hardy enough to stand the coldest weather that is likely to come to the south. Prof. Galloway says the success has been remarkable, that several valuable varieties, other than one particularly hardy sort have resulted and will be given a thorough trying out.

THE WESTERN TREND.

Thus far the nearest approach which the west has had to the splendid estates which center in a number of localities in the east is the summer colony at Lake Geneva, Wis., where a number of Chicago families maintain small but pretty places. But as wealth passes to the second generation and leisure increases there is sure to be a rapid development of fine country estates on a par with those in older sections of the United States. This tendency is already being manifested by the purchase of farms in the vicinity of Lake Forest, Ill., only about twenty miles from Chicago. The several wealthy men are individually buying adjoining farms with the purpose of combining several properties into a splendid estate. When this movement gathers force, as it is sure to do soon, it will mean a great opportunity for the landscape architects, the nurserymen and the gardeners.

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

F. Ludemann, San Francisco, Cal., plants; E. H. Hunt, Chicago, Christmas greens and novelties; Texas Seed and Floral Co., Dallas, Tex., seeds and plants; California Nursery Co., Niles, Cal., nursery stock; Sluis & Groot, Enkhuizen, Holland, seeds; M. Herb, Naples, Italy, seeds.

THE FIRE RISK.

The insurance men are taking an interest in the holiday decorating this year. Last Saturday the Chicago underwriters sent out a notice cautioning against the use of inflammable decorations, mentioning in particular such things as wild smilax, bouquet green wreathing, etc. Similar notices have been sent out in many other cities. The caution was directed particularly toward department stores, but they are not extensive users of green, having too many goods to show at this season to give space to decorations not salable.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

Business is having its usual lull just before the general rush of the holiday. A few social functions have at times called for an extra supply. Beyond this it is quiet. Prices remain the same as at Thanksgiving. Good flowers are limited and those that come in are eagerly sought for. Roses are somewhat off crop and a decided scarcity will prevail at holiday time. Beauties are an exception, as a good crop is on locally for Christmas, enough possibly to satisfy the home demand. Red roses, such as Liberty, Meteor and General MacArthur, will be exceedingly scarce. There will be few carnations, but one or two growers have hit it nicely, which will materially help out. Bulbous stuff will, as usual, be quite plentiful, as will also stevia. Valley and violets will be on hand, as most of these are shipped here from Chicago. Poinsettias, both for cutting and as pot plants, will be limited. Cyclamen, Lorraines and azaleas are in their usual supply.

Various Notes.

The reception held at the Wade mansion recently was a gorgeous affair and was well handled by the J. M. Gasser Co. Flowers and plants were used lavishly. The gifts of flowers were something enormous. It is said the amount has never before been equaled in Cleveland. All the store men were busy on this occasion.

The stores present a brilliant array of Christmas color. Immortelle wreaths, bells and paper poinsettias play an important part.

Collins & Harrison have a pretty window of crotons, araucarias and Boston ferns, all neatly trimmed with red.

The J. M. Gasser Co.'s windows are beautiful with orchids, "real" poinsettias and a well-made holly wreath five feet in diameter. Small red electric globes are interspersed.

Smith & Fetters have a full display of immortelle wreaths tied with ribbon to match. A large assortment of bells is shown. Paper poinsettias were used largely in completing a scarlet window.

A call on the ever genial Isaac Kennedy, at West Park, is always a pleasure. Although he has only three houses, which are to form the nucleus of what will some day mean a magnificent plant, Mr. Kennedy keeps busy. He is also mayor of the burg, which perhaps explains his manner of handshaking. The plant is roses exclusively. Brides and Maids are looking fine and give promise of a good Christmas cut. The eel worm is giving him some trouble. He has one thing on the place that is a pretty sight. It is a bench of a new Bride rose which is a decided improvement, as it is more vigorous and the flowers larger. Next season Mr. Kennedy will plant the whole place with this and possibly send it out in a year or two.

Frank Smith has returned from New York.

J. M. Gasser is planning to spend the winter in New Mexico and Texas.

A. L. Brown has the sympathy of the craft in the loss of his mother recently in Philadelphia.

Several Cleveland florists have been visiting the Essex Greenhouses of North Olmsted to inspect the Beauty and carnation crop.

PACIFIC COAST.

DECORATIVE PLANTS.

Florists and nurserymen often have demands for extra size palms and other large plants for permanent decoration in hotel corridors, offices and the interior of stores. The more expensive palms are not long lived in such locations and the parties using them generally want to replace the sick plants with something hardier and cheaper. Where the plants are put in large boxes or tubs, so that they are too heavy to bring out occasionally to the light and be given a good washing, it is not advisable to recommend kentias, seaforthias, latanias or cocos, and, although these are the varieties that are generally selected by the customer because of their graceful habits, they do not thrive long under unfavorable conditions and the customer usually returns to the dealer with the complaint that his plants are sick. It is useless to recommend such things unless the florist knows that the conditions are favorable, and they are generally just the reverse in a draughty hotel corridor or retail store. A kentia that will cost $25 will not keep its color twenty-five days and it gives much better satisfaction to recommend a hardy palm.

I have replanted Chamærops excelsa in pots in which seaforthias have died, and they have lasted for years under the same conditions. Chamærops humilis does not live as long but makes a very good decorative palm. Phœnix Canariensis I find to be the best suited of its class, and, although it does not thrive as well as Brahea dulcis, it comes nearer to being what the public expect when they want to use a long branched plant. Bambusa Japonica I have had splendid success with, and, although it is not well known for this usage, it is well worth a trial. Phormium tenax makes a very effective specimen, stands considerable neglect and will live on a very small allowance of water. Aspidistras, both variegated and green, are long lived and always in demand. Rhapis flabelliformis dies slowly and so does Cycas revoluta and are not satisfactory unless they have plenty of moisture and light.

In evergreens Sciadopitys verticillata, the Japanese umbrella pine, can be recommended and also the Japan juniper, both of which are about the best I have found in that class of shrubbery.

Dracæna indivisa is used probably as much as anything here in a cheap decorative plant and, although it is not long lived, it does not cost much to replace and that is one of the items to take into consideration in replenishing empty plant boxes.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The cold weather has at last arrived and we have had several degrees of frost nightly during the past week. The days are warm and bright and stock is still plentiful, although if the frost continues it will make outdoor flowers scarce. It has not yet affected the chrysanthemums to any extent and they continue to be the most popular flower. Violets are next in order and I look for a shorter picking in a few days unless we have more rain. Carnations are still being sold wholesale at the same prices they have been held at for the past month, and roses likewise. Narcissi are very plentiful and valley is in very good demand. There will be no scarcity of this flower during Christmas week, as there is plenty of it being forced at present. Red berries and all kinds of green stuff sell well.

Various Notes.

An appraisement of the estate of the late John Rock, the pioneer nurseryman, has just been announced. It consisted principally of his interest in the Cali-

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

All the florists are trimming their windows with holly and mistletoe and shoppers are placing quite a number of advance orders. Roses are plentiful, demand fair and prices about the same as usual. Carnations are scarce, prices are going up and the demand exceeds the supply. Poinsettias are in demand for table decorations but the supply as yet is short. Lily of the valley and Paper Whites are selling well, with the supply plentiful. Everything promises unusually good business from now on.

Various Notes.

An unfortunate occurrence happened at Alfred Barbe's last week. Two of his workmen, while engaged in placing plants on the benches, became involved in a brawl. The result, one in the hospital, severely wounded, and the other in jail.

Miss Murray, on Grand avenue, reports business good in her line and has already booked some fine orders for Christmas.

The best violets shown by any one in the city are in the show window of Freudenthal, on Walnut street. They are from Ed. Bunyar, of Independence.

Lawrence Schwager is putting in a large stock of Christmas trees and reports a good business at his Walnut street store.

The Union Depot Flower Co. will move from the present location on Walnut street about the first of January, their lease having expired.

Jacob Tobeler, of Westport, is buying a large stock of holly.

Mr. Smith, of near Elmwood, sold his property last week for $18,000 and has bought property near R. S. Brown's, in Maywood, which he expects to occupy in early spring.

Sam Sharp, Thirty-third and Prospect street, is sending in some fine azaleas and Gloire de Lorraine begonias.

Mrs. Juvell, of Grand avenue, reports business as fair at present, with good prospects for Christmas trade.

NARCISSUS.

NASHVILLE, TENN.

The Joy & Son Company is justly regarded as the leading firm south of the Ohio river. The business was established twenty-five years ago by T. S. Joy and for many years was conducted under the name of Joy & Son. This firm was succeeded three years ago by the present company, which was incorporated with the following officials: T. S. Joy, president; T. C. Joy, vice-president, and Mrs. T. S. Joy, secretary and treasurer. The greenhouses are forty in number and equipped throughout in the most modern and efficient manner. The land is from seven to eight acres, and there are 200,000 square feet of glass, covering a general stock. The company also maintains an up-town salesroom at No. 600 Church street. They not only carry on a large local trade, but ship large quantities of designs, cut flowers and plants throughout the south.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

The Nanz & Neuner establishment at St. Mathews, Ky., is five miles from the city on the Shelbyville Pike. It is well worth to make a trip out to see the large area of glass, consisting of sixty greenhouses for plants and cut flowers. I had the luck to meet the foreman, Theo. Strochaker, who showed me through the different departments, and found everything in fine tip top shape. One house of white and pink bouvardia was very fine. One house containing the old Marechal Niel roses will yield a fine crop for Christmas. Three houses were planted to chrysanthemums, but were well cleaned up with the exception of some fine Yanoma. Four houses are in carnations. The varieties grown are Joost, Enchantress, Hill and Prosperity. One 228-foot house is planted to American Beauties, doing nicely. Mr. Rennison has charge of this department. A bench of Golden Gate is looking healthy and filled with buds. One house contained a bench of good old Perle des Jardins which were in fine shape. The firm has gone to a considerable expense this season remodeling the houses. All the latest improvements have been added.

C. W. Reimers' place, at Crescent Hill, was visited and found the proprietor not at home but I had the good luck of receiving the glad hand of the foreman, A. J. Koenig, who took me through the different houses. The first four houses, 115 feet long, were planted to American Beauties. The growth is wonderful; they can cut some with stems six feet long. Their house of Gates is in fine shape. One house containing two benches, one of Bride and the other of Bridesmaid, was a sight to look over; nothing but buds, and will yield a big crop for Christmas. A bench of heliotrope was also in fine shape for Christmas. Three houses were planted to poinsettias, fine foliage and very fine large crowns, all ready for the holiday trade. One house of carnations contained some 5,000 Lawsons, which were covered with buds, healthy growth and long stems. His Enchantress is hard to beat. I saw some very fine blooms of Flamingo, also some fine blooms of White Lawson could be seen here. The pink chrysanthemum, Dr. Enguehard, was very good. Violets are grown here in large quantities.

The beauty and value of this new fern to be introduced Spring of 1905, can best be appreciated by seeing it. It is a sport from the Pierson Fern (Nephrolepis Piersoni), but it is very much more beautiful and of greater commercial value. It is as different from the Pierson Fern as that is from the Boston. The small side pinnae are again subdivided, producing an exquisite and beautiful effect, changing the entire character of the fronds, which measure less than half the length and about twice the breadth of the fronds of the Pierson Fern. The fronds also assume an entirely different form, the side pinnae standing at right angles to the mid-rib of the frond, on edge rather than flat, as is usual, making both sides of the frond equally beautiful—entirely different from any other fern.

The plant is very dwarf, only about half the height of the Pierson Fern, and of very much more compact habit. Taking it altogether, it makes one of the most exquisite plants and one of the most valuable for table and house decoration that has ever been introduced. The cut fronds, on account of their beauty, will be in great demand for table decoration, design work, and for use in boxes of loose flowers. Well-grown plants make most magnificent specimens. We think there is nothing in the fern line that is so handsome as this beautiful fern when well grown. It is a wonderful improvement over Nephrolepis Piersoni in every respect, both in regard to beauty and habit of growth.

PRICES—2¼-inch pots, $9 per doz.; 50 plants at 60c each, 100 at 50c each, 500 at 45c each, 1000 at 40c each. Large Plants Ready for Immediate Use—5-in. pots, $18 per doz.; 6-in. pots, $24 per doz.; 8-in. pots, $36 per doz.; 10-in. pots, $60 per doz.

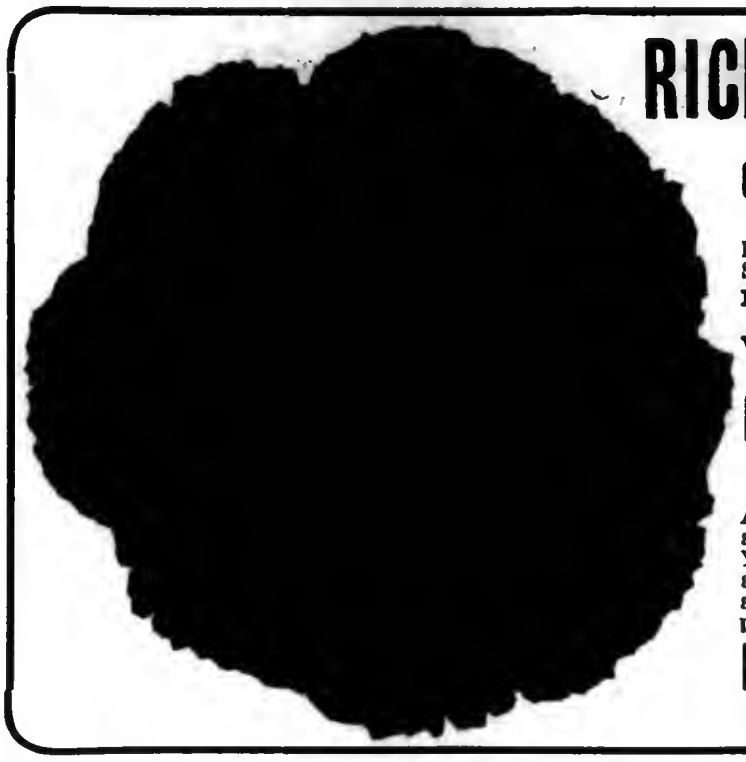
ROCHESTER, N. Y.



I recently took a trip around to see how different varieties of carnations were behaving with the growers here. In red, Flamingo and Adonis have not proven very satisfactory, but Crusader is making a little better showing and the color is much more desirable. With one grower I found Crane ahead of any I have seen, but most of the growers had to strike it off the list, and they are patiently waiting for a good red. In dark pink, I found Lawson better than ever with some growers, nothing but bud and bloom, with Nelson Fisher behaving nicely, but I did not find any grower ready to discard the former for the latter. In white, Peru and Queen seem to be in the lead. For profit, Queen was well named, as it is ahead of anything here at present. Peru will give just as many or more flowers, but the former is much more full and of better stem. In light pink I found a few of the growers growing Morning Glory, but this will be its last season, as Enchantress will give just as many or more flowers and bring more than twice the price. One grower has already averaged five to the plant of that variety and still the plants are a sight. H. M.

Herewith is another dollar for the Review; it is much too good a paper to drop.—John T. Temple, Davenport, Ia.

RED SPORT (Of Maceo.)

This new "Bread and Butter" commercial brilliant "Crane" Red Carnation, now in its fourth year, has the hardy constitution of General Maceo, with a stronger heavier growth, longer and stiffer stem and a larger flower. Growing under the same conditions and in the same house with Flamingo and Estelle it has produced four times as many blooms as the former and twice as many blooms as the latter. The color is as good as Estelle and the bloom brings as much as does Estelle at its best. Every flower is of a uniform brilliant red, perfectly double with an ideal calyx, in fact we never saw a split one.

Red Sport is perfectly healthy, an easy variety to grow, an early and continuous bloomer, throwing its heaviest cuts around the Christmas holidays and during the Winter months when red is in demand. Red Sport will keep longer and travel farther than any other red carnation, and will prove a bonanza to the grower who does a shipping business. If the scarcity of reds in the market that now exists continues Red Sport will pay better to the square foot of bench than any other variety of any color to date. Every florist who has seen Red Sport growing has placed an order for rooted cuttings, which tells the tale. All our stock is sold up to January 25th. Orders filled in strict rotation from that date on. Price, 12 for $1.50, 25 for $2.50, 50 for $4.00 all post paid. $6.00 per 100, $50.00 per 1000, by express. We guarantee all cuttings to be well rooted and to arrive in good condition.

RICHMOND

That It is the Best Red Forcing Variety yet Produced.

1st. It is of strong and rapid growth, more vigorous than any other forcing variety in commerce.

2nd. It comes to perfection without special care or culture and can be grown in the same soil and temperature and with the same treatment given to Bride and Maid.

3rd. It ships perfectly, as it can be cut very tight and develops as well off as on the bush.

4th. Has very near the same tone of color as Liberty, with more scarlet and does not blue with age.

5th. This variety is nearly a pure tea, being seeded from LADY BATTERSEA, fertilized by LIBERTY, and as a result has shown no tendency toward going dormant in mid-winter, at which time the variety is at its very best.

6th. Produces freely throughout the year, long pointed buds on tall straight stems with elegant dark foliage.

7th. Is as easy to root, and grafts as readily as Bride or Maid.

8th. Has as delicious a fragrance as American Beauty.

Was awarded the silver cup at the World's Fair for best seedling rose and a special silver cup at Chicago for best seedling. Prices, own root—100 plants for $30; 250 for $70; 1000 for $250. 500 at 1000 rate.

ROSALIND ORR ENGLISH

OUR PINK SEEDLING from Mme. Chatenay is unapproached in color; the bud is pointed, quite full, borne on long slender stems, beautifully set with foliage, free in growth and bloom; the flower is very beautiful from its earliest bud form till fully expanded. Was awarded certificate of merit at the Chicago Show; $25 00 per 100, $200 per 1000. Both these Varieties are easy to propagate and easy to grow. Come and see them at home.

CARNATIONS

The best big-flowered, general-purpose Scarlet Carnation now before the trade is CARDINAL, color superb, texture perfect, in vigorous health and of splendid habit. Also FIANCEE and F. BURKI. All three at $12 00 per hundred, $100 per thousand.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Among the new varieties which we had on trial for this year are some magnificent sorts, nine of which have been awarded certificates, viz.: Clementine Touset, the big early white Chadwick, October 8: Dr. Galloway, mid-season incurving white; Mlle. Jeannie Nonin, very late white, winner of the Sweepstakes and Silver Cup at Chicago as best New Mum of the year. These three sorts are marvelously fine commercial varieties in pure white, NONIN probably ranking as the finest Mum extant, regardless of date of blooming. Besides these are: Reveil de Begles, early commercial yellow; Roi d' Italie, early commercial yellow; Anna Debono, Mme. E. Lemoine, Prefet Boncourt, Souv. d' Calvat Pere, four grand exhibition whites. Besides these we have: The Wells-Pockett Set for 1905; The Australians of the year; The Marquis of Pins Set, M. Calvat's Fine Sorts, the best of Nonin's, Bruant's and Rozain's.

All at 50c each; $5.00 per doz.; $35.00 per 100, except Mrs. Wm. Duckham, which is 75c each; $7.50 per doz.; $50.00 per 100

KALAMAZOO, MICH.

G. Van Bochove & Bro. have decided to practically double their plant and have already begun to make arrangements for doing so. They have bought thirty acres of land on the old Miller place, out Portage street, near the city limits, and intend to build there at once. The new plant will consist of six or seven greenhouses, each 28x300 feet. They will have a total of about 75,000 square feet of glass. The greenhouses will be of the best and most improved pattern, with all the latest improvements. All the posts, gutters and fittings will be of iron, and all the houses will be heated by steam. A cement boiler room will be constructed, with two boilers, each of 150 horse-power. Another boiler of the same size may be put in later. All the material will come from Chicago. The new range will be devoted to American Beauties, Brides and Maids. As fast as possible the old plant will be removed in the new location, thereby avoiding trouble with high water.

Garrett and John R. Van Bochove began as florists in Kalamazoo about twenty years ago. They had been in the celery business before that. Their first plant consisted of two small houses, with not more than 5,000 feet of glass in the two of them, and the brothers did all the work. Now their houses have about 70,000 feet of glass, with eighteen men employed regularly, and the plant and force will be doubled in less than a year. This will make the Van Bochove plant one of the largest in Michigan.

PLANTS FOR FORCING.

AZALEAS FOR EASTER.

On account of Easter this year coming so very late (April 23) a season of the year when our regular spring shipmends demand our full attention, we have decided not to carry a supply of Azaleas until then, but to close out our entire stock as quickly as possible, therefore customers who usually procure their supplies late in the spring will do well to cover their needs at once. The principal sorts now in stock are Mme. Van der Cruyssen and Bernhardt Andreas Alba, the two best late flowering sorts of their color. These two varieties can be furnished in any proportion desired, but the selection of other varieties must be left to us.

We will still supply early orders at import prices.

12 to 14-in. crowns..... $ 6 00 per doz.; $ 45.00 per 100
14 to 16-in. crowns..... 7.00 per doz.; 55 00 per 100
16 to 18-in. crowns..... 12.00 per doz.; 100.00 per 100

DEUTZIAS FOR FORCING.

Strong two-year-old field grown plants suitable for 6-in. pots.

Gracilis..... Per doz., $0.75; per 100, $6.00
Gracilis Rosea..... Per doz., 1.00; per 100, 8.00
Gracilis Lemoinei..... Per doz., 1.00; per 100, 8.00

AZALEA MOLLIS.

For early and late forcing Azalea Mollis is rapidly gaining favor; easily forced at a minimum cost for heat and labor, they are profitable stock for the retailer to handle. We are supplying at present an unusually fine grade of plants, 15 to 18 inches high, and covered with flower buds, $4.50 per doz.; $35.00 per 100.

FORCING LILACS.

A fine lot of pot grown plants, well set with buds and in prime condition for forcing, $6.00 per doz.; $45 00 per 100.

RHODODENDRONS FOR FORCING.

These are being used more extensively every season, and this year, with Easter at such a very late date, should prove especially acceptable, as they can be retarded much easier than Azaleas, and at the same time may be flowered at just the right moment at a minimum cost. We are carrying an extra large stock of bushy well shaped plants, 16 to 18 inches high, covered with buds $9.00 per doz.; $70.00 per 100. Larger plants, 20 to 24 inches high, fine specimens, $11.00 per doz.; $90.00 per 100.

CARNATIONS

ROOTED CUTTINGS.

Eclipse Our 1905 introduction. A pink carnation, lighter in color than Lawson and of a more even and bright shade of pink. No objectionable shading or bleachings. A strong free growth, large flowers on long stiff stems and early and continuous flowering.

Fiancee A most pleasing shade of medium pink. No carnation has ever equalled the number of awards received by this variety.

Cardinal Brilliant scarlet. A great improvement over Estelle.

F. Burki Pure white.

The above four varieties, $12 per 100; $100 per 1000.

Richmond Gem Scarlet, $10.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000.

Lady Bountiful and The Belle

The two best commercial white carnations of the present day. Both have received honors over competitors at the Fall exhibitions. We have large stocks of these two varieties which are already in great demand. Do not delay in placing your order for early delivery. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000; $112.50 per 2500.

White Lawson $7.00 per 100; $60.00 per 1000.

Flamingo, Nelson Fisher and Mrs. M. A. Patten $6 00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Crusader, Indianapolis, Judge Hinsdale and The President $5.00 per 100; $40.00 per 1000.

Enchantress $3.00 per 100; $25.00 per 1000.

In addition to the above we can supply twenty-five of the best standard sorts, varieties that are profitable to grow. Our preliminary Price List will be sent upon application. We are pioneers in the carnation line and our facilities for rooting and handling cuttings are nearly perfect, due to our long experience.

MY MARYLAND

GRAND NEW WHITE CARNATION FOR 1906. Awarded First Prize and Certificate of Merit at the recent show given by the Horticultural Society of Chicago. My Maryland is easily superior to any white variety extant; particularly so in robust growth, and the immense quantity of large fine blooms produced. We invite you to watch this variety carefully during the coming year. : : : : : Visitors cordially welcome.

HEATING.

I have recently bought a plant which is badly run down. The boiler was made to heat 4,700 feet of glass, but no maker's name is on it. I desire to know if a boiler with a fire box twenty-four inches square will keep up sufficient heat on a night 10 or 15 degrees below zero in 1,200 feet of 4-inch pipe, down hill system? The boiler has ten flues six feet long and good draught; will burn anything, but am using semi-anthracite slack, firing thin, but cannot seem to get over 115 or 120 degrees in water with overflow in the center of the run, and by the time it reaches the farthest point in circulation it seems to be not over 100 degrees. I have tried light and heavy firing, but cannot seem to get water above 115 degrees at the point mentioned. Is the fault with the fuel, firing, circulation or where? The circulation is slow, but seems all right. F. M.

It is impossible from the data given to more than guess at the reason for the low temperature in the system. While the size of the flues in the boiler is not stated, I judge them to be 3 inches. If so the heating surface in the boiler is probably too small. The fire box is capable of supplying heat to 320 square feet of heating surface in the boiler when soft coal is used. With ten flues six feet long it is probable that not more than one-half this amount of heating surface is provided in the boiler. A good boiler with 175 or 200 feet of heating surface should be ample, with proper fuel, to provide 180 degrees in the risers. If a full description of the boiler can be provided, stating general design, material used, size, number and length of flues and whether the boiler is return tubular or direct draught of the locomotive type, it will be possible to give a more exact and satisfactory answer. Without this data a conjecture as above stated is all that is possible. L. C. C.

Are all flower growers liars?

SURELY this cannot be true; well, we have over 100 growers who have written us, a large majority without request, their opinions; we publish a few of these letters in the columns of this paper; see on pages 186-226-231-232. what they say about the FUMIGATING KIND TOBACCO POWDER. All began with a five-pound trial bag at our expense, which gave them an opportunity without cost to prove its GOODNESS and our assertion that it was the most effective, cleanest and quickest, as well as cheapest (10 cents per 100-foot house) article to fumigate with, and that all kinds of aphis can be killed in one night. Let us send you a five-pound trial bag by express, it will cost you nothing but the express charges on it, and be convinced that what your brother growers say of it is true. Our booklet tells of it; we mail it on request.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.

The fourth annual horticultural exhibition was held in Music Hall, which was converted into a great flower garden, with tropical plants intermingled with the natives here and there. A splendid lot of plants in bloom were shown. Over all was the canopy of delicate blue and white bunting. The various exhibits were allotted to spaces on the floor and the aisles about and between them were arranged so that each one could be fully examined. Along the side walls were booths where flowers, potted plants and other articles were sold. At the entrance was a fine display of garden products. Many hundreds of people from in and out of town spent many pleasant hours enjoying this rare treat. Among the prize winners were Henry Cliff, Robert Johnstone, A. J. Thompson, William Veitch, of the Agricultural Experiment Station; J. H. Slocombe, Richard Bell, Frank E. Duffy, Frank Kimberly, Mrs. Edw. Rice, Wm. H. Symon, David Ferguson, Mrs. W. H. Symon, O. G. Gennings, Oscar Carlson, John Seibold and others.

Charles Munro has recently moved to his new store on Chapel street, formerly that of the Robert Veitch Company.

J. N. Champion has been fortunate in securing the orders for decorations for the many elaborate weddings which have taken place during the past month, the Hotchkiss wedding being the greatest New Haven has yet known.

S. H. Moore has had much funeral work. His windows have been elaborately decorated with choice stock.

Violets and carnations have been very scarce, while the demand is steadily increasing. Violets went up to $3 and $4 per hundred for the Yale-Harvard game. E. S. M.

The Chicago Carnation Company state: "Nico-Fume" does the work more effectively and with less inconvenience to ourselves than anything we have tried heretofore, and we have tried everything else.

Mr. Peter Weiland states: "Nico-Fume" is very effective; leaves no odor on the blooms; does not affect the color; and is to my knowledge the cheapest fumigating product now in use.

Mr. John H. Dunlop states: I am satisfied that, if the quality is maintained, "Nico-Fume" will be the standard fumigating material.

FORCING SPANISH IRIS.

How should Spanish iris be handled for Easter flowering? C. W. E.

The Spanish iris, I. vulgare or I. Xiphium, is very easily forced for Easter if the bulbs are planted in good season and grown slowly. The bulbs should be planted in flats as soon as received, which ought to be early in September, using flats four inches deep, with ample drainage, and soil of a light, rich, sandy nature. The bulbs should be planted with the necks above the soil, as they are very impatient of dampness at that particular spot and are apt to suffer from the iris fungus, Mystrosporium adnatum, if exposed to much dampness.

After boxing they should be placed in a cold-frame having a northern aspect and loosely covered with litter to prevent too rapid evaporation. When the weather becomes severe they should be protected and kept dry by putting on the sash. In January they should be moved into a house with a temperature not to exceed 48 degrees at night for at least a month. The temperature should be gradually increased as exigencies demand but to secure good buds, and they should always be cut in the bud, the night temperature should never exceed 55 degrees.

Bulbs handled as late as the middle of October or November rarely succeed. There are few hardy bulbs so impatient of interference as the Iris family and any disturbance should be conducted during its most dormant period, August and September. R.

I ENCLOSE a dollar for renewal of my subscription; it is worth several times that sum to me each year.—JESSE P. KING, Mt. Airy, Md.

CONCRETE WALLS.

Will you please tell us if a concrete wall six inches thick is advisable for greenhouse siding in place of the usual ship-lapped hemlock, paper and novelty siding. I intend building sides of concrete and advice on the subject would be appreciated. R. S.

Some growers favor concrete for walls but, having tried it, I am not in love with it. The usual method of using German siding for a finish seems to meet the requirements of most growers. In the course of a day or two you will receive some literature on the most modern methods of building which may be of some use to you. R.

THE LORRAINE BEGONIAS.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine is so easily cultivated, flowers so profusely, and is at its best at the very dullest time in the whole year, that there is little wonder that it so soon became universally cultivated. There have already occurred several sports from this variety, such as those named Mrs. Leopold de Rothschild, Turnford Hall, which has flowers that are nearly white; and Caledonia, with pure white flowers, but so unlike to the type that few gardeners are able to cultivate it successfully. At a meeting of the Royal Horticultural Society, London, November 15, several newer varieties were shown, but their resemblance to Gloire de Lorraine appeared very close.—Gardeners' Chronicle.

FLOWERS BY TELEGRAPH.

Put a neat sign in your window: "Funeral or gift flowers delivered by telegraph anywhere in the United States." When you have taken an order refer to the page of "Leading Retail Florists" in the REVIEW and select a man to whom to telegraph the order. You will find it a very satisfactory source of new business.

PREVENTS FROST ON WINDOWS.

One cold day last winter when B. Eschner, whom everybody knows, was sitting, with his ear muffs down, his mittens and his rubbers on, behind a frost-covered hotel window waiting for train time, he ran across the following in a paper:

"This has been a bad winter for the storekeeper in more ways than one. And one of the ways has been the frosting of the show windows. Burning gas in the windows to keep off the frost is unsatisfactory. Many storemen run electric fans in the windows and this in a measure keeps down the ice, but it is detrimental to the stock in the window. For this purpose the Pharmaceutische Zeitung recommends the application of a mixture consisting of fifty-five grams of glycerine dissolved in one liter of sixty-two per cent alcohol, containing, to improve the odor, some oil of amber. As soon as the mixture clarifies, it is rubbed over the inner surface of the glass. This treatment, it is claimed, not only prevents the formation of frost, but also stops sweating."

A FINE YELLOW CYP.

The fine yellow form of Cypripedium insigne which appeared at the Royal Botanic Garden, Glasnevin, Dublin, and is named Mrs. F. W. Moore in compliment to the wife of the curator, proves a very worthy addition to that popular class. It is perhaps the strongest-growing and most robust of yellow flowered forms of C. insigne, its habit of growth being similar to that of C. insigne Harefield Hall variety, says the Gardeners' Chronicle.

FLAT IRON RAFTER TYPE.

While the same in general outline as the ordinary flat rafter type of greenhouse that has been on the market for years, yet our construction is so far improved in every detail it is far from ordinary—it is in a class by itself.

We furnish it in two styles for commercial and private use, both ¾ and even span. The commercial style shown in the illustration has our galvanized "U" bar eaves plate and is supported on galvanized iron foot pieces set in concrete.

The style for private use is provided with cast iron sills set on brick walls and is furnished with gutter at eaves line.

FLAT IRON RAFTER TYPE OF GREENHOUSE.
ERECTED FOR MR. JEFF DOREMUS, MADISON, N. J.

SASH BAR TYPE.

We manufacture this type of house in several grades from the low priced all cypress grade to the highest grade of combination wood and iron.

The house shown in the illustration is composed of our highest grade and consists of our galvanized "U" bar eaves supported on galvanized angle iron side posts with foot pieces bedded in concrete. The roof is supported on iron columns and angle iron purlins, making a strong durable house at a reasonable price.

It stands next to our flat rafter type in stanchness and durability.

Our lower priced grades of sash bar houses are manufactured with just the same care and attention to every detail.

All cypress used is selected and free from sap or knots.

HIGHEST GRADE OF SASH BAR TYPE OF GREENHOUSE.
ERECTED FOR MR. A. L THORNE FLUSHING, N. Y.

RIDGE AND FURROW TYPE.

We manufacture this type of house in all our constructions and of all widths of span.

The range shown in illustration consists of our highest grade sash bar with galvanized "U" bar eaves and galvanized angle iron posts.

It is provided with our galvanized "V" iron center gutter arranged to catch all water of condensation on under side of glass.

It is absolutely dripless and is without doubt the most perfect center gutter yet presented. It is supported on galvanized iron pipe columns which are bedded in concrete.

RIDGE AND FURROW TYPE OF GREENHOUSES.
ERECTED FOR F. R. & P. M. PIERSON, SCARBOROUGH, N. Y.

We also manufacture and furnish self-locking sash opening apparatus, hotbed sash and frames, all kinds of benches, "Pierson" boilers and everything required for erecting and heating greenhouses.

Estimates furnished for houses erected complete or for material ready to erect.

Ferns

COMMERCIAL VARIETIES.

[A paper by David Lumsden, of A. Leuthy & Co., Roslindale, Mass., read before the Boston Gardeners' and Florists' Club, December 20, 1904.]

I know of no class of plants, taken the year around, which give us so much pleasure and real enjoyment as ferns; and what class of plants can we find that will excel, nay, even equal the fern in grace, beauty and utility?

Ferns are now in greater demand than ever before, not only for greenhouse cultivation, dwelling house adornment, fernеries, and other decorative purposes, but are also used with flowering and other decorative plants, making many excellent combinations. Persons in every station of life are taking a great interest in ferns and are desirous of cultivating them, and what gardener or florist have we present among us this evening who has not had these or similar questions asked him relative to ferns?

What is the best kind of a fern I can get to live in my house? I have steam heat or furnace heat, as the case may be, and we want a fern that will grow. What variety can you recommend? What is the proper way to treat them?

It is very true they are flowerless plants; nevertheless they are, I may say, everybody's favorite; in fact, through the whole of my experience in Europe as well as in America I have met no one who is not a fern lover, which goes far to prove the universality of ferns.

I may here state that ferns have a very wide geographical distribution and are found in almost every part of the world. They range from the tropics, where they are found in greatest profusion, to the arctic region, as far north as Greenland. In some places they are found at the sea level; in other places they attain an altitude of several thousand feet. Some will grow only in hot climates, others only in cold, and in their native haunts you find some growing in a dense shade, while others stand scorching rays of a tropical sun. We find them growing by the side of winding streams, in dense shady glens, in crevices of rocks where we would think it impossible for them to get sufficient nourishment to exist, and, indeed, some varieties revel in such situations. And what a comparison in size is afforded by the fern kingdom! Some are small, their fronds being scarce half an inch in length, while others (tree ferns) attain a height of fifty feet. Therefore, among ferns we find every conceivable kind of growth, and among them is a great diversity of habit and requirements. Notwithstanding all this, no other plants are so easily managed in cultivation as ferns.

Essentials of Fern Growing.

While it is considered necessary to have a knowledge of the various species in order to excel in their cultivation, yet the whole family can be satisfactorily cultivated by careful attention to a few rules: First, the right kind of a soil to use; second, a certain temperature must be maintained winter and summer; third, a moist atmosphere free from draughts; fourth, abundance of light, at the same time protection from the scorching rays of the sun during the summer months.

We find most tropical ferns are evergreen; that is to say, they retain their foliage until new foliage is produced the following season, and some varieties retain their foliage for a number of years. Very few of the tropical varieties are deciduous, while among the species from colder climates we find the deciduous varieties predominate. The great mistake made by a novice is that, when ferns have lost their foliage, they are placed on their sides or put away in some corner of the greenhouse unseen and forgotten, and then left for weeks without water. The chances are the roots are injured and, if the plants are not killed outright, it is impossible for them to make such vigorous growths the following season as they would if they had been kept continually damp. Those that have lost their foliage must be supplied with sufficient water to keep them moist while resting.

The right kind of soil to use for fern cultivation is fibrous loam and to obtain it grass sods should be taken from the field, stacked grass side down, layer upon layer, and left to remain a year or longer. By that time it will be found the roots of the grass are dead. Care should be taken in cutting the sods from the field that they are about three or not more than four inches deep, as the fibrous part of the loam is the portion we require. Leafmold is made from leaves collected during the fall and allowed to lie in large heaps for a season or two, until they are entirely decomposed; also it may be collected from the woods, where the leaves fall annually and decay, forming nature's fern garden.

At one time the idea was prevalent that ferns could not be grown without peat in the compost. This is entirely erroneous, as by experience we find that peat is not of much importance, as the value of leafmold is acknowledged by our leading growers.

Clean, sharp river sand is the best we can use to keep the compost open and admit the passage of the surplus water freely through the soil. Charcoal is very valuable, broken small and can be freely mixed in with the compost for some varieties of ferns. It is also a valuable agency placed on the tops of the crocks as it tends to insure good drainage, keep the soil pure and in growing condition.

A great many persons have the idea that ferns need a dense shade to grow in.

Carnation Helen Goddard.

This is entirely erroneous, as most ferns like abundance of light and our fern ranges are better from the beginning of November to the early part of March without any shade.

There are various methods of propagating ferns. Some are propagated from tubes on the roots, some from bulbils formed on the rhizomes and some are propagated from spores, which is certainly the most interesting form of propagation.

Growing From Spores.

The spores vary in the different species. Some we find arranged along the edge of the frond; in other species they are spread all over the surface; in others they form large patches on certain parts of the frond. Some of the clusters are covered with what we would call a very thin membrane, which gradually lifts as the spores ripen, and oftentimes shrivels or falls off. In some species the spores are not covered at all, being a pale green in their infancy and as they advance to maturity, some become brown, some black, others green, according to the species. When the covering shows signs of beginning to lift, it is an indication the spore is almost ripe. The fronds containing the spore can then be gathered, wrapped in paper and dried by hanging them up in any warm place where there is no danger of water reaching them. In the course of a few days, when they are sufficiently dry, they are rubbed through a very fine wire sieve, which removes the frond and a portion of the chaff from the spore. They are then ready for sowing.

After experimenting in various ways with the sowing of spores I find the most satisfactory results are obtained by using 5-inch or 6-inch pots. They should be filled to within one inch of the top with drainage, consisting of small crocks, cinders or charcoal. The pot is now ready to receive the soil, which must be loam screened fine, with no manure, and thoroughly sterilized, either by baking over a fire until all forms of vegetable and insect life have been destroyed, or by the use of steam, passing through and thoroughly sterilizing the soil. After filling the pots with the compost be careful to make the surface perfectly level. The pots should now be thoroughly watered and allowed to stand an hour or so before sowing them. They are now ready to receive the spores. Care must be used when sowing to select a place free from draughts, as the spores are so fine that the least breeze will scatter them in every direction.

After sowing, place your pots in a shady place in the greenhouse and cover with glass. This glass covering should be kept on continually to prevent other spores getting in and to keep a humid atmosphere about the spores. This assists germination, as a dry atmosphere is detrimental to their growth. We then place the pots in saucers containing water, which rises and keeps the compost moist. If any of the pots are found to be drying out they must by no means be watered overhead, but placed in a pail of water, so that it soaks up and saturates the whole compost, as top watering will disturb the spores and in all instances wash them out of their places. It is an old axiom in human life that cleanliness is next to godliness, and in plant life it is equally true, especially among seedling ferns, for they quickly rebel under unclean conditions.

The warm or exotic ferns germinate best in a temperature of say about 65 degrees. The cooler or hardy ferns will germinate in a much lower temperature. The first sign of growth appears in a faint coloring of green on the soil, which will rapidly cover the whole surface. At the first indication of the spores making tiny fronds they should be separated in small patches and planted in other pots or flats containing fern compost. Overhead watering may now be indulged in, but use a very fine rose on your watering pot; also keep under glass for a time longer and give more light. They will soon need dividing again and presently, when large enough to handle, they may be placed in 2-inch or 2¼-inch pots.

There is mystery attached to raising ferns from spores and it is no uncommon occurrence for a totally different kind to appear than the one which has been sown. Also, we find when the utmost care has been taken in collecting and saving the spores, several kinds may appear in the same pots. It is reasonable to suppose the spores in the fern house are being constantly wafted by currents of air, and readily attach themselves to fronds of other species. They are then collected and after sowing, of course, mixed plants will result.

As I have previously stated, there is an increasing demand for ferns in this country, especially in varieties suitable for jardiniere work. In fact the demand is far in excess of the supply, although I may say millions of ferns are raised annually throughout the country. Also, we find our old favorite, Nephrolepis Bostoniensis still in great demand, with the new and beautiful variety, Piersoni elegantissima, or ornamental Boston fern, and Nephrolepis Scottii, a wonderfully dense and compact growing variety, making an excellent house plant, and a beautiful center-piece for a table, when grown in the shallow pan pots. In my humble opinion this excellent fern has a great future before it.

Best Ferns for Jardinieres.

I shall now enumerate a few varieties of ferns suitable for filling jardinieres, of which pterises form the leading feature; in fact, the pteris family is for such work indispensable. P. adiantoides is a deep green and glossy fern and the variety argyrea, a showy green and white variety, a native of the East Indies. P. cretica and its varieties, albo-lineata and magnifica, together with the showy variety major, are excellent commercial sorts. P. serrulata and its varieties, cristata, cristata compacta and densa, are all natives of the tropics. P. tremula is a New Zealand fern, a quick grower and makes a nice pot plant, together with the crested variety, Smithiana.

Aspidium tsussimense is commonly known in this city as tensemense. It is a general favorite on account of its good keeping qualities, but is somewhat slow of growth.

Carnation Victory.

Cyrtomium falcatum, the holly fern, is a beautiful form and always in demand. Other good sorts are: Lastrea opaca and L. chrysoloba, the former from China and the latter from Brazil; Polystichum (lastrea) aristata variegata, a dense green fern with yellow stripes on the fronds; Onychium Japonicum, or parsley fern, of Japanese origin; Pteris Chinensis, Polystichum coreaceum, a South African fern, which, when well grown, will make a nice specimen.

Cibotium (Dieksonia) Schiedei is a beautiful, graceful fern much in demand by the leading decorators throughout the country, making a beautiful house plant and of which stock is always scarce and difficult to obtain. Sitalobium cicutarium is a very showy fern and a native of tropical America.

In adiantums we have first to mention A. cuneatum, decorum and gracillimum, the latter in demand on account of its light and graceful appearance, also Adiantum Croweanum, the new maidenhair which, owing to its strong, vigorous growth and long stems will become a general favorite with the trade where marketing the fronds is a feature, as well as in private places where cut maidenhair is always used.

Adiantum Farleyense, the queen of the maidenhair family, is a native of the West Indies and is now grown in quantities by the trade, both as a pot plant or for cut fronds wherever first-class decorations are a feature. Alsophila Australis is frequently asked for and very desirable, on account of its stately appearance, together with Dieksonia Antarctica, both of which are Australian ferns.

The davallias are also an interesting family and the variety bullata is being sold in large quantities when made up in fern balls and various other shapes as received from Japan. The variety Canariensis makes a nice pot fern and readily develops into a nice specimen, also the varieties Fijiensis plumosa and major are desirable forms to cultivate.

Platyceriums, or stag-horn ferns, are always interesting on account of their unique shaped fronds, resembling a stag-horn. The variety alcicorne majus is a free growing variety and grande a fine variety, but somewhat scarce.

In taking survey of the ferns I have mentioned, we owe a great deal to Japan for her part of the fern flora, as a great many of our most beautiful species are natives of that country. There are thousands of other varieties of most beautiful ferns that time will not permit me to talk about. Suffice it to say the varieties mentioned in my paper are the most popular from a commercial point of view, and as ferns increase in demand day by day let us each do his part to make them more and more interesting to fern lovers, so that it can be truly said of each of us, as by the poet, when he stated:

The green and graceful fern,
  How beautiful it is;
There is not a leaf in all the land
  So wonderful, I wis.

Have ye e'er watched it budding,
  With each stem and leaf wrapt small,
Coiled up within each other
  Like a round and hairy ball?

Have ye watched that ball unfolding?
  Each closely nestling coil,
Its hair and feathery leaflets,
  Their spreading forms uncoil?

O, then most gracefully they wave
  In the forest like a sea,
And dear as they are beautiful,
  Are these few leaves to me.

VIOLETS IN SASH HOUSE.

Under separate cover I sent you a box containing two bundles of violet plants which I grew in a sash house but am having trouble with. In order that you may see better what the trouble is I will go way back and describe the treatment they got as well as I can.

About May 1, I received a lot of clumps from a place fifteen miles distant. They reached me in fine condition and were very fine, healthy plants. I divided them and put them in soil in the house. Before I put them in the soil I took out about six inches of the old soil and put in fresh soil from the field. I put in no manure, although the soil was not rich. I kept them syringed well and they all rooted fine.

In July I took out the old soil from the benches and replaced it with six inches of field soil. On top of this I put about two inches of stable manure, which was quite rotten, mostly cow manure mixed with some seaweed, which I used for bedding. This seaweed I got along the bay shore, being washed up by the water. There was very little of this seaweed in the manure and it was well washed out by the rain before I used it for bedding. I then mixed this manure well with the soil and planted my violets in it. This was the third week in July.

I forgot to state that after I had removed the old soil I loosened what remained to the depth of about three inches and gave it a sprinkling of air-slaked lime, just enough to whiten the surface, and raked it into the soil.

I did not take off the sash, as half of them are ventilators, and I was able to keep down the temperature nicely. I shaded the glass with whitewash, but removed it gradually from the middle of September until near the end of October, when I took it all off.

I watered them quite often; that is, when I thought they needed it, also syringed them occasionally. Have not been bothered with red spider to my knowledge and no flies, either, as I fumigated with hydrocyanic acid gas when I noticed any. I keep them at 43 degrees at night and 60 degrees in the day time. I heat with hot water. I have the regular violet pits, two benches four feet wide and a walk dug out in the center of the house. I have solid benches with the soil on the level with that outside of the houses and heating pipes fastened to the side of the house.

On the east side of the south bench the plants are fine and healthy, but the west ends of some benches have been going back for the last six weeks. I send you two plants to see if you can make out the cause of my trouble. I also send you one plant of the north bench of the same house, which did finely until about three weeks ago. Since then they seem to have stopped growing. The leaves of this north bench seem to be wrinkled and yellowish green in color, showing that they are sick.

I had some stem-rot this summer in the same house but gave them a top dressing of air-slaked lime in the end of September and worked it into the soil. I also surfaced them once in a while before that and kept the runners cut off. The lime stopped the stem-rot.

This is entirely erroneous, as most ferns like abundance of light and our fern ranges are better from the beginning of November to the early part of March without any shade.

Cibotium (Dicksonia) Schiedei is a beautiful, graceful fern much in demand by the leading decorators throughout the country, making a beautiful house plant and of which stock is always scarce and difficult to obtain. Sitalobium cicutarium is a very showy fern and a native of tropical America.

In adiantums we have first to mention A. cuneatum, decorum and gracillimum, the latter in demand on account of its light and graceful appearance, also Adiantum Crowcanum, the new maidenhair which, owing to its strong, vigorous growth and long stems will become a general favorite with the trade where marketing the fronds is a feature, as well as in private places where cut maidenhair is always used.

Adiantum Farleyense, the queen of the maidenhair family, is a native of the West Indies and is now grown in quantities by the trade, both as a pot plant or for cut fronds wherever first-class decorations are a feature. Alsophila Australis is frequently asked for and very desirable, on account of its stately appearance, together with Dicksonia Antarctica, both of which are Australian ferns.

The davallias are also an interesting family and the variety bullata is being sold in large quantities when made up in fern balls and various other shapes as received from Japan. The variety Canariensis makes a nice pot fern and readily develops into a nice specimen, also the varieties Fijiensis plumosa and major are desirable forms to cultivate.

Platyceriums, or stag horn ferns, are always interesting on account of their unique shaped fronds, resembling a stag horn. The variety alcicorne majas is a free growing variety and grande a fine variety, but somewhat scarce.

In taking survey of the ferns I have mentioned, we owe a great deal to Japan for her part of the fern flora, as a great many of our most beautiful species are natives of that country. There are thousands of other varieties of most beautiful ferns that time will not permit me to talk about. Suffice it to say the varieties mentioned in my paper are the most popular from a commercial point of view, and as ferns increase in demand day by day let us each do his part to make them more and more interesting to fern lovers, so that it can be truly said of each of us, as by the poet, when he stated:

The green and graceful fern,
How beautiful it is;
There is not a leaf in all the land
So wonderful, I wis.

Have ye e'er watched it budding,
With each stem and leaf wrapt small
Coiled up within each other
Like a round and hairy ball?

Have ye watched that ball unfolding?
Each closely nestling coil,
Its hair and feathery leaflets
Their spreading forms uncoil?

O, then most gracefully they wave
In the forest like a sea,
And dear as they are beautiful,
Are these few leaves to me.

VIOLETS IN SASH HOUSE.

Under separate cover I sent you a box containing two bundles of violet plants which I grow in a sash house but am having trouble with. In order that you may see better what the trouble is I will go way back and describe the treatment they got as well as I can.

About May 1, I received a lot of clumps from a place fifteen miles distant. They reached me in fine condition and were very fine, healthy plants. I divided them and put them in soil in the house. Before I put them in the soil I took out about six inches of the old soil and put in fresh soil from the field. I put in no manure, although the soil was not rich. I kept them syringed well and they all rooted fine.

In July I took out the old soil from the benches and replaced it with six inches of fresh soil. On top of this I put about two inches of stable manure, which was quite rotten, mostly cow manure mixed with some seaweed, which I used for bedding. This seaweed I got along the bay shore, being washed up by the water. There was very little of this seaweed in the manure and it was well washed out by the rain before I used it for bedding. I then mixed this manure well with the soil and planted my violets in it. This was the third week in July.

I forgot to state that after I had removed the old soil I loosened what remained to the depth of about three inches and gave it a sprinkling of air-slaked lime, just enough to whiten the surface, and raked it into the soil.

I did not take off the sash, as half of them are ventilators, and I was able to keep down the temperature nicely. I shaded the glass with whitewash, but removed it gradually from the middle of September until near the end of October, when I took it all off.

I watered them quite often; that is, when I thought they needed it, also syringed them occasionally. Have not been bothered with red spider to my knowledge and no flies, either, as I fumigated with hydrocyanic acid gas when I noticed any. I keep them at 43 degrees at night and 60 degrees in the day time. I heat with hot water. I have the regular violet pits, two benches four feet wide and a walk dug out in the center of the house. I have solid benches with the soil on the level with that outside of the houses and heating pipes fastened to the side of the house.

On the east side of the south bench the plants are fine and healthy, but the west ends of some benches have been going back for the last six weeks. I send you two plants to see if you can make out the cause of my trouble. I also send you one plant of the north bench of the same house, which did finely until about three weeks ago. Since then they seem to have stopped growing. The leaves of this north bench seem to be wrinkled and yellowish green in color, showing that they are sick.

I had some stone cut cuttings in the same house but gave them a top dressing of air-slaked lime the first week in September and worked it in between the plants. I also surfaced them once or twice to free that and kept the runners cut off. The lime stopped the stem rot.

I have another house planted with California violets, which are treated the same as the Marie Louise plants and which are doing finely. Right along some of the older leaves on the plants would start to get brown around the edges. These brown edges would get wider and wider and dry, until the whole house would look something like the leaves on trees that die when winter comes. I kept these leaves picked off but more would appear and I still keep finding them.

A. N.

The treatment seems to have been all right in all the particulars given and the only thing the correspondent omits to tell is the kind of soil that he has and what his drainage facilities are. From the looks of the plants which he sent we would come to the conclusion that they were drowned out by cold, wet drip and overwatering. I would advise withholding water supply in a measure and see if I could not dry out the soil and get it into a sweeter working condition. In regard to the seaweed used in the manure, I hardly think that that could have had anything to do with it, although I have never used any as a violet fertilizer, but having laid as long as he says it did, and used in small quantities, I do not think it has cut any figure in the results. Then, too, it would have affected them earlier if it were that. I think he will find overwatering or lack of good drainage, with cold drip from the flow pipe, or both, the cause of his trouble. R. E. Shuphelt.

THRIPS?

I am in trouble with my carnation buds, which rot before they open. They expand as far as when they are ready to turn the petals, but they remain in that condition and in a day or two after, the petals get yellow and rot.

I heat the house with hot water, the expansion tank being an open box, which is at the end of the house. The temperature is kept at 50 to 54 degrees at night, with all the air I can possibly give in the daytime. I have put on a stimulant composed of one peck of well rotted manure, one 6-inch pot of bone meal and one 6-inch pot of wood ashes for 250 square feet of bench. This compost has been put on twice this season, the plants having been housed on August 15, watering being done very carefully.

The plants are very healthy, making fine growth and stem. I have Enchantress, Marquis, Queen Louise, Lawson and Crane. The last named is the only one that fully develops; all others, especially Marquis, are rotting. This trouble is two weeks old now and happened immediately after I had put on the second dressing and started to fire up harder. J. H.

I am not sure that I can tell positively what ails your carnations, but I suspect they are badly infested with thrips. If you had sent a sample bud I could have told you for certain whether or not this is the trouble. Pull the petals apart and look for a tiny insect about one-sixteenth of an inch long. The color varies from almost white to a deep brown. They are very active and you will have to look sharp. To get rid of them you will have to go after them vigorously, as it must be a bad case to destroy all the blooms. Get a pint of some tobacco extract, like To-bak-ine, and spray them according to directions every morning for two weeks, unless you can see that the thrips have disappeared.

I don't think the feed you gave them is responsible for the trouble, although it is a little more than I would recommend. If the plants are in good, vigorous growth and free from disease I should certainly think it is caused by some insect and thrips would be my first guess.

CARNATION HELEN GODDARD.

This seedling is the result of a cross between Lawson and Crane. The raiser is Samuel J. Goddard, Framingham, Mass. The habit of the plant is about intermediate between the two parents. The flowers are of a beautiful rosy pink color somewhat lighter than Lawson and without any of the objectionable coloring peculiar to that variety. The stems are long and strong and burst calyxes are unknown. Helen Goddard has won an increasing number of admirers each time it has been shown in Boston. It has already received recognition from the plant committee and when next shown will score a higher award. W. N. C.

GO SLOW WITH CARNATIONS.

When this reaches you, you will not have much time for cultural details, but I just want to remind you not to drop the temperature in your carnation houses too quickly. Don't think that because you forced them extra strong you can make it up to them by running them down to the other extreme for a while. You could do nothing worse. Drop it gradually, a degree each night, until you have it normal again. You will want blooms right along anyway and a sudden drop would not help you to get them. If the forcing has weakened the stems somewhat you can give them a light sprinkling of wood ashes and water them in well. Give all the air you can.

Here's hoping that you have a large cut and a good demand at fair prices, therefore a merry Christmas time.

VARIEGATED LAWSON.

W. B. Arnold, of the Rockland Greenhouses, Rockland, Mass., secured a first-class certificate for this very promising sport when shown in Boston on January 30, 1904. He now has a house containing 2,000 plants, which are a wonderful sight. The house was planted late, September 15, and picking commenced November 10. Burst flowers are unknown. Stems of Variegated Lawson are longer than in the old type and the flower has a fine odor. It opens very quickly and is a great keeper. Having grown a few plants furnished by Mr. Arnold we have failed to notice any faults and it has been a pleasure to grow it. Our experience would be that it produces at least three flowers to one of that popular variety, Mrs. Patten, which it greatly resembles in color. W. N. C.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY

Robert C. Pye, Nyack, N. Y., registers Carnation Senator Crane, light pink bloom, three and one-half inches, high built, of perfect form and of a non-bursting calyx; long, stiff stems; free and continuous bloomer; parentage Lawson x Bradt.

D. C. Noble, Columbia City, Ind., registers Carnation Uncle Peter, light pink, the same shade as Enchantress, a sport from Lawson with the same quality and habit as that variety.

John C. Moninger Co. and Vaughan's Seed Store of Chicago, are offering special prizes for the meeting in Chicago, January 25 and 26. In order to give everybody an opportunity to offer a prize that desires to, the premium list will not go to press until December 26.

AMERICAN CARNATIONS.

The following is from the report in the Gardeners' Chronicle of an exhibition November 29 of the Royal Horticultural Society of Great Britain:

Carnation Enchantress.—A very large-flowered tree or wintering-flowering variety. The color is a very delicate shade of pink. An excellent flower, but possessing very little fragrance (Award of Merit).

Carnation The President.—A tree variety, having beautifully formed flowers of deep maroon-crimson color; exceedingly rich. The petals, however, are fringed, and we could not detect any fragrance (Award of Merit).

Carnation Adonis.—This variety has bright red-colored flowers, with rather more fragrance than the others, and less fringed petals. All the varieties named above and some others were shown by Messrs. Bell & Sheldon, Guernsey, who showed a collection of much merit. Each of the three varieties that gained an award, was, we believe, raised in America.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.

[THE FLOWER GARDEN; A Handbook of Practical Garden Lore, by Ida D. Bennett; McClure, Phillips & Co., New York, $2, net.]

It was a true word that was spoken by the sponsors for a new gardening magazine when, in their announcement, they said that more about gardening has been published in 1904 than in any preceding year; theirs was also a safe prediction that 1905 will see the record of 1904 exceeded in the matter of horticultural literature. To those who gain their livelihood through the exchange of horticultural commodities this is a reason for felicitation, for whatever inspires in the people a love for plants and flowers is distinctly worthy of encouragement for commercial reasons. All that should be required to gain the stamp of approval at the hands of the men who grow plants for profit is assurance that the statements are true and the teachings sane and practical.

It is an occasion for regret that these characteristics are not found in all that purports to be gardening literature, but The Flower Garden, by Ida D. Bennett, which has already reached its second edition, is worthy of its sub-title, "a handbook of practical garden lore." It is a volume of 281 pages, handsomely printed and bound, freely illustrated with excellent half-tone reproductions of photographs made for the purpose. There are twenty chapters, covering in detail all the operations of plant growing and garden making, including soils, fertilizers, handling the hotbeds, etc., with comprehensible cultural directions for all the plants commonly met with in the collections of amateurs. It is such matter as any florist should be glad to see, and aid in placing in the hands of his customers and their neighbors.

There are very helpful tables giving the blooming season of various trees, shrubs and plants, the common and botanical names of plants and flowers and the time required for the germination of seeds of many plants. The whole is fully indexed.

WITH BOSTON GROWERS.

The Boston Gardeners' and Florists' Club went to Framingham for its field day December 17 and the members were fortunate in having a very pleasant day. Over thirty made the trip by electric and steam cars, and but for the nearness of Christmas, which kept some busy at home, the number would have been much larger. Owing to the severe illness of J. T. Butterworth it was thought best to postpone a visit to that gentleman's place in order that the genial proprietor might himself escort the party around.

Wm. Nicholson.

On arrival at Framingham Center, the establishment of William Nicholson was first visited. Everything in the greenhouses was found in fine condition. Principal interest, of course, centered in the carnations, which are largely grown and have always been a specialty here. It was especially noticeable that stock in the newest and roomiest houses was much superior to that grown in the older 100-foot houses, which were a dozen years ago considered the acme of perfection for carnation culture, also that the atmosphere was far more genial.

Prosperity seemed to be doing better than ever, judging from the heavy crop of immense flowers it was carrying. Mrs. M. A. Patten is grown in quantity and seemed to be doing very satisfactorily. Some Mrs. Bradt are still grown and a batch of Stella looked well. Judge Hinsdale was not of a taking color. In whites, Wolcott was doing beautifully, no burst flowers noticed. Lady Bountiful was giving a good crop of fine flowers, some a little thin in petalage, but the form of the flower and its purity surpassed any other white. The Queen was far the heaviest producer of all the whites, being a perfect mass of flowers and buds. A bench grown inside all summer, from which flowers had been picked since September 1, was still smothered with bloom. White Lawson produces freely, but stems are too short compared with other sorts grown. A seedling white from R. Witterstaetter looked like a fine thing.

In crimsons Harry Fenn seemed to be the most prolific. Its warm, scarlet crimson color is very taking. Ward's President is also fine, as was Harlowarden, but the latter seemed to be less free. As an outdoor summer bloomer it was pronounced first-class. Governor Roosevelt is also grown. A bench of Flamingo carried some splendid flowers on ideal stems but this variety is not classed as likely to be a profitable one commercially. J. H. Manley was in fine shape. In yellows, Eldorado is mostly planted, being grown inside all summer. It looked clean and was producing a fine crop. Dorothy Whitney also looked promising.

In light pinks honors were about evenly divided between Enchantress and Fair Maid, the former having the finest flowers, the latter the most flowers. In dark pinks a few Nelson Fisher are grown. We did not consider it equal to Lawson, which is grown in quantity. Floriana did not strike us as being of particular value. Ethel Ward is a nice medium variety of rosy pink color with a high built center. A crimson seedling from Dailledouze Bros. has the earmarks of a valuable sort and some other seedlings of Mr. Nicholson's own raising were promising. The propagating house was full of cuttings and thousands are already boxed off. The best carnations noted were planted on July 28.

In addition to carnations some other good things were noted. Plants of the old orange scarlet West Brighton Gem geranium were in fine bloom for Christmas sales. A bench of mignonette carried some magnificent spikes. Large batches of Primula Sinensis and P. obconica, cyclamens and Begonia incarnata looked well. Princess of Wales and Campbell violets were clean and full of bloom. Lilies, antirrhinums, sweet peas, freesias and other crops were all coming along in good shape. After an inspection of the boiler plant an adjournment was made to the packing shed, where an excellent lunch was served by the Misses Nicholson, to which the visitors did ample justice. James Wheeler, on behalf of the club, thanked Mr. Nicholson for his kind entertainment and called for three cheers, which were heartily given, followed by the singing of "He's a jolly good fellow."

S. J. Goddard.

A few minutes' walk took the members to S. J. Goddard's new establishment. Here everything was found in apple pie order. Mr. Goddard also operates an older plant situated some two miles away from his newer and more central location. Time did not permit of a visit to it. Mr. Goddard's new seedlings were greatly admired by all the visitors. Helen Goddard, which attracted much favorable notice at the late chrysanthemum show, was a beautiful sight. The flowers are of a clear, rose pink color, without the slightest trace of purple or magenta, stem and calyx perfect. A bench of Mrs. Lawson grown alongside looked dull and sour by comparison. We predict great popularity for this variety. Another seedling of a warm flesh color, the color being even all over the flower, is also bound to become popular. Two pure white seedlings are also under trial, also several of other colors.

Of the standard sorts, The Queen was carrying a great crop. White Lawson seemed free but a little lacking in stem. Lady Bountiful carried some splendid flowers. There was a good batch of Marion Buxton, one of Geo. E. Buxton's seedlings, a light pink variety. Fair Maid and Enchantress are grown as light pinks. Mrs. Patten as a striped sort and Harry Fenn and J. H. Manley are the favorite crimsons and scarlets respectively. For a yellow. Mr. Goddard grows a bench of one of his own seedlings, rather a coppery yellow shade with carmine markings. All the carnations were in splendid condition. A variety of other stock, such as lilies, cyclamens, freesias, violets and primulas, are grown here and at the older establishment.

An adjournment was made to Mr. Goddard's house after the houses had been inspected and ice cream and other refreshments were served by Mrs. Goddard and Mrs. Hale. A rather hurried rush for a Boston car passing the door prevented the extension of thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Goddard for their courtesies. Some of the poorest sprinters had difficulty in getting on the car, and some, we fear, were left behind, but no doubt got home later. After two collations in one afternoon it is doubtful if the members could do customary justice to their Saturday evening beans and brown bread on reaching home.

Among those in the party were James Wheeler, J. W. Duncan, Robert Cameron, M. A. Patten, E. Sutermeister, W. Kidder, F. H. Meade, E. O. Orpet, Alex Ogg, F. Drewett, W. E. Fischer, E. Johannson, F. White, Duncan Finlayson, W. Downs, C. Sander, H. A. Stevens, J. McManus, A. H. Fewkes, J. Rosonosky, W. C. Rust, G. M. Anderson, C. Holbrow and C. Walters.

WILLIAM NICHOLSON.

One of the best known florists' establishments in Massachusetts is that of William Nicholson, at Framingham. The proprietor is an Englishman by birth, hailing from Windermere, in Westmoreland, in the beautiful lake district, which is one of the Meccas for Americans who are touring the British Isles.

Mr. Nicholson arrived in America on September 23, 1873, to take charge of the estate of W. H. Mellen, of the firm of Claflin, Mellen & Co., of New York. He managed Mr. Mellen's Framingham property for fifteen years, growing among other staples, cucumbers, tomatoes and carnations. These were the days when tomatoes netted fancy prices in winter, occasionally bringing as much as $2.25 per pound in the Boston market. Cucumbers also sold at prices calculated to turn present day growers green with envy.

On Mr. Mellen's death, in 1888, Mr. Nicholson hired the plant for two years, removing in 1890 to his present stand, Pleasant Hill Conservatories. In his first year he erected three houses, two 20x100 and one 15x100, and has added to his plant on various occasions until now it is of quite large proportions. The carnations grown in 1890 included such old-time favorites as Mrs. Fisher, Grace Wilder, Astoria, Buttercup, Anna Webb, F. Mangold, Hinze's White and Portia, all good in their day but not comparable to Enchantress, Fair Maid, Roosevelt, Patten and others of today. While carnations have always been the leading specialty at Pleasant Hill and have won many prizes at the Boston shows, a general assortment of other stock is grown. A good deal is sold at home, the balance being disposed of at the Park street market, Boston, of which Mr. Nicholson is one of the directors. Since the inception of the American Carnation Society he has been one of the strongest supporters. When the society met in Boston in 1895 his namesake, Nicholson, a fine, dark pink variety, was well shown. Several years ago he was elected to the presidency of the society, which position he filled with credit.

Mr. Nicholson is an active member of the S. A. F., C. S. A., American Rose Society, Massachusetts Horticultural Society and Boston Gardeners' and Florists' Club. He is also prominent in Masonic circles. His eldest son, William R. Nicholson, a stalwart who stands six feet three inches, is associated with him in the business and should make a worthy successor to the subject of this brief sketch when the latter decides that he has earned a sufficient competency to enable him to enjoy life more leisurely. We do not imagine, however, that such a day will ever come in a florist's life, any more than in that of our frenzied financiers.

THE FADELESS FLOWER.

We are indebted to our esteemed contemporary, the New York Sun, for the information that it is upon his thornless cactus that Luther Burbank has developed his fadeless flower. Once upon a time there was a saying, "If you see it in the Sun it's so." We hope it may hold good in this case and shall wish that the cactus flower may perfume the desert air to ambrosial sweetness; but we haven't any other use for everlastings, except on women's bonnets.

VEGETABLE MARKETS.

Chicago, Dec. 21.—Cucumbers, 50c to $1.15 doz.; leaf lettuce, 30c to 40c case; head lettuce, $3 to $4 bbl.

Boston, Dec. 20.—Cucumbers, $6 to $10 box; seconds, $3 to $4; mushrooms, 60c to 70c; tomatoes, 25c lb.; asparagus, $4 to $5 doz. bunches; lettuce, 25c to 50c doz.; parsley, 75c box; radishes, 30c doz. bunches.

TOMATOES.

What is the best tomato for forcing? When should the seed be sown to have them in crop by March 15? What is the method of culture? J. H. T.

If I were cut down to one tomato for forcing I think I would choose Lorillard, as it is a general well-doer, being less influenced by soil and location than some of the others. Stirling Castle and Best of All are also good varieties, the former being an extra free setter, though the fruit is smaller than that of Lorillard. You are too late now to sow seeds to have the plants in crop by March 15, as, under the most suitable conditions and with the best of care and attention, tomatoes require at least four months from the time of sowing until the plants are in full crop.

If it is important that you should have your crop ready for the above date I would advise you to procure plants now rather than wait for the seedlings. You ought to be able to get good, strong plants in 2¼-inch pots and by keeping them moved up and planted as soon as ready you should have no trouble in accomplishing your purpose. I see such plants of the Lorillard variety advertised in the issue of December 8 at $2 per hundred, so unless your house is very large it won't cost much to fill it.

Regarding cultivation, I can give but a brief outline here; to enter into details would take too much space. The seeds should be sown thinly in a rather light, free and finely sifted soil. This should be kept moist but not wet. After the seedlings are up and large enough to handle, prick over into flats at a distance of about two inches apart, using a rather richer soil than recommended for the seed pans. Shade for a few days until the plants have taken to the new soil, then gradually expose to full sunlight to keep the growth stocky. Before the plants begin to crowd one another in the flats they should be potted up into 2¼-inch pots. From this they can be moved into 5-inch and from this into the benches.

Raised benches are best for tomatoes and these should be about six inches deep. The best soil is a good, fibrous loam, well enriched with manure. A good proportion is three parts of soil to one of manure. But unless the soil is to stand for some time before being used it is important that the manure be pretty well decomposed. The addition of a sprinkling of bone meal is often advantageous but the necessity of adding this depends a good deal on the quality of your soil. Set your plants eighteen inches apart and train to a single stem. I like the double stem system, but by waiting for your plants to break and branch you would be losing time. By single stem I mean to keep all side shoots pinched off as they appear and concentrate all the strength in the one stem. As the flowers appear they should be pollinated by hand to insure a free set. During bright weather the shaking of the vines is often enough to distribute the pollen, but to make sure it is better to run over them with a camel's hair brush, choosing the brightest part of the day for the operation, when the pollen is dry and easier set free.

The points of your plants may be stopped when they are anywhere from four to six feet in length, but this, of course, must be regulated according to the height of your house. Tomatoes require plenty of water and when the fruit is set and the benches well filled with roots they can be materially assisted by frequent applications of liquid manure. The best temperature is from 60 to 65 degrees by night, with a rise of from 15 to 20 degrees by day, according to the brightness of the weather.

INDOOR GRAPERIES.

Varieties.

Like most other classes of fruit, there are too many varieties of Vitis vinifera, the species best adapted for indoor cultivation, though the good ones are really limited. The varieties are, I believe, entirely of European origin. None of the American growers seem to have become interested enough to try and raise new varieties, but when their cultivation comes to be more general, which I hope will be the case before many years, probably some of the more enterprising of our growers will turn their attention to this matter and do for the indoor grape what they have done for the outdoor species, for the apple, pear, plum, etc., and produce some varieties of American origin that will supersede anything heretofore introduced.

The selection of varieties will depend entirely on the season at which the grapes are to be forced. For an early house the more quickly maturing varieties will, of course, be necessary. For this the old stand-by, Black Hamburg, is easily the leader and, if a black grape only is wanted, I should say plant your house of this variety alone. With average care and attention to the ripening of the wood it is a sure cropper, a free setter and clean, healthy grower. It is of good size, both in bunch and berry, is easily colored and firm enough to stand shipping from California to Maine if properly packed.

If a white grape is desired the earliest is Buckland Sweetwater. Though this cannot be compared with the Muscat varieties for quality and flavor, it is nevertheless a good grape and where white and black are to be forced together in an early house it is better suited as a companion for Black Hamburg than are the Muscat varieties, as it matures at the same time and requires the same temperature and atmospheric conditions.

The Muscats require a higher temperature and neither bloom nor mature so early as Hamburg.

The Muscat varieties are all more or less what might be termed high class grapes and are handled to best advantage when grown in a house by themselves. One of their worst features is that they are all somewhat shy in setting. While it does not take long to run over the bunches with a soft brush and insure proper pollination, it is not so much in the lack of pollen that the trouble lies; it seems to be more due to the failure of the pollen to fertilize the flower. During the prevalence of bright weather a reasonably good set can usually be counted on, but if dull weather prevails the set is often disappointing. Light seems to play a very important part in this matter and I find that by tying back some of the leaves and exposing the bunches as much as possible to the light, a good set can usually be secured unless the weather is exceptionally dull during the flowering period. Muscat of Alexandria is one of the best white grapes we have. It produces a good, large bunch, with very large, firm berries of a distinct Muscat flavor. Bowood Muscat is so much like Alexandria that it is needless to grow both. Canon Hall Muscat, also white, is larger both in bunch and berry but more shy in setting and less desirable on that account. Muscat Hamburg is one of the best black grapes in this class. It may be a matter of taste, but for eating qualities I think it is the finest grape grown. Madersfield Court is larger in berry than Muscat Hamburg and is also a beautiful grape, but the berries are sometimes apt to crack when nearing the ripening stage.

For late grapery there is not a really good white with the necessary keeping qualities, but there are several good black varieties. Black Alicante is the best looking and easiest finished. Barbarossa makes the largest bunches, but Gros Colmar is the best keeper of the lot; in place of losing it improves in flavor by keeping, not being really good until after it has been kept for some time. This variety cut in December, when the falling of the leaves robs them of their natural shade, can be kept in good condition in a cool cellar until the following April.

Though there are some fifty varieties of Vitis vinifera more or less in cultivation the few enumerated are among the best for commercial purposes. Some of the others are good under certain conditions only, while some I do not consider worth growing under any conditions.

SEASONABLE TREATMENT.

The ordinary care of stock during the short and sunless days of the next month requires a deal of forethought and skill to get the best results and he who would be successful must keep his thinking cap on most of the time. To induce crops to come at the time when there is the greatest demand and best prices requires some study and calculation, which should be based upon thorough knowledge of the quality of soil used and the constituents of your water supply, and your past observance of attending conditions.

Soils being so unlike in character in the different localities, it is not possible to give blanket advice as to the treatment of stock during the winter months so that each grower will have to be guided in a great measure by the quality of soil and water at his command. Where the soil is of a heavy, clayey nature there is less need of liquid feeding and more need of light and frequent mulching to keep the soil in the bench from cracking. If there is a deficiency of lime in the soil or water this should be added at frequent intervals. Where the soil is of a light, friable nature the mulching should consist of material containing large quantities of nitrogen, such as cow manure, and the liquid food should be made from the same material.

Wood ashes contain many of the elements necessary to the formation of robust growth and, if used with caution, aid materially in giving vigor to the plant. Bone meal, which contains about the proper amount of phosphorus and ammonia, can also be used with benefit but there is danger in using this in combination with other ingredients, such as lime, which will release these elements too rapidly.

To help hasten a crop it is often advisable to use nitrate of soda but as this is a very concentrated food and quick in its action it has to be used with great care. Using it once a week one pound is sufficient for fifty gallons of water at this season.

As the days begin to lengthen the quantities of feeding material can be increased but it is good policy to increase very slowly, as root action for some time to come is very sluggish and frequently there is considerable damage done to stock by being over kind to it at this season.

If crops are somewhat tardy during the dark weather it is safer to rather lower the temperature than raise it, as this calls for less water and keeps the plants from getting soft. While the cut may not be quite so large, the plants will gain in vitality and the quality of the cut will be better, the wood for a future crop will be of a better quality and, all things considered, the grower will be a gainer by the end of the season.

BEAUTIES LOSING FOLIAGE.

Please explain the theory of holding the foliage on American Beauties during continued dark weather in winter. I refer to young plants benched in four and one-half inches of soil in June, lightly top-dressed with cow manure two months later and given a little wood ashes in October and then a little bone meal in November. The plants have been bearing high grade blooms and look well. The temperature has been even and moderate, both day and night. Ventilation has been given whenever possible. The loss of leaves is entirely on the old wood. Also, does an increasing number of deformed buds, chiefly on the heavy shoots of these Beauties, indicate a deficiency in the soil? If so, what is the remedy? Reader.

Had this correspondent enclosed some leaves and buds for inspection it would have simplified matters, as I am in the dark without them. It looks very much like a case of black spot, from the fact that the trouble seems to be with the older leaves. Spray with a solution of carbonate of copper (cupram), using five ounces of the carbonate to three quarts of ammonia and sixty gallons of water. The spraying should be done once a week, using a very fine nozzle, taking particular care to wet every part of the plant. Also pick off all affected leaves and burn them.

The cause of deformed buds at this season is usually thrips. This can be ascertained by carefully dissecting one of the buds and keeping a careful watch for the insect, which is small and very lively and apt to escape observation. Light and persistent fumigation with tobacco fumes will soon reduce the number and if a small amount of red pepper is added the effect is sure extermination.

These malformations can also be brought on by overfeeding during dark weather. Ribes.

MOISTURE FOR DRACAENAS.

The beauty and value of dracænas consist, in a great measure, upon their retaining leaves down to the rim of the pot, and plants destitute of their bottom leaves exhibit proof that something is imperfect in their culture. This, it may be concluded, refers to comparatively young plants, as it is natural for old ones to lose their lower foliage. It is during the short days that plants are most likely to become disfigured in this manner, and it may be easily brought about by careless watering, either by keeping the soil too wet or too dry, while a free use of the syringe damages the young leaves, more particularly those of the light or highly-colored kinds. A light position is likewise essential to their well-being, and we find the best place for young plants is upon shelves near the glass, in a house commanding a night temperature of 60 degrees.—Gardeners' Magazine.

PRONOUNCING DICTIONARY

COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY FLORISTS' PUBLISHING COMPANY, CHICAGO.

Frequent inquiry as to the correct pronunciation of plant names has led us to compile the following list of names, selecting those in most common use in the trade, and including botanical terms most frequently met with in articles upon plant culture.

In our list we have used the following

WINTER FLOWERING PLANTS.

When the chrysanthemums are past their best one turns for something bright and cheerful to take their place, and during the dull months there are few colors more taking than scarlet or red. In years gone by camellias were all the rage, but these have now lost favor, as we must now have something less formal, and plants must be grown by the hundreds for decorative purposes.

Plants that were formerly considered too tender for ordinary use are now grown under different conditions, and on that account rendered more useful. For instance, poinsettias were treated as hard-wooded plants and now they are grown almost like annuals, cuttings being rooted during the summer in a frame, and these grown on during the summer without heat, keeping them sturdy until the autumn, when they are taken into a house with a temperature of from 55 to 60 degrees, and here they make heads of bracts from a foot to fifteen inches in diameter. To grow these well some little care is necessary. In the first place, the cuttings should be taken off with a heel of the old wood, when about three inches long. These should at once be dipped in fine sand, to prevent their bleeding. To prevent them flagging it is preferable to have the pots ready, so that the cuttings can be inserted and placed in the propagating case quickly. As soon as rooted they should be hardened off ready for a shift into larger pots, for if allowed to remain in their cutting pots the foliage is sure to fall. They ought to be grown in a cool pit, near the glass, during the summer and here they will grow sturdy, so that when introduced into heat in the autumn they soon commence to throw up their bracts.

The most useful of the euphorbias is jacquinæflora. Cuttings rooted in the same way as recommended for the poinsettias will do well, but they must, however, be given a trifle more heat during the growing season. If the pots are plunged in a slight hot-bed the plants will grow away freely, and make growths from two to three feet in length. When introduced into the stove in the autumn they should be grown in the full sunlight, when they will flower for the greater portion of their length.

Thyrsacanthus rutilans used to be a great favorite, its long, graceful racemes of flowers hanging down for a couple of feet or so, producing a pretty effect. Cuttings of the young shoots should be rooted in spring, and the plants grown on under cool treatment during summer. When taken into the stove house see that they do not suffer for want of moisture, and they will then well repay all the labor spent on them.

Clerodendron fallax, when well grown, is a very showy plant in winter. It may be raised either from seed or cuttings. If by the former method, seeds must be sown as early in the season as possible, so that the plants may have time to grow to a good size. When cuttings are used these should be rooted in May, the plants being grown on in the same way as recommended for poinsettias.

Acalypha hispida is another bright winter subject that ought to receive special care. There should be no difficulty in working up a stock of this, as it roots freely from cuttings made of the young shoots in spring. Scutellaria moeciniana, and the scarlet bouvardias, are all useful winter flowering subjects, bright and cheerful, and requiring much the same treatment, and though of course, some grow much stronger than others. Many people fail to grow these things well because they are afraid to treat them liberally during their season of growth. For bouvardias to be useful the flower stems should be from fifteen to eighteen inches in length, and as thick as a lead pencil; they will then have heads of bloom that will stand erect when cut.—Gardeners' Magazine.

HELIOTROPES AS POT PLANTS.

This well-known plant is not so extensively cultivated as it deserves, and is very seldom seen grown in pots for winter blooming. The beautiful racemes of flowers, varying from white to a deep purple shade, and the delicious fragrance which they emit, make it very useful either for decorating purposes or cut flower work, and never fail to be a source of admiration from those who once see them at their best. The cuttings should be taken about September and placed six or eight thick in some fine, sandy soil in 48-sized pots and put under handlights on a hotbed, where they must be shaded from brilliant sunshine. If the cuttings are well watered when they are put in, an occasional syringing will suffice them till they are rooted, when they may be removed and placed near the glass in a warm, moist atmosphere with a minimum temperature of 65 degrees. While the plants are growing they require copious syringings of soft water, and on no account should they be allowed to become dry at the root.

When the plants are well rooted they may be potted off singly into 4-inch pots and carefully watered until well established, when they may be gradually worked into a cooler temperature, and afterwards placed in 6-inch pots, in which they are to flower. As the plants grow, all side shoots and bloom must be picked out, and when all fear of frost has gone they may be placed out of doors and sheltered for a time from cold and cutting winds, and when at heights varying from one foot to two feet they may be stopped, and as side shoots again appear, they must be picked out, leaving only a few at the top to form a head, which will give the plants a more shapely appearance. During the period in which they are out of doors they may be fed with artificial manures, and some soot water may also be used, as this imparts a good dark color to the foliage, and as bloom shows it must be pinched out.

About September the plants may be brought into a cool house and arranged in a group in which they are to flower, and when the bloom buds are well advanced all feeding must be discontinued and water administered carefully or the foliage will become yellow. When the weather becomes colder the ventilators must be drawn in, and the temperature should not be allowed to fall below 50 degrees, and as the flowers fade they should be removed to encourage the succeeding blooms to furnish the plants through the winter.—Gardening World.

THE PATH OF PROGRESS.

Luther Burbank, the wizard of horticulture, has perfected a fadeless flower.—News Item.

The horseless carriage whizzes by,
With puff and dash and slam;
Through every breath of ours may fly
A wireless telegram;
The seedless raisin on the plate
We joyfully devour;
Things are perfected while we wait—
Here comes the fadeless flower.

The coreless apple is announced;
The whipless school is here—
No scholar any more is trounced
By teacher kind and dear;
The scentless onion now is grown—
Improvement every hour
Into the scheme of things is thrown:
Behold the fadeless flower!

The jokeless comedy we see;
The tailless horse we drive;
The honey served to you and me
Comes from a beeless hive;
Buckwheatless buckwheat cakes we eat,
And gather strengthless power;
Some new thing every day we greet—
Observe the fadeless flower.

O, would they freeze some meltless ice;
Or make some footless gas,
Or furnish coal without a price—
Fate is unkind, alas!
Henceforth the maiden fair to see
Will grow reserved and sour,
And say: "Bring withered blooms to me—
No cheap old fadeless flower!"

FRANK H. TRAENDLY.

President Traendly, of the New York Florists' Club, was born in Brooklyn some thirty-seven years ago. He was "to the manor born," his father having had a long experience in the florists' business. At the age of 16 years the son was gathering experience with Fred Donohue, on Fourteenth street, and later on West Twenty-seventh street, with Thos. Young, Jr.

It was in 1893 he ventured on the wholesale sea, forming a partnership with Charles Schenck, with whom, at 44 West Twenty-eighth street, he is senior member of the firm of Traendly & Schenck, wholesale florists. Here, in their new store, they conduct a splendid business.

Mr. Traendly's services to the New York Florists' Club during the past year received practical demonstration in his unanimous re-election to the presidency. No one holding the office has ever worked more indefatigably or made a better record. Every club meeting has seen increased interest. He has made his future responsibility no easy burden by the high mark set in 1904.

Secretary John Young was, of course, re-elected, as was Treasurer Weathered, both having served the club long and faithfully. The new member of the executive staff is J. Austin Shaw, vice-president.

Sparta, Ill.—H. O. Clendenin reports business very good, funeral work being heavy and cleaning up stock as fast as it is ready to cut.

Eureka, Ill.—Charles Snyder and C. E. Brady, who have been very successful growing lettuce the past two years, have gone into carnations.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

After Monday of last week the market declined until before the end of the week values had shrunken fully twenty-five per cent from the early quotations. The week before Christmas is always the dullest of the winter season. Dark, cold weather aided in the general depression. The supply of stock was not over-abundant nor the quality the best. With a continuance of the cloudy skies there seems no possibility of an oversupply for Christmas or any excuse for pickling, the market readily absorbing all the growers can send in from day to day. So far as consultation with those who dispose of the flowers can aid us, we estimate on another page the probable prices for Saturday of the present week. There is no good reason apparent why they should go higher and at these figures not a flower need be left unsold.

Everything now indicates a good, healthy, normal Christmas trade, with an abundance for all in the aggregate and universal cause among growers, wholesalers and retailers for a Merry Christmas.

The Plant Trade.

It has become fashionable of late years to designate the holiday as "a plant Christmas" and this will be no exception to the rule. Baskets and boxes and hampers and many novelties will do service, kettles, tripods, wooden shoes, mail pouches and the Russian green pompon designs in many a unique form will all be seen. Plants of oranges, ericas, hyacinths, primulas, cyclamens, poinsettias, Lorraine begonias, lilies, ardisias, orchids and azaleas will be most in evidence, while dracænas, araucarias and Scottii and elegantissima ferns, among plants, will be largest in demand.

Christmas Greens.

The supply of first-class holly is not abundant. The poor quality sells in the open market at just half the price of the legitimate, and is worth less than half. To those on the ground where examination of both grades is possible it is very easy to appreciate the difference, but the out of town florist cannot seem to comprehend it. Far better to give orders in advance at reasonable prices and secure the supply through the regular trade sources than to depend on the unsalable stuff that reaches the wholesale butcher and grocer commission man from anywhere and everywhere and is dear at any price.

There will be millions of galax used this year. Holly wreaths of immense size made to order by the wholesale green goods men sell as high as $5 each. None but first-class goods of this kind are now handled by the retail stores. To the butcher and the grocer has been passed over all the cheap trade in wreaths and stars and roping and all Christmas trees and, all things considered, it is a blessed relief to the average florist to escape the additional labor and risk entailed by this unremunerative trade.

Various Notes.

Stumpp & Walter Co. has purchased a trial ground farm at Dumont, N. J. This house is one of the most energetic and progressive in its line and is making rapid progress.

Ditzenberger Bros., who have been in the business twenty-three years at Bay Ridge, Brooklyn, will dissolve partnership in June, their property having been purchased by a real estate company. Twenty-one houses, about 25,000 square feet of glass, will be sold by auction at that time. Phillip, son of one of the brothers, is one of Ghormley's lieutenants on West Twenty-eighth street.

M. Limprecht has opened a Christmas branch, where he is handling all kinds of evergreens, at 38 West Twenty-ninth street, Geo. E. Bradshaw being in charge.

Dice & Co. is another green goods house having a throw for Christmas trade at 30 West Twenty-ninth street, occupying a part of W. H. Gunther's wholesale quarters.

Jos. Fenrich is sending out a handsome Christmas calendar.

Chas. Feast, of Baltimore, was in the city last week.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

BEGONIA GLOIRE DE SCEAUX.

Among winter flowering begonias this variety possesses distinct characters, both in the habit of its growth and the color of its foliage, and these attributes, apart from its great value as a flowering plant, are sufficiently good to secure for it general cultivation. When grown during the summer, with liberal rooting space, and under warm stove conditions, it forms large specimens, too large really for general use, though we have found plants of this description valuable for grouping. Plants for ordinary purposes are best grown in a cooler temperature, and when they are coming into bloom it is especially undesirable to subject them to a high temperature, as this would shorten their flowering season. They are most satisfactory when placed, while in flower, in a warm, moderately dry and light position, and given weak supplies of liquid manure. Care should be taken to keep the stems well secured to stakes, otherwise the plants may be greatly damaged, owing to the weight of their heads.—Gardeners' Magazine.

HOLIDAY FANCIES

We have goods in novel styles, just what the Holiday Trade demands.

We have new ideas in French Baskets, very stylish and pretty. Our Rainbow Baskets are charming, the colors blending harmoniously.

In Wreaths the latest ideas are the Fancy Cycas Wreaths with red, bronze, silver and gold finish.

We also have pleasing effects in Beech, Magnolia and Laurel with flowers, or plain Ruscus Wreaths, like Smilax, and Beaded French Wreaths with bright finish, are both choice for the decorator.

We have Light Folding Screens, very useful.

Bamboo Plant Stands, beautiful Rainbow Pot Covers, New Crepe Papers and a variety of handsome Vases.

We lead in STANDARD SUPPLIES, Fresh Cape Flowers of every color, Plain Wreaths and Leaves of Cycas, Flat Baskets, Wheat Sheaves, etc. We wish all our friends a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

The Market.

The market is in a very uncertain condition at the present writing. Business in the stores is quiet, all interest being centered in the last two days of this week. There is a little shipping of the better grades of stock to outside cities, but beyond that the wholesale houses are not busy. Today's price-list is, of course, useless for Friday and Saturday. Indications point to higher prices than last year on choice red roses and carnations. The cold, stormy weather of the past two weeks has retarded the crops and it is feared in consequence the quantity of poor flowers will be large. The consensus of opinion is that fancy American Beauties will bring $12 to $15 a dozen, with the lower grades in proportion, and that all will be rather scarce; that Liberties will bring about the same price as last year, with a fair supply in sight; that good Maids and Brides will be scarce at 20 cents, a few higher, but the bulk of the stock will range from $15 down; that good red carnations will be extremely scarce; that Enchantress and other fancies will be in fair supply at $10 to $12.50, the ordinary grades, the standard varieties, being pretty plentiful at from $3 to $4, the gap between these prices being filled by the select sorts at from $6 to $8.

Poinsettias will be abundant and very fine. Valley will be in splendid quality and so plentiful that late orders on Saturday and Sunday are pretty sure to be filled. Chrysanthemums, except a few odd lots, are over. Violets will be in moderate supply, with the doubles at $1.50 to $2, singles at $1 or more. Orchids, except cypripediums, will be scarce and greens of all sorts plentiful.

The Plant Trade.

Large wholesale firms which make a specialty of foliage and flowering plants for Christmas report a satisfactory business for the holidays. The Henry A. Dreer Co. said this week that their business, chiefly in palms and ferns and other decorative plants, was about equal to last year, with orders coming in nicely. Charles D. Ball's view of the situation was very much the same, while Joseph Heacock's business in kentias was larger this month than his palm business any previous December. Robert Craig & Son report a good demand for Gloire de Lorraine, cyclamens, azaleas, ferns and single plants of poinsettias, Dracæna terminalis, Bougainvillea Sanderiana, also some very nice combinations of plants of dracænas and ferns and poinsettias, pretty nearly cleaning up on everything. Wm. K. Harris experienced an excellent demand for his very choice collection of holiday plants, which included Ponderosa lemons very well colored, buttercup primroses in from 4-inch pots to 12-inch pans, gardenias and an assortment of almost every foliage plant, Aucuba Japonica, etc. John & W. H. Westcott include among their Christmas specialties some very handsome Gloire de Lorraine.

Various Notes.

Bayersdorfer & Co. are very busy, reporting splendid demand for their advanced ideas in holiday novelties.

M. Rice & Co. have shipped immense quantities of Christmas supplies and say that business is exceptionally good.

J. Stern & Co. have their windows filled with some very well done artificial plants, chiefly caladiums. Caladium argyrites look particularly natural.

Alphonse Pericat was arrested by his former employer, George B. Wilson, on the charge of stealing some pipe and the book containing notes of his orchid experiments. The defendant stated that he had not taken any pipe and that the book was his private property. He had offered the plaintiff a copy. The defendant was released.

W. A. Leonard, whose Brides and Maids were planted as late as September and who has in consequence had but few good roses till now, is sending some very choice blooms to S. S. Pennock.

Fred Ehret went out on Monday to Doylestown to see John F. Andre. He reports Mr. Andre's Brides and Maids as second to none coming into this market, his place being in very fine shape.

Wm. J. Muth reports that the Cut Flower Co. has received a large shipment of green and bronze galax and green and bronze leucothœ leaves. The company anticipates a good stock of cut flowers for the Christmas orders.

Edward Reid is developing a good trade for his Hudson river Marie Louise violets.

A. J. Pennock is sending his brother some special valley which is over a foot in length.

The pretty new Mergenthaler store and conservatory in Germantown is now in active operation.

The Henry F. Michell Co. is doing a good business in greens for Christmas.

Berger Brothers have received a good shipment of galax leaves. They are making a specialty this week of winterberry for church decoration.

B. Gibbs states that E. Bernheimer is receiving some giant daisies and Paper White narcissi.

Last Friday Wm. J. Baker received what are thought to be the first single daffodils of the season.

The Strafford Flower Farm is cutting great quantities of choice carnations this week, among them a good proportion of crimsons and scarlets.

Hope you'll have a splendid Christmas.

PHIL.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The week opened with little doing in the line of city trade, but with a first-class country demand. The situation Monday and Tuesday might be summed up by saying that there was little stock in the market but sufficient for requirements. The Christmas orders from out of town were coming in heavily Monday and Tuesday and at this writing the prospects are for a record-breaking Christmas business. A week or ten days ago the city buyers all wanted to leave orders for Christmas stock, but prices deterred them. As one leading retailer expressed it, "You couldn't so much as look at a wholesale man. If you broached the matter of leaving a Christmas order with him he waved you away as though he hadn't any use for business." But the out of town buyers have not been deterred by high prices and now the city people are assuring themselves of a certain proportion of their needs. Many of them are of the opinion, however, that Saturday afternoon will see the market weaker than at any other time this week and are taking their chances.

It is true that prospects are for larger supplies of stock than have heretofore been anticipated but it is an absolute certainty that the good material will be far short of the requirements. There are likely to be enough flowers of intermediate grades to supply all orders on which this character of material can be used and it would not be at all surprising if some of the large quantities of low grade material which are sure to be sent in toward the latter part of the week fail to find a satisfactory market. While prices on strictly first-class material will be as high as ever before in this market, the average will be nothing to brag about because of the quantity of poor stock.

Medium length Beauties are likely to be the greatest shortage, red carnations next, followed by Liberty roses. Maids are likely to about fit the demand, with plenty of Brides and plenty of white carnations and bulbous stock, although callas and Harrisii will be hard to find if the supplies received early in the week are any indication. Good violets will do well but Campbell is not wanted.

A Florists' Building.

The wholesale florists in Chicago occupy much more expensive quarters than are really required and many of them would like additional room but can not get it, even by paying a good price without moving out of the present center, which they hesitate to do. At one time the Kennicott Bros. Co. thought of going around on Lake street, where there were some good stores then offered at bargain prices, but their landlord returned to reason before they closed the deal. Had they gone the whole market might by now have shifted and it is likely to do so at any time if one or two break away, although it must in justice be said that the present location is an ideal one from the buyers' point of view. Last spring there was talk of getting someone, possibly Peter Reinberg, or to organize a stock company, to put up an ideal building exclusively for florists' use, and get all the wholesalers into it. But we were not quite ready for this and the idea died "abornin'." But something in the line of a definite proposition is likely to be offered soon by parties who have what they think is a suitable building.

Various Notes.

E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., says that their orders for Christmas are coming from greater distances than ever before in the history of the house. They have many shipments going out to Oklahoma and the southwest and some as far into the northwest as Idaho. G. H. Pieser is again at his desk after ten days in the hospital.

The Flower Growers' Market now has two telephones, one for incoming and one for out-going calls.

The Benthey-Coatsworth Co. is now handling large supplies of Hudson River violets of first-class quality. Their Maids are great.

E. A. Kanst has been granted a patent on his dormant sod and the process for making same.

M. F. Kyle, who for some years has been in charge of the Dunkley Floral Co. greenhouses at Kalamazoo, has retired from active service and is making his home with his son. Will Kyle, of the Kennicott Bros. Co., of this city.

Two years ago Peter Reinberg did more business with Liberty than any other rose on his place. Last year his success was not so good, but this year it promises to be duplicated. His crop struck Christmas just right.

The George Wittbold Co. has bought 300 boxes of glass, intending to add two large houses to the five which now constitute their range at Edgebrook. The work will be begun in the early spring.

George Wienhoeber is in the hospital with stomach trouble, sentenced to six weeks of absolute rest and a ration of five quarts of milk each day.

The F. Blondeel Co. has a fine lot of Boston ferns at its stand in the market.

Robert Northam, formerly with M. Winandy, has started a retail place for himself on the west side.

The E. F. Winterson Co. has had some very fine holly this week.

L. Coatsworth returned last Saturday from a week's trip to New York. He reports everybody in that market wearing an air of prosperity.

J. A. Budlong is cutting very fine Meteor but is thinking of reducing his planting next year to make more room for Chatenay. He is doing finely with carnations.

Wietor Bros. have a big cut of Red Bradt, which is hard to beat as a Christmas flower.

E. C. Amling thinks the shortage of Beauties has been overestimated. He says his growers have sent him very encouraging reports the past week.

Visitors: E. J. Fancourt, representing S. S. Pennock, Philadelphia; F. G. Borden, Milton, Wis.

OMAHA, NEB.—Everything points toward a very successful holiday trade this year. The weather conditions have been perfect thus far, with a good cut of roses and carnations in view. There will probably be a shortage in blooming plants, as few azaleas are in evidence as yet. Plants selling best to date are Begonia Gloire de Lorraine and Boston ferns. Palms seem to be out of the running.

WE think the REVIEW our best publication.—W. J. MILLER & SON.

BOSTON.

The Market.

The customary holding back of supplies prior to Christmas was very noticeable the past week. Especially true was this with earnations, which were in quite short supply and many more could have been sold. It is hoped that too much of the pickling process will not be carried out, or results will be as usual, disastrous in some lines. Present indications point to an excellent Christmas trade, with none too much stock to go around unless too much holding back is done.

Prices on Beauties show a hardening tendency, $60 per hundred being paid for first-class stock at the wholesale houses on December 17. At the Park street market $40 was obtained for 20 to 24-inch stems. Liberty and Chatenay are selling remarkably well. Some extra select Brides and Bridesmaids have brought $16. Carnations are not much changed. The best stock sells at $4 to $4.50, a few bringing $5. Violets have been quite scarce. Good Princess of Wales brought $1.50, ordinary stock $1. Paper Whites and Roman hyacinths are, as usual, about the only druggy things on the market. Trumpet Major narcissus has appeared, grown by Mann Bros., Randolph. These sold at 75 cents per bunch. Lilium Harrisii is coming in more plentifully. Very few growers are sending cut poinsettias. At the new market $50 per hundred has been secured for extra fine braets. Mignonette is selling much better, going as high as $10. Very little of the Christmas greens are seen in the market, these being handled mainly by the large commission houses and specialists.

Welch Bros.

One of the busiest places in Boston of late has been Welch Bros.' emporium on Province street. The firm does an immense shipping trade in cut flowers, Christmas greens and sundries and carries a high class of goods. The holly and mistletoe handled this year is extra well berried. In greens P. Welch stated that the demand for box was extra large. He expressed surprise that people had not caught on to this fine evergreen earlier, as nothing is finer for wreaths and festooning. Trade has been very satisfactory up to date and will exceed previous years' records.

WHITE LAWSON

Which we introduced last season has given great satisfaction, and has proved to be

THE FINEST WHITE CARNATION EVER SENT OUT

Remember that we are headquarters for it. The demand will undoubtedly exceed the supply this season, and in order to secure early delivery, no time should be lost in placing order. We are now booking orders for early January delivery. Orders will be filled strictly in rotation, as received, so the earlier orders are booked, the earlier deliveries can be made. We can supply

First-class strong rooted cuttings, $7.00 per 100; $60.00 per 1000.

Also all the other novelties of the season, FIANCEE, CARDINAL, FRED BURKI, etc.

Also the cream of the older sorts, Mrs. M. A. Patten, Daheim, Enchantress, Flamingo, Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson, etc.

In cut flowers Welch Bros. are noted for their roses, especially American Beauties. The finest of these are coming from Carl Jurgens, Newport, R. I. Hundreds just received carried three to four foot stems. Some remarkably fine Queen of Edgely were also noted. Mr. Welch says buyers are now eager to snap up this flower. Mme. Abel Chatenay, Brides, Maids, Golden Gates and Liberties were also extra good, those from S. J. Reuter, Westerly, R. I., and Robert McGorum, Natick, Mass., being among the best. F. A. Blake, Rochdale, Mass., is shipping very fine Prosperity carnations, also some good seedlings. Mr. Welch stated that he had written his shippers, above all things, not to try the pickling process on Enchantress, as it goes to sleep as soon as taken from the ice box. Violets, orchids, poinsettias, lilies and all other choice seasonable flowers are carried in quantity by this enterprising firm.

Various Notes.

T. J. Grey has returned from a visit to New York, incidentally calling on some of the gardening acquaintances on the Hudson.

Worcester Conservatories are shipping very fine Beauties to the Park street market. Budlong, at Providence, is forwarding gilt-edged stock of Brides and Maids.

W. E. Doyle is displaying some beautifully berried English hollies and aucubas in pots and tubs at his Beacon and Boylston street stores.

E. McMulkin had a very pretty red window the past week. Red roses and carnations with ardisias, solanums, aucubas and other berried stock made a pleasing arrangement.

Mrs. F. J. Lake, wife of the well known Wellesley florist, is quite seriously ill, but was reported a little more comfortable this week.

B. F. Washington, of North Stoughton, had the misfortune to have his boiler burst on the evening of December 16, when we had a temperature 5 degrees below zero. Use of lamps, oil stoves and other improvised heaters kept the temperature up to about 32 degrees but much stock was frozen. Mr. Washington has been bringing in some nice stock to the new market. We trust he will soon recover from this loss.

John Streiferd & Sons, of Weymouth, are shipping a nice lot of Cypripedium insigne and white violets to the new market.

The plant committee of the Horticultural Society visited W. B. Arnold at the Rockland Greenhouses on December 13, to view his house of Variegated Lawson and were surprised and delighted at the superb lot of plants Mr. Arnold showed them. The plants were simply a sheet of bloom and no supports were necessary, stems long and strong and not a burst caylx to be seen. This sport has a delightful fragrance and seems to be the best striped carnation in sight. The committee were entertained at lunch by Mr. Arnold and spent a very pleasant afternoon.

A recent call at the greenhouses of Mount Hope cemetery, which is in charge of James Morton, showed that the recent additions make the greenhouses among the finest in this section. While bedding stock is principally handled, some other interesting plants were noted. A batch of finely grown Dendrobium nobile will soon be in bloom and promises a wealth of flowers. A basket of Lælia anceps carrying fourteen spikes denoted very good culture.

Wax Bros. are showing some very fine Enchantress and Flamingo carnations grown by G. E. Buxton.

Backer & Co. and Geo. E. Buxton are shipping superb Enchantress carnations to the Park street market.

Peter Fisher is sending some magnificent blooms of his new white seedling carnation to Galvin.

Houghton & Clark are showing some extra well flowered Erica hymalis.

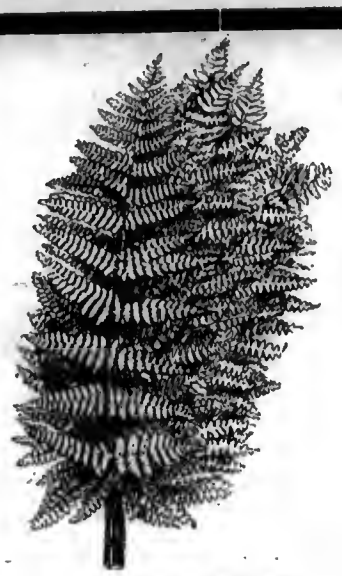
Part 1 of the "Transactions of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society for 1904" has just been mailed to the members. It is a book of over 200 pages and includes full reports of all lectures and discussions during the early part of 1904. In addition there is an exhaustive and excellent article on peony culture by R. T. Jackson, also a long and interesting article on John Richardson, his house and garden, by the same gentleman. These articles should be in the hands of every peony lover. To add to their interest they are beautifully illustrated.

The weather has remained steadily cold during the present month. About a foot of snow fell on December 18. A serious deficiency of water is reported from many sections of New England, springs being almost dry and streams very low.

In point of attendance and interesting exhibits the Gardeners' and Florists' Club meeting of December 20 was probably the best ever held. A full report must be held over until our next issue. An account of the field day at Framingham will be found elsewhere in this issue.

In notes in last issue mentioning prizes to be offered by new market, the word "included" should read "excluded" in regard to the red rose class.

W. N. Craig.



SOW BUGS.

I will give you my way to get rid of sow bugs in greenhouses. My houses were so badly infested with them that they destroyed all blooms they could reach. By holding a light under the bench at night you could see many of them running in every direction. I took twenty-five pounds of bran and shorts mixed, one pound of London purple and five pounds of soft sugar and mixed all thoroughly together and then sprinkled it along the edges of benches, under the benches and near all the posts and I can tell you it did the work in one night. Now there is not one to be seen at all. This amount will be enough for four houses 100 feet long all winter, as it takes very little of it to do the work.

Pres., C. N. Page, Des Moines, Ia; First Vice-Pres., L. L. May, St. Paul; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 23rd annual meeting will be held on the St. Lawrence, June, 1905.

WHO said onion seed was scarce?

THESE are strenuous days for the belated catalogue builders.

TWO new peas are to be introduced by Leonard Seed Co. the coming spring.

BOTH red clover and crimson clover are very firm in price, owing to stocks under the normal.

FRANK W. MAAS has become secretary and manager of the Planters' Seed Co., Springfield, Mo.

H. Nungesser & Co. are recommending Festuca pratensis, the meadow fescue, for more general use.

CROCUS were in good demand in Holland at the close of the shipping season, many sorts being scarce.

MARTIN J. SUTTON, senior of the well known firm of seedsmen, Sutton & Sons, is now mayor of Reading, England.

ROGERS BROS., of Chaumont, N. Y., have distributed to the trade a handsome framed picture of their new pole bean, Golden Carmine.

W. W. JOHNSON & SON, Boston, England, offer the new Emerald Isle kale, spoken highly of by those who have seen it growing at their trial grounds.

ALREADY Wardwell's kidney wax beans bring $10 per bushel, Longfellow's are taken at $8, Stringless Green Pod and Valentine easily bring $6. These are startling prices so early in the season.

IT looks as though the trade must switch back to old-fashioned varieties of beans this season. Mohawks, Six Weeks, Best of All, Currie's Wax, Violet and Scarlet Flageolet are not yet among the scarce varieties.

THE loss occasioned by fire at Oceana, Cal., which destroyed the warehouse of the Routzahn Seed Co., will hit some of the seed houses hard as the bean stocks burned up are among the most important kinds. The government will also be loser of some rare varieties of pole beans, as it is understood that it had a contract for these with the Routzahn Co.

ROUTZAHN SEED LOSS.

A telegram from the Routzahn Seed Co., dated Oceana, Cal., December 16, said:

Our seed house burned last night; all tomato except Crimson Cushion and Ponderosa, with all other surplus seeds, a total loss.

This has since been supplemented with information that the loss on beans includes twenty tons Kentucky Wonder, twenty-five tons Lazy Wife, three tons Cut Short, six tons Horticultural, five tons Southern Prolific, four tons White Creaseback, two tons Scarlet Runner and four tons Black Wax.

WE esteem the REVIEW very highly for its Seed Trade News.—BINGHAMTON SEED CO., Binghamton, N. Y.

SEA WEED AS MANURE.

In the Channel Islands seaweed is regularly gathered in large quantities and spread over the potato fields, and the farmers there find it a most valuable manure. It is either scattered on the ground fresh from the sea or burnt in kilns, and the ash used instead of the raw material. At the seaside in this country seaweed is often brought up from the beach in carts and spread over the land, with very good result as regards the corn, but no effort has hitherto been made to burn it in a kiln. Surely this could be done without much difficulty and with great advantage to the public, for in this form iodine manure could be put upon the market for the use of gardeners. Of course, the object of burning the seaweed is to get rid of the smell, and to enable it to be kept in a portable form so it could be put up in barrels for wholesale use and in tins for selling in small quantities. There are many places along the coast where the industry could be started—anywhere, in fact, where seaweed is plentiful and the expense of tinning would not be great. We should thus gain an excellent fertilizer, which is, moreover, said to be particularly good for roses.—Gardeners' Chronicle.

TABLE DECORATIONS.

No hard and fast rules can be laid down for table decorations, so much depends upon the size of table, and what it contains; sometimes it may be so crowded that little room is left for other decoration. It sometimes happens that ornaments, lamps, etc., are so arranged that it is difficult to make a satisfactory decoration. Whatever may be used, let it be in as light and graceful manner as possible. Tracings are better, as a rule, in curves and scrolls, although straight lines are sometimes admissible by way of a change. It is difficult to say how a table should be decorated; in any case, very much depends upon the taste of the decorator. It is surprising what different designs and ideas present themselves to one who has had a little experience of this kind of work.

A table may frequently be made to look very nice in a very short time, and with little material. It is scarcely necessary to say that leaves and fruits cannot be so lightly arranged, or made to look as graceful, as more choice flowers and foliage. Short sprays of common bramble, used in the green state, are very suitable for tracings, especially on a large table. Small sprays of the common box also look well. Ivy is a general favorite, and may be used for this purpose. It is best procured from old trees, where it can be generally found with small, wavy sprays and small leaves. It can also be used when in fruit. The branchlets of that graceful conifer, Retinospora filifera, I have sometimes used for tracing, and it looks very well. In using this green material for decorating, flowers of some kind, such as chrysanthemums, should be set up in vases of suitable sizes.—Gardeners' Magazine.

the most unique and spectacular Christmas display ever seen in Boston or vicinity. Not an indoor show is it, but one outdoors, where it is entirely appropriate to the season. On the sloping roof of his store on Broadway, near Marshall street, are three large reindeer galloping up the steep incline, and drawing a sleigh in which sits Santa Claus loaded down with Christmas presents. At night the whole display is illuminated with sixty-four red and white incandescent lamps. The animals are real deer, brought from Canada and stuffed. The sleigh is an ancient affair, which Mr. Howard secured some time ago in Woburn. For Santa Claus he has rigged up an effigy that might easily be taken for one of the prominent residents of the vicinity, so good is the likeness in size and figure. Eight small incandescent bulbs are used on each deer's head, besides two for the eyes. Sleighbells of electric lights encircle their bodies, and enough other bulbs are used to give a beautiful setting to the spectacle when seen at night. Sprinkled with snow, old Santa and his steeds make a particularly effective appearance.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

While trade is about the same as last year, the making ready for the holidays gives the retailers about all they can do. There is nothing much new among the stores; the same old wreaths made in the same old way, holly, mistletoe and wreathing. Green goods have been selling better than usual up to this time, probably because everything has been white with snow the last two weeks.

At the Stores.

The stores are looking very pretty, with their variety of palms, ferns, Proserpine tulips in pans, and poinsettias, which are used in boxes and pans.

Breitenstein & Flemm are using some very pretty Roman garlands, made of red immortelles and box-wood, which are very effective.

L. I. Neff has one red window, immortelle bells, pans of Proserpine tulips and poinsettias, which holds the crowd.

A. W. Smith has a great show of baskets of artificial fruit, immortelle and artificial wreaths and baskets, which are quite out of the ordinary.

Mrs. E. A. Williams' store is a bower of beauty. While there is nothing really new, still her arrangement of plants, bells, greens, etc., makes it so attractive one almost feels they are something new. The window is most artistically arranged with baskets and hampers of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, tied with pink ribbons. She certainly keeps the crowd on her sidewalk.

Various Notes.

Lloyd Swarthout, of Washington, Pa., has disposed of his stock and leased his houses and store to Jos. Seaman & Co., who will continue the business. Mr. Swarthout has built up a large business and leaves it to enter another line. The trade wish him success wherever he may go.

Patrick Maier, who is the bulb grower of this section, will have Proserpine tulips in pans, which are in fine shape for Christmas.

B. L. Elliott is thinking of disposing of his greenhouses and entering actively into another business in which he is interested.

The boys in the retail stores are all writing with Pittsburg Cut Flower Company's pencils; if you didn't get yours, you should call them up. This was written with one.

Great carloads of Christmas trees are being handled by the commission men in the produce yards as well as holly, both in case and wreaths.

A. W. Smith has a grand lot of Harrisii and poinsettias just in shape for the holidays.

Carnations, which were out of sight in price Saturday and Monday, took an awful tumble before the middle of last week.

Hoo-Hoo.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., E. W. Kirkpatrick, McKinney, Tex.; Vice-Pres., C. L. Watrous, Des Moines; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 29th annual convention will be held at West Baden, Ind., June, 1905.

THE first of the season's importation of Manetti stocks have arrived.

C. H. COGSWELL, for many years in the nursery business at Virden, Ill., will shortly retire.

THE Maine Agricultural Experiment Station, Orono, Me., has just published a valuable bulletin on the brown-tail and other moths, with methods of control.

THE principal nurseries have pretty good quantities of stock in their storage houses but much of it is smaller than they would like, because of a season of only moderate growth following a very poor season indeed.

M. CRAWFORD, Cuyahoga Falls, O., has issued a pamphlet on the "Pedigree Question," as applied to strawberries, which he will send free to any interested parties who apply for it.

THE executive committee of the American Association of Park Superintendents will meet at Springfield, Mass., January 18. The principal business will be the selection of a city for the annual convention. Buffalo, Niagara Falls and Rochester are candidates.

THE horticultural press in England is greatly exercised by the fact that great quantities of American apples are arriving at Liverpool and finding a market, although England had herself a very heavy crop in 1904 and much of the fruit fails to find a profitable market.

J. W. DUNCAN, secretary of the American Association of Park Superintendents, formerly the Association of New England Park Superintendents, calls attention to the fact that the periodical bulletins of his organization are entirely distinct from "Items of Park News" of the Park Department of the American Civic Association.

ST. LOUIS PARKS.

We are indebted to Andrew Meyer, Jr., general superintendent of parks, St. Louis, for the handsomest volume of park reports which has ever come to this office. It covers the operations of the St. Louis park department for 1903-1904, is beautifully printed, superbly illustrated and bound in flexible leather covers. The half-tones are splendidly illustrative of the commendable condition into which Mr. Meyer has brought the pleasure grounds under his care and the volume is one calculated to arouse the envy of every park man into whose hands a copy falls.

WHO'S YOUR COAL MAN.

If you are buying your coal by the carload from some jobber or mine outside your own town we should like to have you send the REVIEW the name and address, or when you write the coal man tell him that he ought to get acquainted with the REVIEW as a means of increasing his business among florists. We can often help both our reader and the dealer; for instance, we have a letter from a florist near Philadelphia who is burning small stove coal, anthracite, and paying $6.75 per ton to his local coal dealer; naturally he is in the market for a car. We should be glad to give his name to a dealer whom we know to be supplying this grade of coal satisfactorily to others in the trade.

AURORA, ILL.—The Aurora Greenhouse Co. has completed and stocked a range of 5,000 feet of glass and expects to double this next summer. J. H. Newhall is the manager and J. H. Brick, formerly with the Storrs & Harrison Co., the florist.

ONARGA, ILL.—Ludvig Mosback has sold his plant at South Chicago, Ill., to John Westere and has concentrated his business in the range of five houses, each 25x100 feet, built here last season, which will be largely added to in the spring. He reports a very active demand this fall, particularly for pansy plants, which are wanted in the south.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The busiest days of the year are before the florists this week and already big orders have been placed for Christmas for cut flowers, blooming plants and greens of all kinds. The florists throughout the city have handsomely decorated windows and we hear nothing but good reports as to the business in general. The wretched weather of the past week interfered considerably with transient trade. There seems to be enough demand to use up the best stock at good prices, so the cut flower trade of the past week was generally satisfactory, with plenty of funeral work, and no oversupply of anything except second grade roses.

The supply of Beauties for this market is limited and all fancy stock sold at good figures. Brides and Maids are coming in quite abundantly. Meteor, Liberty, Golden Gate and Carnot are not so many and sell well. Of carnations there is a fair crop for present demands, with good prospects for a big supply for Christmas. Fancy stock will be high this week. Extra fancy will go as high as $8 to $10 per hundred, to be graded down to $4 for common. California violets they say are going to be scarce and way up in price, as high as $3. In bulbous stock there will be plenty of everything, such as Romans, Paper Whites and lily of the valley. Callas and Harrisii will be scarce. Prices on this stock will not advance any.

Fine stevia is in the market and is selling well. Green stock is also plentiful. Sales of holiday greens are more than satisfactory. Mistletoe is coming in fine this year. The demand for holly is ahead of all previous years. Wreathing is also in big demand for store front decorations, which are more numerous than usual this year. Blooming plants for Christmas are in fine condition. The most salable are cyclamens, azaleas, small orange trees and poinsettias. The latter give just the right color for the prevailing holiday fancy and meet with ready sale.

Various Notes.

Last week, Wednesday, Edward Buechel, manager of the Riessen Floral Co., met with a painful accident, breaking his leg by slipping on the icy sidewalk. This leaves the company in a bad way for the busy week. From last reports Mr. Buechel was resting easy at his home.

C. Young & Sons Co. report another big shipment of orchids to China. They also had the decoration for the big imperial ball the past week and have a big busy week before them.

The committee appointed to examine Mr. Kessler's plans for the restoration of Forest park, of which Wm. Trelease is secretary, met Friday and approved the plans. The mayor and the exposition officials were so informed. Mr. Kessler's successful treatment of the landscape features of the exposition warranted this action and his ability to properly carry out the details of the plans of restoration adopted by the committee. Work will begin early in the spring.

John Steidel, out in the country, is sending some extra fancy carnations and violets to Fred C. Weber.

W. J. Pilcher, of Kirkwood, will be in line with extra fine California violets for Christmas.

J. W. Dunford is sending F. M. Ellis some extra good carnations and roses, which will be in demand this week.

A. Berdan, of Kirkwood, will have an extra supply of lily of the valley and other bulbous stock for the holidays.

George Waldbart reports an extra good trade the past week, including large designs in funeral work.

Mrs. M. M. Ayers' place is very attractive for the holiday trade. A large number of extra fine blooming plants are seen.

The Ellison Floral Co., Miss Newman, Fred Weber, Kalisch and Miller are making fine holiday shows.

The bowlers say that after the busy season the club will again have its weekly rolls at the Palace alleys. Kuehn, Ellison, Beyer and Beneke are doing quite well in the city leagues. J. J. B.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Cloudy weather the past week has somewhat injured the prospects for a large holiday cut of roses or carnations. Cut blooms were very scarce on the market the past week and as Christmas draws near are getting scarcer, prices are going up and the demand is for first-class stock. Retail stores are rushed with business and everyone is looking forward to what promises to be the largest business done in the history of the city. Christmas greens are on the market in abundance. There is enough lycopodium, but good prices are received. Holly averages unsatisfactorily, only a very small quantity coming in that can be called first-class. Cyclamens, azaleas, poinsettias, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine and primroses are looking fine and prices are a little in advance of last year.

Various Notes.

A trip through the retail district shows some fine window decorations, among the best being those of Samuel Murray, W. L. Rock, Miss M. Dalley and Miss J. E. Murray.

Miss Murray had some fine wedding decorations last week and will have a large one this week at the Central Presbyterian church. Miss Murray also reports an unusually large demand for Christmas decorations.

W. L. Rock has had numerous decorations for receptions and weddings this week and reports fine indications for business during the holidays.

Mr. Freudenthal, of the Union Depot Floral Co., has leased new quarters at Twelfth and Walnut streets to which he will remove January 1.

The largest decoration in the past year was the one last Saturday evening in the First Christian church. The occasion was the wedding of Ensign Hayne Ellis, of the Battleship Kentucky, to Miss Sallie Long of this city. The work was done by the W. H. Humfeld Floral Co. The color scheme was in yellow and white, the ship colors. Southern smilax, palms and roses were used. Jas. Biggam had charge of the work.

Arthur Newell is doing an immense business these days and is thoroughly satisfied.

Miss Dalley has some of the finest Brides and Kaiserins in the city. She buys the entire output of Al. Broman, of Independence, and is doing a fine trade in evergreens.

A new establishment has been opened in the Masonic building, to be known as the Star Floral Co., with Miss F. M. Shaeffer as manager. The new company has only temporary quarters at present, but expects to have permanent quarters by the first of the year.

The Alpha Floral Co. has an extra force employed making wreaths and roping and reports trade as fine.

NARCISSUS.

OCEANIC, N. J.

At the regular meeting of the Monmouth County Horticultural Society, December 16, the following officers were elected: President, Geo. H. Hale; vice-president, A. G. Williams; secretary, H. A. Kettel; financial secretary, Geo. R. Kuhn; treasurer, W. W. Kennedy. The society procured $75 worth of vases to be used at the exhibitions. Geo. R. Kuhn showed some excellent Marie Louise, Princess of Wales and California violets. Geo. H. Hale had some exceptionally fine hyacinths on exhibition and also some excellent Adiantum Farleyense. The judges of the evening were W. W. Kennedy and A. G. Williams. President Hale's portrait appears elsewhere in this issue.

B.

TERRE HAUTE, IND.

George H. Hunt, of the Hunt Floral Co., in the Superior Court, December 13, brought suit for an injunction against Alexander and Lizzie Dempsey. The Dempseys own property adjoining that of Hunt and according to the florist, they have permitted cattle and other live stock to drink, wade and wallow in a pond from which he secures his water supply for the greenhouse. A temporary restraining order was granted.

THE Pittsburg Cut Flower Co., Pittsburg, Pa., sends out a neat box containing three very good pencils stamped with its name.

PACIFIC COAST.

AID FOR HORTICULTURE.

Judge W. W. Morrow, one of the trustees of the Carnegie Institute at Washington, has been successful in having a considerable allotment of money made by that institution to Luther Burbank, often spoken of as the California "wizard of horticulture," so that he may be enabled to carry on for a period of years his valuable experiments which have made both him and his neighborhood world famous. Mr. Burbank has at the present time several dozen entirely new creations in the field of floriculture, as well as several hybrid grasses that he will soon give to the public.

Mr. Burbank was for many years in the general nursery business at Santa Rosa and began his experiments in the breeding of plants as early as 1875. Although very successful in a commercial way, after some years Mr. Burbank gave up the business of growing and selling recognized varieties and devoted himself exclusively to the originating of new varieties of fruits, flowers, vegetables and grasses and his success has brought him world wide fame as the greatest of the present experimental horticulturists.

Mr. Burbank's main nursery is at Sebastopol, Cal., and consists of about ten acres. He has a branch place in Lyon's Valley, Lake county, where he has many thousands of bulbs and lilies, both native and acclimated, and from which he has crossed several widely differing varieties, with considerable success. One of the recent additions to the field of valuable plants is the thornless cactus. This plant, it is claimed, will eliminate many of the terrors of the Colorado and Mojave deserts, where it will grow luxuriantly. It can be used for food, both by man and beast.

Mr. Burbank is probably best known by his connection with ten varieties of Japanese plums, which he brought out in 1888, and which are now catalogued throughout the world. In 1893 appeared the giant prune, hybrid walnut and a new quince. These were followed by many other fruits, roses, cannas, hybridized native flowers, the Shasta daisy and Mr. Burbank says he has many more to come which will be given to the public, some of them in the very near future. G.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

It is now within a few days of Christmas and I have never seen such an abundance of flowers at this time of the year, nor have we ever had such a continued spell of warm, bright weather. We have only had about half a dozen nights cold enough to show frost, and heliotropes, fuchsias and other soft stuff are still in full bloom out in the open ground. As a consequence flowers of all kinds are very plentiful and can be had at almost any price. The demand is only fair for the general varieties, although there has been considerable call for white roses and carnations, owing to several spurts in the line of funeral work. Mums are plentiful, both those grown indoors and out and from present indications there will be plenty until after the holidays. All the growers are wishing for a few cold nights to shorten the supply of outdoor stock and stiffen prices, but as I write the prospects are for a continuance of warm weather.

Various Notes.

The mistake of E. C. Thurber, a dealer in greenhouse glass, cost him $299.45, according to a judgment rendered this week by Judge Hall. Through a mistake in calculation Thurber contracted to sell glass to P. McDonell, the well known carnation grower, of Alden, at $1.45 per box. According to the market price he should have charged $2.87 a box. He refused to keep to the contract and McDonell then purchased 300 boxes of glass from another firm at $3 a box. Thurber brought suit against McDonell to reform the contract, but judgment was rendered against him. On the cross complaint McDonell was given judgment for the difference between the price he paid for the glass and the price at which Thurber agreed to furnish it.

A visit to the greenhouses of H. Potet, on Courtland avenue and San Bruno road, shows that the cut of roses for Christmas will be an extra large one. The stock is in good shape throughout and everything shows the results from up-to-date forcing.

James Nivens, late of the Thermal Vale Nursery, has opened a plant depot on San Pablo avenue, Oakland.

H. M. Sanborn, of Oakland, has built a large addition to his Fourteenth street store to accommodate his increased business.

The California State Floral Society held a very enthusiastic meeting at Central hall, December 9. Professor Emory E. Smith was in charge. Ralph E. Smith of the Horticultural Experiment Station at Berkeley, gave an instructive address on "Diseases Affecting Flowering Plants."

P. C. Meyer, of Burlingame, is contemplating an addition of several more houses to his plant during the coming season. G.

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The Pacific Coast Horticultural Society of San Francisco held its complimentary chrysanthemum exhibition recently at Mission Opera Hall. Menlo Park and Burlingame growers easily carried off the honors of the show and incidentally the principal premiums offered. Mr. Meyer, of Menlo, received first prize for best twenty-four blooms, but was so closely pressed by Wm. Kettlewell, of San Mateo, that a special prize was recommended by the judges for the latter. Wm. Eldred, of Burlingame, took the premium for best outdoor grown bloom with an immense Timothy Eaton. A splendid vase of Wm. Duckham, shown by Mr. Meyer, attracted much attention. L. Fenton showed a vase of very promising seedling carnations, for which he received the society's certificate of merit.

A pleasing incident was the presentation by the society of a handsome watch charm to the retiring president, H. Plath, who has served the society in the chair in such a satisfactory manner that his retirement is regretted by all. The charm is of gold and on the inverse side a golden poppy (eschscholtzia) is enameled. The presentation address was delivered in an able manner by Vice-President Wm. Eldred, and the response was appropriate and in the best vein of the pleased recipient. During the evening the entertainment committee served refreshments with a liberal hand, while in an adjoining hall the society's orchestra discoursed dance music for the members and their many friends.

On the evening of November 19 Prof. Schneider, the eminent scientific botanist of the State University, at Berkeley, delivered a lecture before this society on hybridization. The subject was treated from a scientific standpoint and the lecturer was given the closest attention.

During the discussion which followed Prof. Schneider answered at length many questions propounded by the members.

The newly elected officers are: President, Thomas A. Munro; vice-president, Wm. Eldred; secretary, Thos. F. Taylor; financial secretary, J. Atkinson; treasurer, Fred Cleis; librarian, A. Tymciou; trustees, W. A. Krabbenhaft, J. W. Bagge, Wm. Munro. T. T.

MILLDALE, CONN.—David Andrews has bought the interest of William Fischer in the green house plant and business of Fischer & Andrews.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—B. G. Lambros states that he has bought the interest of Peter N. Kapsalis in the florists' business which has been conducted as Kapsalis & Lambros. Mr. Kapsalis has left town.

CONNELLSVILLE, PA.—It is stated that the new company in which Peter Demas and local growers are interested has secured a tract of twenty-seven acres of land and that bids are being asked for the erection of twenty-five greenhouses, each 20x200.

MILTON, WIS.

This is the center of the celebrated Wisconsin tobacco district, whence comes a large part of the country's supply of smoke and an even larger part of the tobacco stems used for fumigating greenhouses. F. G. Borden is one of the largest dealers in leaf tobacco and in stripping it he accumulates an immense quantity of stems. He has heretofore found an outlet for these by selling in bulk in carload lots to the big growers near Chicago, but he has recently so increased his output that he has to bale the stems for shipment in smaller quantities and to greater distances. He proposes, also, to shortly put in some grinding machines and go into the manufacture of tobacco dust in a large way.

OTTAWA, ILL.

W. N. Brothers is in charge of the estate of the late Fred J. King, whose death, December 6, was wholly unexpected. Mr. King had suffered with lung trouble for several years and had several times been confined to his house, having been worse than usual this fall, but the fatal termination was not thought so near. He had a nice business and was making steady progress in it until ill health caused a slackening of his efforts. He was a member of the S. A. F., was widely known and universally well liked. Mrs. King survives.

RED SPORT (Of Maceo.)

This new "Bread and Butter" commercial brilliant "Crane" Red Carnation, now in its fourth year, has the hardy constitution of General Maceo, with a stronger heavier growth, longer and stiffer stem and a larger flower. Growing under the same conditions and in the same house with Flamingo and Estelle it has produced four times as many blooms as the former and twice as many blooms as the latter. The color is as good as Estelle and the bloom brings as much as does Estelle at its best. Every flower is of a uniform brilliant red, perfectly double with an ideal calyx, in fact we never saw a split one.

Red Sport is perfectly healthy, an easy variety to grow, an early and continuous bloomer, throwing its heaviest cuts around the Christmas holidays and during the Winter months when red is in demand. Red Sport will keep longer and travel farther than any other red carnation, and will prove a bonanza to the grower who does a shipping business. If the scarcity of reds in the market that now exists continues Red Sport will pay better to the square foot of bench than any other variety of any color to date. Every florist who has seen Red Sport growing has placed an order for rooted cuttings, which tells the tale. All our stock is sold up to January 25th. Orders filled in strict rotation from that date on. Price, 12 for $1.50, 25 for $2.50, 50 for $4.00 all post paid. $6.00 per 100, $50.00 per 1000, by express. We guarantee all cuttings to be well rooted and to arrive in good condition.

The QUEEN of all Variegated Carnations

VARIEGATED LAWSON

A Sport from Mrs. Thos. Lawson, awarded First-class Certificate of Merit by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society.

The fall shows proved the Lawson blood still ahead. You need this one. The best variegated on the market. Color, snow white, striped carmine, very distinct. Calyx much better than its parent. Very fragrant. Fine seller. Has very pleasing color effect. Free grower and bloomer, like its parent. House in full crop 10 weeks after planting. Cuttings guaranteed first-class. Prices—$2.00 per doz.: $10 00 per 100; $80.00 per 1000. 50 at 100 rate and 250 at 1000 rate. Delivery in rotation, beginning at once.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Trade still remains rather quiet and stock conditions are about the same as last week. There is a good deal of snow on the ground and the weather is pretty cold. With Christmas rapidly approaching, we are still very much in the dark as to how the supply of stock will be, but from the best information at hand there will be no surplus in any line, and many varieties will be far short of the demand, notably red roses and carnations. Some very fine poinsettias are to be had this year and they are selling well. They are the main flower in many window displays at present.

Various Notes.

A recent visit to Chas. Pommert's fish farm and greenhouses proved to be very interesting. He makes a specialty of growing smilax and asparagus for the wholesale trade and makes a very profitable business of it. But his mainstay is the breeding of gold fish. He raises the fish by the tens of thousands and finds a ready market for them. In the winter they are kept in tanks in the greenhouses. In a special tank Mr. Pommert showed some fine specimens of the Japanese fantail gold fish, which were very pretty, and very expensive as well. Mr. Pommert's plant is at Amelia, O., which is about twenty-five miles from Cincinnati.

In the decorations for L. B. Reakirt's fancy dress ball, Julius Baer had one of the most elaborate decorations ever put up in this city, as well as one of the most expensive. Long-stemmed Beauties, Liberty and Chatenay roses and white mums, with wild smilax, formed the principal material for the display. The daily papers spoke very highly of the effect produced.

Visitors: E. J. Fancourt, of Philadelphia, and Miss White, of Lexington, Ky. C. J. Ohmer.

LAPAGERIAS.

When these Chilian plants are properly grown they are some of the most beautiful greenhouse climbers in cultivation. But, unfortunately, there are many places where these fine decorative plants are merely struggling for existence. Broadly speaking, lapagerias are not at all difficult to grow, providing they have a suitable position and are well attended to. Few plants pay better for good treatment than the lapagerias, but they soon resent bad management. Some years ago I had charge of some plants that were in feeble health. They were growing in a back border of the greenhouse, on the ground level, near to an outside drain, consequently the little growth they made was very thin. So I had them lifted, and replanted in stone tanks, in a compost consisting of peat, a little turfy loam, charcoal, plenty of coarse sand, and bricks broken up to keep the soil open, giving them abundance of drainage, and covering it with blocks of peat to keep the soil from filtering down between the pieces of brick.

One of the principal causes of failing to grow lapagerias well is injudicious watering. If allowed to become dry at the roots a few times, the foliage will quickly be attacked with red spider and thrips. Care, therefore, should always be taken to keep them well supplied with water, especially during the growing season, which usually extends from the end of March until September. During this period they should be treated more as semi-aquatics, and in winter kept fairly moist. Syringing also is very beneficial to lapagerias when growing, as it tends to prevent insects attacking them. They require shading during the hottest part of the day, as the tender growths would soon be scorched at the points. L. alba is, I think, far more attractive than the various red and rose-colored forms, and is more expensive, because of the greater demand for plants. Its flowers can be utilized in making up bridal bouquets, wreaths, etc. Conseqently, they are in good demand, and realize remunerative prices.

Lapagerias should be grown quite cool, with plenty of ventilation at all times, especially during the summer months, leaving plenty of air on at nights. I have known the thermometer to go down to freezing point in winter without the least injurious effect on the plants. Slugs are very fond of the young growths, and will destroy them as they appear above the soil if not protected. An ordinary lamp glass is a capital thing to put over them, with a piece of cotton wadding at the top, until the growth is well advanced, when it can be taken off.

They are best trained to horizontal wires, keeping the young growths, if possible, from twining round their neighbors, as they are very difficult to unloose without more or less injury.

The three best lapagerias to grow are: L. alba, pure white, and useful for cutting; L. rosea, rose-color, makes a pleasing effect when planted with the former; L. profusa, an exceedingly floriferous variety, producing clusters of crimson flowers. They can be propagated from seeds, cuttings and layers, the latter being the best mode of propagation.—Gardeners' Magazine.

The Fumigating Kind Tobacco Powder

What a Few Say, All That Use It Say.

Mamaroneck, N. Y.
I tried the 5 lb. trial package of The Fumigating Kind Tobacco Powder in 2 of my houses one night and the following night I gave a 60-foot house a thorough smoking. Result, I would like you to send me 100 lbs. of the Fumigating Kind. W. H. DANIELS.

Maywood, Ill.
The Fumigating Kind Tobacco Powder is great stuff; it keeps one's houses clean as a sheet.
I can heartily recommend it.
ALBERT F. AMLING.

Jewett City, Conn.
I have used your Fumigating Kind Tobacco Powder for some 4 or 5 years and find it the best fumigator I know of. I use nothing else, as your kind is easy to handle and does the work thoroughly. A. A. YOUNG.

Tamaqua, Pa.
Until three years ago I was always hunting for something better to kill the greenfly, without injury to bloom and foliage. Then I atarted to use The Fumigating Kind Tobacco Powder. I have used it ever since; it is good enough for me. NELS NELSEN.

A FREE trial five-pound bag will cost you nothing more than the express charges on it. The trial bag will prove our assertion that it is the most effective, cleanest and quickest as well as the cheapest (10 cents per 100-foot house) article to fumigate with. All aphis killed in one night—our booklet tells of it; we mail one on request.

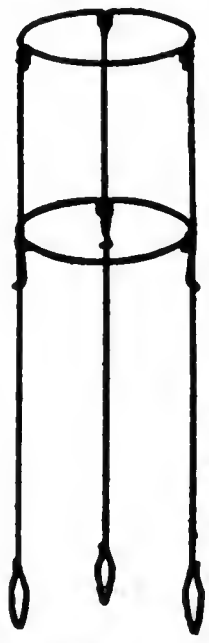
MILWAUKEE.

Judging from advance orders it appears as if Christmas business will be a record breaker. The trade in general has made extensive preparations for a large business. In looking through the retail stores, most of them are stocked with a very fine line of plants in seasonable varieties. In other decorative material bells seem to predominate. Lambros is displaying a very fine line of azaleas, cyclamens and poinsettias which cannot help but please purchasers. Currie Bros., M. A. McKenney Co. and J. M. Fox are displaying excellent lines of plants. There is also an exceptionally large demand for green goods. Holly is selling better than in former years. This is principally due to the absence of southern holly. The mistletoe in the market is also of exceptionally fine quality.



Most of the growers expect to have pretty fair crops of Christmas flowers. In carnations there will be about enough to go around, with the exception of red, on which there is always a heavy demand for this holiday; outside prices may rule for that color. There will probably be a good supply of Romans, stevia, violets, lily of the valley and Paper Whites to help fill out. INCOG.

TORONTO.

Christmas business promises well. The orders already placed with wholesalers would indicate that the retail men expect to do their usual volume of business and even a little more, as it is a fact that Christmas supplies never sold better in Canada. Weather promises to be ideal Christmas weather and this will help matters considerably.

A new addition to our staff of retail florists is W. P. Lambert, late of O. J. Friedman, Chicago, who is in charge of the College Flower Shop, 445 Yonge street, and from the start he has made he promises to set a lively pace for all local competitors. D. J.

PEORIA, ILL.—Ella A Schultz has filed a petition in bankruptcy. She had a millinery and florist business on Main street. The debts are $1,202.77 and the assets $400.

THE COAL MARKET.

There is a shortage in Chicago of standard grades of smokeless coals. Prices, as a consequence, remain very firm. The market is very short of mine-run. The price of Pocahontas remains at $2.25 f. o. b. the mine for lump and egg, and this is the generally prevailing price. Most of the shipping companies continue short of supplies. The price in Chicago for this class of coal is still about $4.25 to $4.30 f. o. b. the cars.

On account of the heavy shortage in smokeless run-of-mine coal, urgent purchasers are still willing to pay a premium in order to get their supplies delivered without a long wait. This premium runs from 5 to 10 cents over circular prices. The majority of sales in Pocahontas and New River coals remain on this premium basis, at least so far as the market in Chicago is concerned. Tug River is firm, with the prevailing price $3 to $3.10 f. o. b. Chicago for standard grades. The price for screened Tug River run-of-mine continues at $3.25 f. o. b. Chicago. The West Virginia product is finding an excellent sale, even though it is being diverted to a large extent from its customary western markets.

Splint coal is active, with many orders coming in that can not be filled immediately. The supply, however, is improved over what it was a week or ten days ago. This is due to an improvement in the transportation facilities of the railroads. —The Black Diamond.

ATCO, N. J.—The L. K. Peacock business has been incorporated with capital stock of $50,000 by Lawrence K. Peacock, William P. Peacock and Thomas B. Hall.

ANDOVER, O.—Mrs. Mary Davis and Mrs. R. A. Pardee have formed a partnership with the Andover greenhouse business and the new firm will be known as Pardee & Davis. A number of improvements will be made.

CARNATION

LIEUT. PEARY==Ward

New White Seedling Carnation, Delivery 1905

Pedigree. White seedlings for several generations.

Color. Snow white.

Fragrance. Very strong clove, decidedly fresh and pleasing.

Size. Large, averaging 3 inches in diameter on strong stiff stems, 18 to 20 inches in length.

Flower. Full, broad petaled and high center and of a fine symmetrical form.

Calyx. Long, strong and does not burst. Fine keeper and excellent shipper.

Habit. Strong and erect.

Grass. Medium width.

Constitution. Very vigorous and free from disease.

Cuttings root rapidly and will be sent out in the most perfect condition. Commences blooming Oct. 15th and flowers continuously throughout the Winter, affording an abundant crop. A first-class commercial variety in every respect. Now booking orders. Price, $12 per 100; $100 per 1000.

THE KING OF ALL CARNATIONS, THE NEW SCARLET SEEDLING

ROBERT CRAIG==Ward

Has been Awarded the following honors

PRELIMINARY CERTIFICATE.....American Carnation Society
SPECIAL DIPLOMA.....American Institute of New York
First-class Certificate of Merit.....Mass. Horticultural Society
First-class Certificate of Merit.....Penn. Horticultural Society
First-class Certificate of Merit.....New York Florists' Club
Craig Cup for the best undisseminated seedling.....Philadelphia
G. Hartman Kuhn Special Prize, for best undisseminated seedling.....Philadelphia

The largest, strongest stemmed, most vigorous, healthiest growing, most fragrant and the Best Fancy Commercial SCARLET Carnation produced to date. Ranks with Enchantress and Fiancee, having defeated the latter variety in all competitions at Philadelphia. The Ideal Christmas Carnation, an Enormous Bloom.

Just the color of the Christmas Holly Berry. An easy doer; anybody can grow it. Having already entered orders for 100,000 cuttings for delivery season of 1906, we are still booking orders subject to buyer's cancellation if dissatisfied with variety at any time up to Dec. 1, 1905.

PRICES—$2.50 per doz.; $12 per 100; $100 per 1000; 2,500 lots at $95 per 1000; 5,000 lots at $90 per 1000; 10,000 lots or more at $80 per 1000. Send your orders early to

C. W. Ward, Cottage Gardens Co., Queens, N. Y.

ORIGINATOR. INCORPORATED.

RICHMOND

That It is the Best Red Forcing Variety yet Produced.

1st. It is of strong and rapid growth, more vigorous than any other forcing variety in commerce.

2nd. It comes to perfection without special care or culture and can be grown in the same soil and temperature and with the same treatment given to Bride and Maid.

3rd. It ships perfectly, as it can be cut very tight and develops as well off as on the bush.

4th. Has very near the same tone of color as Liberty, with more scarlet and does not blue with age.

5th. This variety is nearly a pure tea, being seeded from LADY BATTERSEA, fertilized by LIBERTY, and as a result has shown no tendency toward going dormant in mid-winter, at which time the variety is at its very best.

6th. Produces freely throughout the year, long pointed buds on tall straight stems with elegant dark foliage.

7th. Is as easy to root, and grafts as readily as Bride or Maid.

8th. Has as delicious a fragrance as American Beauty.

Was awarded the silver cup at the World's Fair for best seedling rose and a special silver cup at Chicago for best seedling. Prices, own root—100 plants for $30; 250 for $70; 1000 for $250. 500 at 1000 rate.

ROSALIND ORR ENGLISH

OUR PINK SEEDLING from Mme. Chatenay is unapproached in color; the bud is pointed, quite full, borne on long slender stems, beautifully set with foliage, free in growth and bloom; the flower is very beautiful from its earliest bud form till fully expanded. Was awarded certificate of merit at the Chicago Show; $25 00 per 100, $200 per 1000. Both these Varieties are easy to propagate and easy to grow. Come and see them at home.

CARNATIONS

The best big-flowered, general-purpose Scarlet Carnation now before the trade is CARDINAL, color superb, texture perfect, in vigorous health and of splendid habit. Also FIANCEE and F. BURKI. All three at $12 00 per hundred, $100 per thousand.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Among the new varieties which we had on trial for this year are some magnificent sorts, nine of which have been awarded certificates, viz.: Clementine Touset, the big early white Chadwick, October 8: Dr. Galloway, mid-season incurving white; Mlle. Jeannie Nonin, very late white, winner of the Sweepstakes and Silver Cup at Chicago as best New Mum of the year. These three sorts are marvelously fine commercial varieties in pure white, NONIN probably ranking as the finest Mum extant, regardless of date of blooming. Besides these are: Reveil de Begles, early commercial yellow; Roi d' Italie, early commercial yellow; Anna Debono, Mme. E. Lemoine, Prefet Boncourt, Souv. d' Calvat Pere, four grand exhibition whites. Besides these we have: The Wells-Pockett Set for 1905; The Australians of the year; The Marquis of Pins Set, M. Calvat's Fine Sorts, the best of Nonin's, Bruant's and Rozain's.

All at 50c each; $5.00 per doz.; $35.00 per 100, except Mrs. Wm. Duckham, which is 75c each; $7.50 per doz.; $50.00 per 100

THE HISTORY AND CULTURE OF

GRAFTED ROSES FOR FORCING

BY ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY, JR.,
WABAN ROSE CONSERVATORIES, NATICK, MASS.

COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY FLORISTS' PUBLISHING CO.

The Author's Purpose.

The subject of grafted roses as applied to the American system of forcing, while now quite well understood in all its various aspects by most of the large and many smaller rose growers of the country, still remains with some an open question. It is not my intention to use this opportunity accorded me to put forth an argument in favor of having all rose growers use grafted stock, but to state, so far as is known, some of the facts in connection with the first attempts to improve the conditions under which forcing roses are grown, and to give a comprehensive description of everything connected with the successful handling of grafted roses.

If my readers will bear with me to the end of my story I think they will agree with me that this question of grafted versus own-root roses is one which no one man can decide for all, but which each individual must work out for himself, according to the character of his soil, the varieties he is growing, and the system of production which is best adapted to his requirements. While the subject has been pretty thoroughly covered from time to time by various competent writers, it is thought that it may prove of interest, at least to the novice in the art of grafting, to cover the whole story from the time some of the first stocks were introduced down to the present day.

The only way a grower can decide whether grafted roses can be grown by him is by having a thorough understanding of the subject. Therefore the treatment of the stocks, the operation of grafting, the handling of the grafting case, and the subsequent treatment of the plants, will all be given with considerable detail. This, perhaps, while seeming entirely unnecessary to those who are already experts, will it is hoped prove of interest to some who may not yet have had any experience in this line. I trust that I shall make myself so clear that the veriest novice in the art will obtain a clear idea of the practice, and perhaps even some who are not strangers to the operation, but who have not been as successful as they could wish, will be helped in their work. It is not the intention to tell merely the proper but also the improper methods, and this latter knowledge is, after all, that which often does us the most good.

Early Trials.

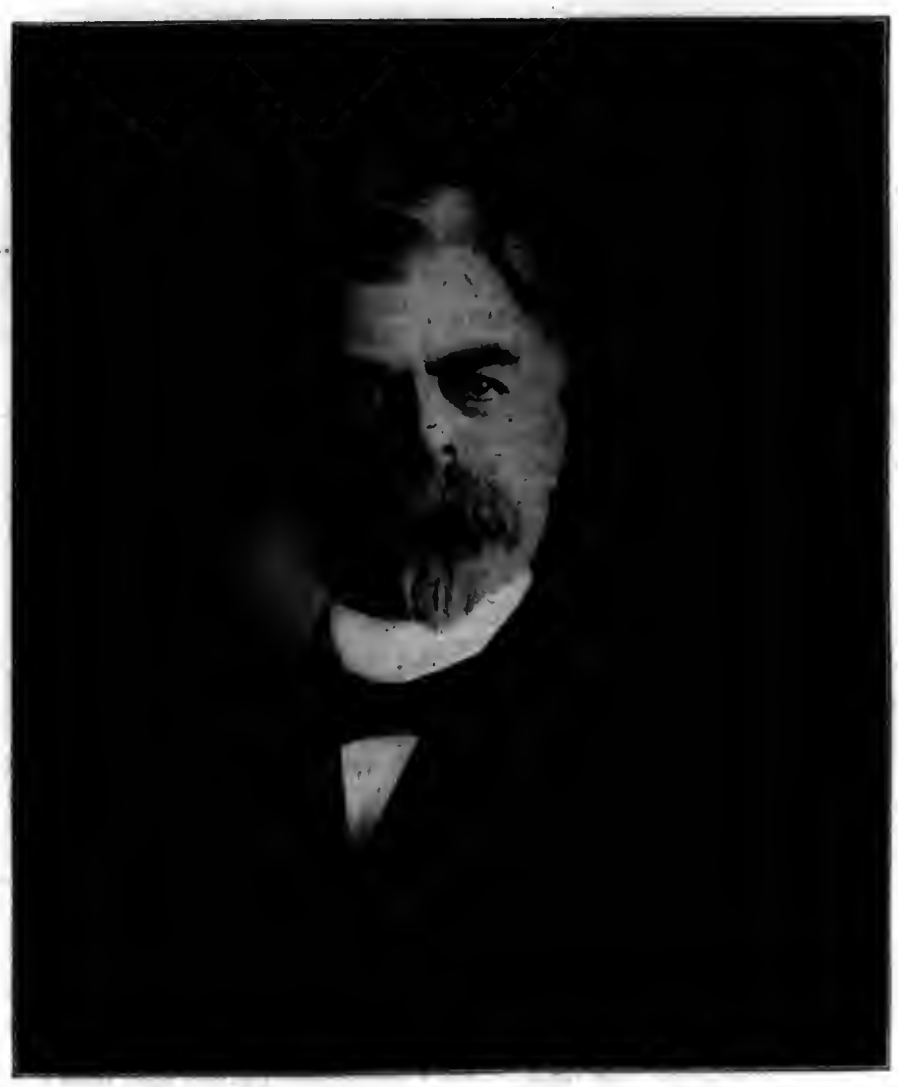
In 1883 Mr. Montgomery sent to a large firm of nurserymen in England an order for 1,000 of the new rose, Catherine Mermet, all to be budded on the seedling brier. This demand, however, proved to be a staggerer for even a big firm, and after having scoured the country they were able to deliver only 500 plants. While no definite facts are available in regard to the experiments with budded roses, it is believed that this was the first large importation of tea roses for forcing, not on their own roots.

As the importer of these plants had had an extensive experience in Britain with roses budded on the brier, he hoped that by adapting this stock to the American system of forcing he could perhaps obtain the same satisfactory results that had followed its use on the other side, but in this he was destined to be disappointed.

The Brier Stock.

These plants did very well up to the first of November, better in fact than own root up to that time, but from November to April they were as sound asleep as it is possible for a rose to be. No amount of coaxing known in the art of forcing could get those stocks to give the slightest sign that they ever had any intention of growing during the short days of the winter months. From April on into the summer, however, they produced some good blooms, but by that time the growth on the whole was much inferior to the own-root plants which had been flowering all winter. Numerous experiments have been made since on different varieties but with practically the same results.

From a forcing standpoint, then, this stock had proved a failure, but nevertheless it must be admitted that for size, form and absolute perfection of finish of the individual bloom, the brier under certain conditions is the stock to use. As showing the high esteem in which it is held in Britain I quote the following from "A Book About Roses," by Dean Hole:



> I know that the Manetti will grow luxuriantly where the brier will not grow at all; that in a toward season it will produce some varieties of the rose in their most perfect form, those especially which have the smoother wood, * * * but I am nevertheless convinced that by far the greater number of the most perfect roses may be, are, and will be grown and shown from our indigenous British brier, taken from hedgerows, struck from cuttings, or raised from seed.

From this, then, coupled with our own experience it is easily seen that because a stock may be good for one purpose it is not necessarily good for all.

Success With Manetti.

After this experience with budded briers, Catherine Marmet grafted on the Manetti was obtained from a prominent Scotch firm. Grafted plants were called for on account of the difficulty that had been experienced in getting budded stock. The newly budded teas were often winter-killed in the ground and consequently, in order to produce plants in quantity, the nurseryman had to resort to winter grafting.

Results from this experiment were so satisfactory that during the next few years all varieties were imported in increasing numbers until, in 1886, the expense of these large grafted plants began to be quite an item, and so it was decided to import stocks and to try all the methods of grafting which it was thought might be adapted to the new system.

Alex. Montgomery, of Waban Rose Conservatories.
(President American Rose Society and Pioneer Grower of Roses Grafted for Forcing.)

The American Process of Grafting.

The old idea used to be to coat the union of the graft and scion with a smearing of grafting wax and to run the plants at a somewhat lower temperature than is now considered proper. This, however, was a very tedious process and in the mind of the American grower it was altogether too slow, considering the fact that he had to produce during the three winter months all of the plants which he intended to set out for the coming season. Then, by experimenting, it was found that by raising the temperature and increasing the moisture the waxing process could be omitted entirely and a more satisfactory union could be produced in less time and with less labor.

After these encouraging results with Catherine Mermet and other varieties all the leading roses of that period were tried on the Manetti. Niphetos, Bon Silene, William Francis Bennett, Lady Mary Fitzwilliam and many others of lesser note, showed a marked improvement over own-root plants.

The Famous Cornelia Cook.

One of the most interesting sights for visitors to our place during the latter part of the '80s were the great banks of that grand old favorite, Cornelia Cook. The term "banks" is used advisedly, for banks they really were, the style of growing being entirely different from anything now in vogue. The plants, which were all in solid beds, were at that time forced as long as seven or eight years. Where the beds were wide enough, about seven feet, the plants were placed in rows three feet apart across the bed. An iron trellis in the shape of an inverted "V" was built in between each two rows and the plants tied down to this, leaving one row facing east and the other west. As the plants were grown so long in the same bed they made fine canes and these, when thoroughly ripened off during the summer, produced magnificent blooms the following season. I remember one house in particular 300 feet long, with a single row of plants lengthwise of the back bed and tied back to a trellis, leaving the whole bank facing the south. This indeed, when in the midst of a full crop, was a truly wonderful sight.

Now, one of the causes which undoubtedly contributed to these results and which, by the way, was not made known for some time, was the fact that all these fine plants were grafted on the Manetti stock. Finally, however, when Charles Anderson, of the John Henderson Company, a great admirer of this method of forcing, was let into the secret, he immediately set about grafting his own Cooks and was so elated with his success that he was unable to hold on to his secret.

Stock for Marechal Niel.

It was in a somewhat similar way to this that that finest of all yellow roses, Marechal Niel, was treated. This variety had failed to thrive on the Manetti and, while it gave very satisfactory results on the Banksia, still it seemed in time to outgrow this, being in fact a more rapid grower than the stock itself. Mr. Montgomery having read of Dean Hole's very high opinion of Glorie de Dijon as a stock for Marechal Niel, decided to give it a trial under glass at Waban Conservatories. A house 35x100 feet, twenty feet to the ridge, containing sixty plants on this stock, was laid out with one large bed and the plants trained on upright trellises across the house. These plants in time made canes enough to completely fill the house, and bore in one crop from 25,000 to 30,000 blooms, the product being shipped as far as Washington on the south, Montreal on the north and Chicago on the west. No better stock than Glorie de Dijon has ever been found for Marechal Niel, either for out-of-doors or for indoor forcing.

NEWER VARIETIES.

A retrospective view of conditions prevailing during the past year in the rose growing world reveals many interesting facts, which, if carefully considered, may be of paramount use to us during the coming and future years.

That we are yet far from perfection is evidenced by the fact that our hybridists and growers are still seeking after something better in the way of varieties and methods of culture. The industry, energy, skill and intelligence which the hybridists have brought to bear on the subject during the past and preceding years entitle them to the thanks of the growers particularly and of the public generally. Many of their productions are as yet only on trial and to the credit of the craft there is not that inclination to rush a new variety on to the market without testing its qualities that existed a few years ago and growers will have more confidence in investing in these, knowing that they have already passed through the ordeal.

In Hill's Richmond we have a red rose which has all the ear-marks of a winner. It is robust and of good habit, easily grown, a profuse bloomer, the form and keeping qualities of the bloom of a high grade and the color just right. That Mr. Hill, after all these years of trial, sees fit to put it on the market is evidence enough that it is a good thing and certain to find a place among the best. That there is still a good demand for reds is evidenced by the fact that ninety per cent of our growers are still trying to grow Liberty.

Among the pinks, La Detroit seems to be gaining in favor, being a free grower, of excellent constitution, very productive and a good seller. There not being as yet enough of it grown to entitle it to a separate quotation in the market, it is hard to prophesy if it will supersede the old Bridesmaid. It has evidently come to stay.

Chatenay is proving itself an all-around favorite, producing some wonderful canes and blooms of a high order. It is easily grown and free from nearly all the diseases that afflict other roses and, if properly handled, is almost immune from the ravages of mildew. It is so easy a "doer" that the grower who cannot handle this rose with success had better quit growing.

Rosalind Orr English is another of Mr. Hill's introductions and deserves a place. Its color would be hard to define, being a shade of pink something after the order of Lawson carnation but brighter and probably will satisfy those who admire this shade in a rose. In form it is all that can be desired, has excellent keeping qualities and in habit resembles Chatenay, of which it is a seedling.

The new light-pink rose, Wellesley, a seedling raised at the Waban Conservatories at Natick, Mass., is sustaining a good character and will no doubt fill a long felt want in that shade of color.

Killarney is another rose that seems to be coming to the front and, because of its many good qualities, will also find a place in public favor.

Along with these new varieties of native birth we are promised some European novelties which bear high reputations but whether they are able to bear the vicissitudes of climatic changes and our exhaustive methods of culture is a question of the future.

We have, however, sufficient food for thought for another year in trying to find the peculiarities of these varieties, so that by another year we may have confidence to plant in quantities.

That the past year has been progressive there is no doubt and that it has also been financially a success is also true. That the coming year may prove equally good to both hybridists and growers and that we may be all prosperous and happy is the New Year's wish of Ribes.

BRIDES AND MAIDS.

We have a house of Bride and Bridesmaid roses that were propagated in September and grown cool all winter, until March, when they were started with more heat and planted about the middle of June out of 3-inch pots into four or five inches of soil. We used sod with about one-fifth cow manure, also bone meal. The Bridesmaids were very slow to start but both did very well during September and October, but for some time have not done well. They seemed to be dormant for a while and drop a great many leaves. Lately they have been putting up some very good ground shoots that we thought would right things but they are coming with open buds. Besides, the foliage of the new growths is dropping off and not of a good color. We have kept a night temperature of 60 degrees and given good ventilation. We have used lime and ashes at different times. They have been watered regularly. We are at a loss to know what the trouble is or how to remedy it. Please tell us what to do. D. & C.

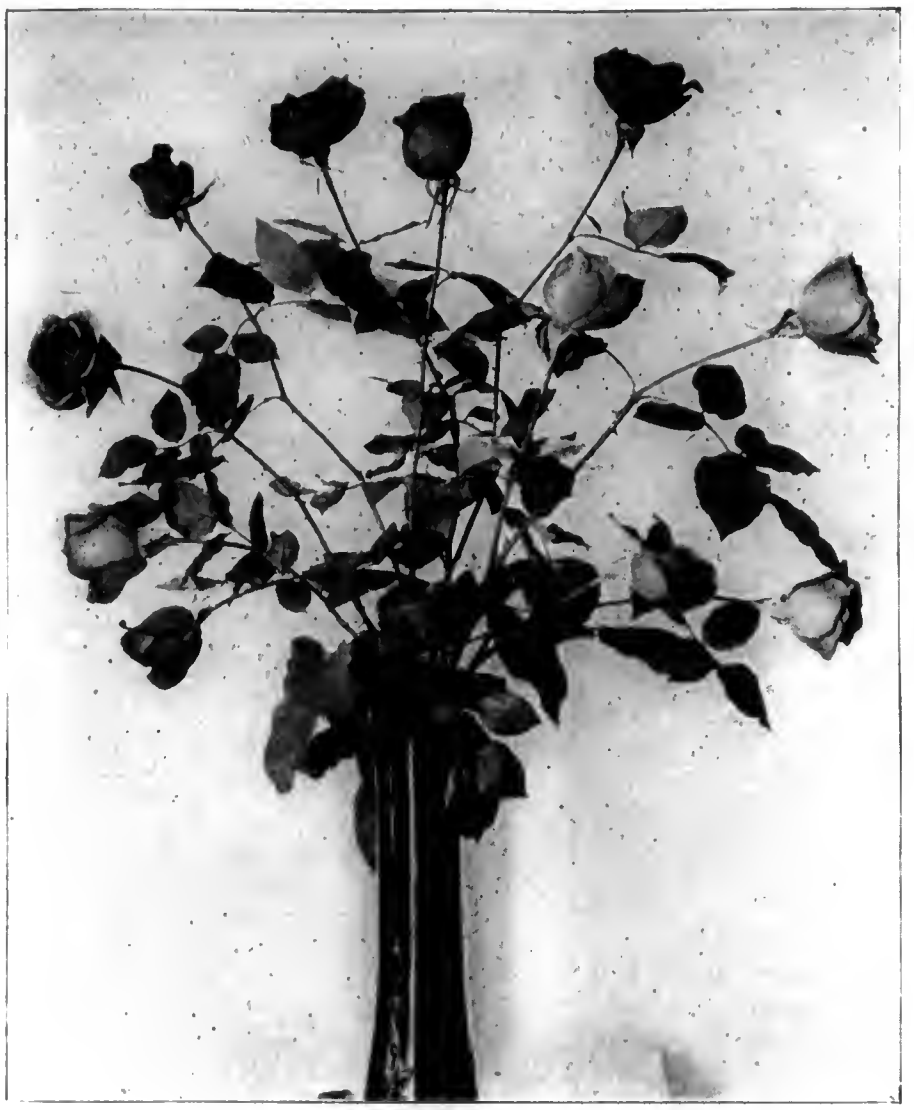
This trouble is very apt to attack roses which have remained such a long time in pots. They do not seem ever to take so kindly to the bench as plants which have been rooted during the winter and properly cared for till planting time, June.

Be careful in watering, keeping them rather on the dry side. Keep the temperature 56 degrees at night and not to exceed 75 degrees during the day. Give plenty of ventilation on every favorable opportunity and refrain from all kinds of feeding until the plants regain their health. Keep the benches clear of dead and decaying leaves and syringe every bright morning, but be sure the foliage has time to dry before sundown.

RIBES.

TO ROSE GROWERS.



Sample copies of this issue of the REVIEW are mailed to those of the rose growers who are not already on our subscription list ror the purpose of attracting their attention to the introductorv article on the "History and Culture of Grafted Roses for Forcing," by Alexander Montgomery, Jr., of Waban Rose Conservatories, Natick, Mass., which will, we believe, so clearly indicate the value of what is to come that we shall have immediate instructions, accompanied by a dollar, to send the paper regularly. Mr. Montgomery's contribution on this subject, and there is none more competent to discuss it, will alone be worth far more than the price of a year's subscription to every grower of the rose, be he veteran or novice. And this series of articles is but one of many we shall publish in the year to come, for the REVIEW is representative of the whole trade and covers its field fully, treating of all subjects as thoroughly and as interestingly as Mr. Montgomery treats of his.

HOW MUCH COAL?

How much coal does it take to heat one square foot of greenhouse glass for an ordinary season; how many pounds of coal per square foot of glass?

H. O.

"Coal" is a very vague term; it all depends on the kind of coal, making due allowance for the condition of the greenhouses, etc. It would be interesting to compare the results in several different establishments. Set down the number of tons of coal you burned last season, multiply it by 2,000, to get the number of pounds, and divide by the number of feet of glass you had to heat. Then send the result to the REVIEW, and don't forget to mention the kind of coal. Sign your letter, but we will not publish your name if you would rather not have it.

Rose General Mac Arthur.

THE RETAILER'S VIEW.

Ernst Wienhoeber, than whom no one in Chicago has a patronage of higher average class, says that he does not regard Christmas as an unmixed blessing. "The holiday is always preceded by a quiet period and followed by a dull spell," said he, "so that if you take a stretch of three weeks or so, with Christmas day about in the middle, the total business is not so very much in excess of any other equal period of good, active, average business.

"Then this matter of the increased cost of cut flowers is a serious one. I think our trade will pay as good prices as most other retailers can command, but we cannot increase our charges in anything like the proportion in which the cost of stock increases. To do so would at once give the impression of attempted extortion and drive away even our wealthiest and most liberal patrons, those whom we do business with right along.

"The result is that at Christmas we do business at a narrower margin of profit than at any other season of the year. It is just the reverse with nearly every other line. You don't find the jewelers, the furniture dealers or any other class of merchants offering their closest prices at the holidays.

"But the question of cost of stock is no more serious to the retailer than the matter of quality. No matter how much you pay, you cannot be sure of freshness because the existence of the very demand which is the wholesaler's justification in charging the increased prices necessitates an accumulation of stock to fill orders. It wouldn't be fair for the wholesalers to give one man all the fresh cut and the others nothing but pickled stock, so we all fare about alike, and the day after Christmas those of us who have a regular patronage begin giving credit to customers who received unsatisfactory flowers; indeed, we are often glad to have the opportunity to erase the charge; too often the customer makes no complaint, but simply stops buying.

"With those who have the trade of the well-to-do, people who do not feel the need of economy after the Christmas purchases, I believe that the unsatisfactory quality of the Christmas cut flowers is the greatest cause of the dropping off of business almost always felt just after the holiday.

"And plants will not by any means take the place of cut flowers. They may supplement the supply, but some of them, like the Lorraine begonia, for instance, are equally unsatisfactory to handle under holiday conditions. No, I would by no means regret it if the ordinary run of business were not interrupted by Christmas."

CHRISTMAS BELLS.

The sales of folding red paper Christmas bells have been something enormous this year. The trade began in early summer and kept up until Christmas Eve. Time after time the wholesalers had to return to the sources of supply. It is related that one jobber placed his first order for fifty dozen with fear and trembling and that on the next trip of only a few days one of his traveling men sold 120 dozen. The large sales are partly accounted ror by lower prices. The American manufacturers make the bells by machinery in quantity and at considerably less cost than previous prices on German bells. The reduction in prices has put the bells more or less into the department stores this season, and probably they will handle them still more extensively next year, but the supply trade feels that there is at least one more good year for this specialty before it is run into the ground.

The Christmas bell, or some other factor hurt the sale of cape flower wreaths but in some sections the immortelle wreaths sold better than ever, possibly partly because a good looking wreath could be bought cheaper than ever before. They were of German manufacture and made of immortelles not good enough to bunch. In many sections the supply was not equal to the demand. Most of the wreaths were embellished by the retailers with ribbon and green before being shown to the public.

CHRISTMAS GREENS.

The trade in Christmas greens was this year, in many respects, much more satisfactory than the past couple of seasons. There was enough bouquet green to meet all requirements of the legitimate trade, with no great surplus to demoralize the market, nor any shortage to put prices beyond reason and make trouble for those who had booked orders in advance. The market closed about where it had stood for three weeks.

The holly situation was not so satisfactory. The receipts were lighter than in the past couple of years, with the result that the grocers and butchers handled less holly and the trade and the shippers got better prices. Really good holly was very scarce and the market closed strong, prices higher than at any time in the past two or three seasons. Even poor holly was readily salable at the price of fair to good stock last year. It was used in making up wreaths, the berries being supplied by Ilex verticilata, the Christmas or red berry, sold by hundreds of cases and received of very good quality.

Galax leaves were used to a greater extent than ever before. Leucothoe was also used in quantity and one western house sold many cases of mahonia leaves. In the east laurel had its usual use and box green for wreaths and festooning made a great advance in popular favor. This is an evergreen not yet used in the west.

Mistletoe was of better quality than ever before and also in abundant supply, with the result that prices in quantity were moderate. The weather was moderate, permitting the stock to reach market in the best of condition.

CARNATIONS

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

Treatment After Christmas.

It is hoped that your plants have given a good Christmas crop and if so it is obvious that they have received what might be called a severe pruning. To be careless in watering is bad enough at any time, but at this time especially so. The removal of quantities of bloom within a few days destroys the balance between roots and top. All efforts should be made to restore this balance as soon as possible.

A heavy watering or the application of extra food in any form before the plants have recovered from the strain would only invite disaster. Keep the soil a trifle on the dry side for a few days. If the weather is cloudy very little water will be needed but look sharp for spots that are apt to dry out by heat from the pipes. With bright weather a gentle shower over the plants is beneficial. Use but little water and give plenty of ventilation even at the expense of fuel. This should be done early in the morning in order that the foliage may be dry before night.

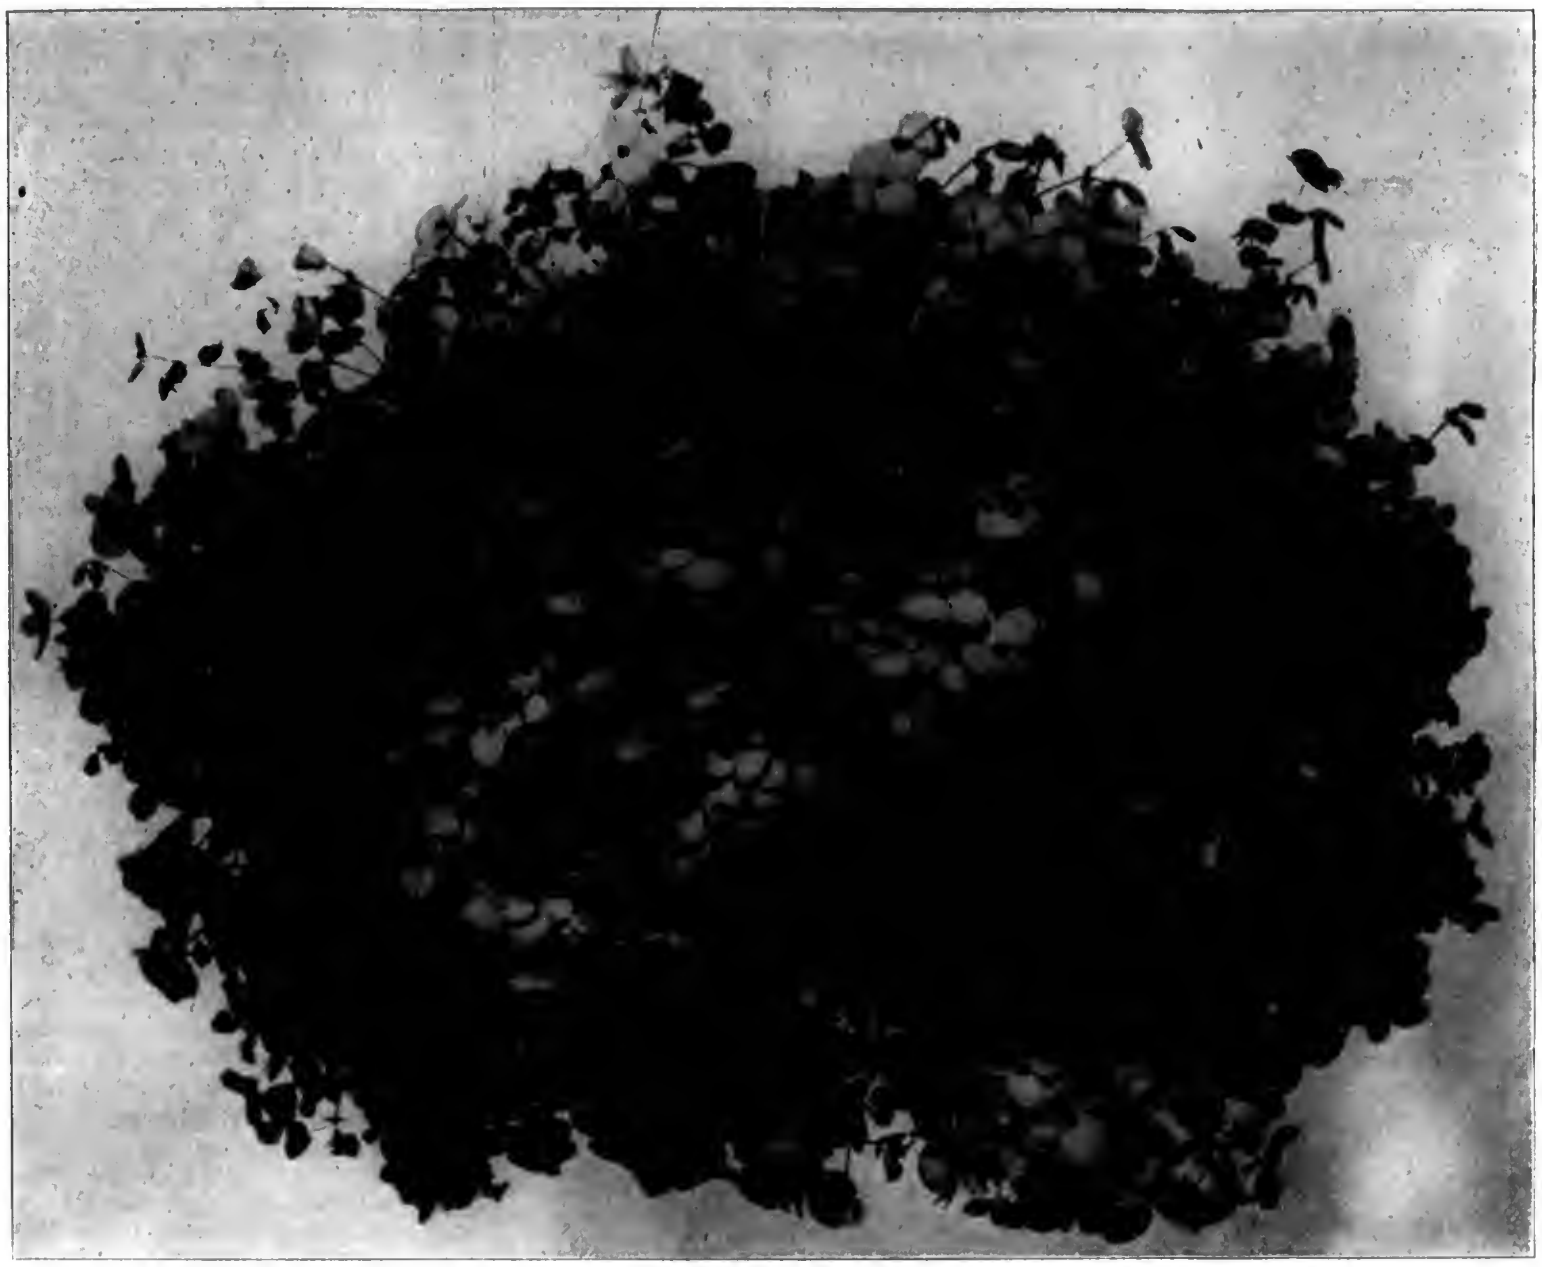
I hesitate to advise overhead watering during the short days of winter as some may overdo the matter. We must watch the weather very closely and if not quite sure of a pleasant day, put off overhead watering and water sparingly at the root, if the plants show signs of flagging. Every care possible must be taken to get our plants into vigorous growth, for propagation in earnest will soon be in order.

Perhaps you have a good place to put your cuttings when rooted, but if not get one ready. See that fresh soil is at hand and do not delay too long getting some in to warm up. Geo. S. Osborn.

CARNATION NOTES.—WEST.

Propagating.

Now that the holidays are over and you can get down to the routine work, you should begin to work up your young stock for next season. While there are many varieties which will make as fine stock as anyone could wish for, from February cuttings, yet there are many varieties that should be propagated in January or earlier and there are no varities I know of that are injured a particle by being propagated this early, provided, of course, that you take proper care of the young plants after they are potted up. They must not be potted into small pots and left to become stunted, but must be shifted as required. If you are unwilling to do this you had better wait until February before putting in your cuttings.



If you have some varieties of which you want all the cuttings you can get you will have to begin early and take them off as they grow. You need not sacrifice all the blooms, but take off all the young head cuttings from the shoots that have not begun to run up. These stubs will break before the other shoots have all bloomed and the plant need never be cut down too severely. Don't take cuttings that are too small and weak. Of course, there is a large difference in varieties and what would be a fair cutting of one variety might be a small one of another. We prefer the cuttings that grow out at the lower joints of the flower stems, but don't take them from too high up. A cutting that has an inch of stem between the flower stem and the lowest leaves is not fit to use in most cases. Another advantage in starting early is that if, perchance, you should be unfortunate enough to lose part of your cuttings you can still get in another batch in good time, instead of having to buy.

We are this year trimming our cuttings somewhat less than we used to do. After making a clean cut at the base, cut back all those blades that stand out away from the cutting and leave all those that stand upright, unless they be long enough to droop over.

Use clean, sharp sand and have about three inches of it on the bench after it is packed. Sprinkle the surface lightly after packing to prevent it from plowing up too much when making the furrows for the cuttings. After putting in the cuttings give them a good soaking to settle the sand around them. The cuttings should be about a half-inch to three-quarters of an inch apart in the row and the rows about one and one-half to two inches apart, according to the size of the cuttings.

While, of course, a specially built propagating house or bench is a very desirable thing, yet that does not signify that you cannot successfully root your cuttings without them. A bench built of good, sound boards, just tight enough to hold the sand and yet open enough to allow water to pass through, will root your cuttings nicely. If you cannot root your cuttings on this, I doubt very much whether you will be successful with the most up-to-date kind of a bench or house. The same rule holds good as with growing stock. A good man with a poor house will grow better stock than a poor man with a good house. It is the propagator and not the bench that makes the difference.

The Visitors at Cottage Gardens, New York Florists' Club's Outing, December 7.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine Six Feet Nine Inches in Circumference, Grown by Alexander Ogg, Gardener to J. M. Sears, Southboro, Mass.

The north bench in an even-span house makes an excellent propagating bench. If the pitch of the roof is tolerably steep you can hang a curtain to the sashbars to keep the sun off. The cuttings will get the full light and will keep in better condition than if they were darkened. When they are rooted you can give them the sun a few days before potting and, being on the north side of the house, the sun will not be too strong for them at first.

When putting in the cuttings keep the sand clean. None of the clippings should be allowed to get between the cuttings. They will cause fungus. Cleanliness is the main thing in propagating.

A. F. J. BAUR.

CARNATIONS IN THE SOUTH.

Here is a proposition for some carnation grower which I would like to have answered through your columns. I have been trying to run my houses at 55 degrees at night and 80 degrees during the day, and have succeeded very well until yesterday and last night. My houses (in Texas) were up to 100 yesterday, with all the air that I could give and last night I did not have to fire any at all and they staid above 60 degrees until just before day. Now we may have a norther within the next two or three days and we shall have to burn coal as fast as we can in order not to let the houses get too low. I am trying to learn all I can about carnations and I would like for Mr. Baur to tell us what he thinks of this. I have learned all I know about carnations through your paper. It is worth everything to a beginner. T. N. C.

I don't know that I will be able to tell you just what you want to know, as you do not ask any specific questions. From the tone of your letter I judge you want me to tell you how to proceed to produce good carnations. In not knowing what kind of houses you have for your carnations, or what shape they are in, I also find a stumbling block. With good, substantial houses, such as we must have up here, and built according to the needs, I do not see why you should not grow very good carnations down your way, at least a few months during the winter. My business partner spent many years in the lower part of your state and knows the climate thoroughly and he has told me enough about it so that I feel that I can form an idea of how I would proceed.

First of all, you want good houses, that you can close up tight in case of a norther. If you have only ten days each winter when you will have to fire hard to keep them warm it will pay you to have your houses and heating apparatus in such shape that you can keep warm. Build plenty of ventilators into your houses. I would prefer houses detached with ventilators on each side of the ridge and a row of ventilators on each side of the house below the eave-plates. You must be prepared to keep warm in case of cold weather and to keep as cool as the outside in case of a warm spell; and since these changes are apt to come on you suddenly you must be all the better prepared for them. I would grow my carnations in semi-solid beds, using cinders in the bottom and four inches of soil for planting. I think you would find the quality would keep up much better than on raised benches.

By selecting your varieties you could grow only those that best stand warm weather. For instance, Flora Hill and Gov. Wolcott for white and E. Crocker for pink, etc. There are others, but I merely mention these as examples. If you can have air on, these varieties will thrive with a night temperature of 60 degrees or even more, but be sure the ventilators are open a few inches. While 100 degrees is much warmer than carnations enjoy during the day, if the ventilators are wide open it will not necessarily destroy the quality. In fact Flora Hill and Crocker are usually at their best in the spring, when the houses run up toward 100 degrees.

I understand that you have very few cloudy days even during the winter. Why can't you shade your glass a little, the same as we do during the spring months, to break the strong rays of the sun? I would never allow the houses to drop below 55 degrees, as the change would be too great and would cause your calyxes to split as badly as they would for us at 40 degrees in the winter.

Regarding my cultural notes in the REVIEW, I would say, don't try to follow them too literally. While in the main they may do all right, yet you must always make allowance for the difference in in the climate, etc. Being actively engaged in growing carnations and writing from experience, as I do, I cannot do otherwise than take this locality as a basis for calculating the proper time for one operation or another. Your own judgment must alter my recommendations to suit your case.

Now, if I have not touched upon the different phases of the case as you wished, I should be glad to have you send me a list of direct questions you would like answered and I will do my best to help you out. A. F. J. Baur.

OUTDOOR MUMS.

I desire to bed quite a lot of mums in the garden, where it is my intention to leave them permanently. I have no expectation of securing exhibition flowers, only good plain mums, and would like the names of about twelve September flowering varieties, which will make a fair show in such a situation. The earlier I can secure flowers the better show they will make. Of course I would like several colors. Or would you advise planting pompons rather than the standard sorts?

H. L. W.

What is a good list of chrysanthemums, early varieties, for outdoor planting? L. R. A.

We would certainly advise the planting of pompon chrysanthemums, where it is the intention to leave them permanently, as it is more in keeping with their nature and it is better to have small but perfect flowers than larger, imperfect ones. The amateur with this class can, with very little trouble, produce just as fine flowers as the practical florist with all his expensive paraphernalia. We would suggest the following as being the cream of the aster-flowering type, which is the largest of the pompons:

Blenheim, silver pink; Cowenton, scarlet bronze; Hijos, primrose pink; Lady de Vaul, violet pink; Ontario, lilac; Prince of Wales, pure white; Bohemia, pure yellow; Daybreak, daybreak pink; Joppa, violet crimson; Mrs. Vincent, violet red; Peto, terra cotta; Sunset, scarlet bronze. R. A. Vincent.

CHRYSANTHEMUM PROGRESS.

The development of the Japanese chrysanthemum during the past twenty years has been both interesting and remarkable, and it is probable that the enthusiasm that growers and the public alike have shown in the chrysanthemum as an exhibition flower has depended to a large extent upon the large numbers of novelties possessing superior merit from the point of view of the florist that have been introduced each season. Judging from recent experience, it seems hardly likely that such progress as that which has been obtained can be continued indefinitely. In point of size not only are the flowers sufficiently large, but they appear to have attained to a size which is nearly the limit of which they are capable. It is some years now since the variety Madame Carnot was raised by M. Calvat, but we believe that there are few, if any, recent novelties that are bigger than the largest specimens of that variety we have seen. In any case, we may regard it as a blessing if greater size is not sought in new varieties, but, instead, refinement in contour and richness, variety and brightness in color are encouraged. There are so many good varieties already that we think a very high standard of merit should be exacted in varieties to which certificates are awarded. The Royal Horticultural Society's committee set a good example in this way on Tuesday last, when many seedlings were shown for certificate, and all were rejected. The only award made was to a sport that will prove valuable for the supply of the market.—Gardeners' Chronicle.

Chrysanthemum Miss Winnie Terry.

A FAILURE.

It has often been noted that a chrysanthemum which does well in England and is a valuable commercial or exhibition variety may not succeed under the conditions existing in the United States. An example of this is found in Chrysanthemum Winnie Terry, one of the Wells set of 1904. The disseminator described this as a "deep apricot yellow, with long, flat, drooping florets, making a flower somewhat similar to Gen. Hutton but with narrower florets; has splendid foliage and is a good 'doer'; first crown, four and one-half feet." But under our American cultural conditions Winnie Terry has proved itself worthless, so far as first season's results go, and in this case they are apparently conclusive. It is deficient in petalage and shows no merit whatever. The illustration shows the flower as it was exhibited in England last season. That it will not do for us is to be regretted.

RED WAS SCARCE.

"Say! It's a pipe oat red stuff wuz a few chips shy dis Chrismus! I guess red roses and red canackes wuz growin' on every gooseberry bush, huh? Well, not so you could notice it! Lawsons got purty red de last few days; dat is, dose dat wuzunt blue wuz red enuf to fill orders wit. Even Enchants turned red long about six bells Sat'day eve.

"It cert'ly wuz amoosin' to see de wise guys chasin' fer red canacks Sun'ay mornin'. Ye could tell by lookin' at der phiz w'at dey wuz after de minit ye claps yer lamps on 'em. Dey had a hungry, scart look about 'em w'at says, 'Got eny red carnations?'"

"I heard a funny snap about a guy dat wuz shy on red canacks Sunday. He chast 'round to every commish' joint in de burg lookin' fer twent'-five red and all he could find ye could put in yer eye. He meets a geezer on de street wit his mits full er bundles an' he cracks, 'Say, Billy, has yer got twent'-five c.p.'s?' Well, Bill had 'em, all right, all right, but he wuz dead leary to let dis oder guy have 'em, 'cause he wuz on wit a few orders fer red hi'self. He tried to stall off dis guy as much as he could but de guy wouldn't be sidetracked an' handed out a awful hard luck story 'bout a speshul order fer a old customen and bein' only twent'-five shy. When Bill sees he can't stall off de guy he opens up his bundles dair on de sidewalk and gives his nobs a bunch er Chicago. 'Ain't yer got Estelle?' says de guy. 'Well, I likes yer nerve,' says Bill. 'I tinks dese is red enuf w'en yer ain't got any others.'

'How much?' says de guy. 'Eight cents,' says Bill, 'just w'at dey cost me.' 'All right,' says de guy; 'charge 'em to me.' 'All right,' says Bill, as he wraps up his bundles an' hikes fer a rattler.

"Dis wuz about ten in de mornin' w'en dis happens. Bill gets home wit his stuff an' starts in fillin' his orders, workin' his head off to make up de time lost wit de guy an' his red canacks. About four bells in de afternoon in comes a guy wit a bundle and lays it down on de counter. 'W'at's dis?' says Bill. 'O! Dose is de twent'-five red canacks dat —— got frum yer dis mornin'; he said he would get along wit w'at he had.'

"Now, wouldn't dat freeze yer pipes?"

MUGSY.

ALOIS P. FREY.

The head gardener at Lincoln park, Chicago, is Alois P. Frey, one of the youngest men holding so responsible a position in this country and probably younger than any man in Europe at the head of gardening affairs of so great magnitude. Mr. Frey was born in Switzerland in 1875. His father was in the commercial line, doing all kinds of landscape work as well as growing pot plants and conducting a seed business. The son left home when 16 years of age, spending several years in completing his horticultural education at such widely known establishments as those of Wilhelm Pfitzer, at Stuttgart, Germany; Schmidt, at Lyon, France, and Edmund Rochford, Cheshunt, England. He went home for a visit in 1896 and the following year came to America, finding his first employment on a private place at Portchester, N. Y., where the head gardener was G. X. Amrhyn, now superintendent of parks at New Haven, Conn. Mr. Frey soon went to spend four years in the department of floriculture of the parks superintended by Theodore Wirth at Hartford, Conn.

Having an ambition to go into business for himself, Mr. Frey engaged capital to build the Hueblein Conservatories at Hartford. The place cost $20,000 and was one of the prettiest florist establishments in the country. But it was foredoomed to failure. For some reason never satisfactorily explained plant life could not exist in the beautiful conservatories and, after much experimenting to solve the riddle, the place had to be abandoned. It is now a laundry.

Mr. Frey came to Chicago in July, 1903, at the request of R. H. Warder, the new superintendent of Lincoln park, who was familiar with the young man's work at Hartford. Mr. Frey was considering an offer to become the American representative of Vilmorin-Andrieux et Cie., the Paris seedsmen, when he received Mr. Warder's offer to become assistant head gardener. He became head gardener on the retirement of C. J. Strombach in August of this year.

Mr. Frey is a member of the S. A. F., the American Carnation Society and the Chicago Florists' Club and has a deep interest in all that pertains to the trade.

BOSTON CLUB MEETING.

The meeting of the Boston Gardeners' and Florists' Club on December 20 was undoubtedly the best the club has yet held. About sixty members were present and but for the near approach of Christmas the number would have been larger. The exhibits were numerous and of exceptionally high quality and the meeting would seem to presage an era of greater prosperity and added usefulness to the club.

President Pettigrew read a communication from the American Vilmorin memorial committee and asked for contributions in small sums from any of the members. A large number gave their quota. Ten new members were elected. J. W. Duncan gave a report on the field day at Framingham on December 17. It was voted to award certificates to meritorious exhibits, commencing with the present meeting. W. N. Craig stated that Mr. Hartshorne had forwarded Fiancee and Cardinal carnations for the meeting, but unfortunately they had not arrived in time. The president having introduced David Lumsden, that gentleman gave his excellent essay on ferns, which was listened to with close attention. In the discussion following the reading, Kenneth Finlayson, Robert Cameron and others took part. A vote of thanks to the essayist was carried amid applause.

The president appointed the following committee to judge the exhibits: James Wheeler, Alexander Montgomery, Peter Fisher, Robert Cameron and W. N. Craig. The exhibits included the following:

Carnation Winsor, a seedling from Lawson, warm flesh color, from Peter Murray, Fairhaven, Mass., awarded honorable mention.

S. J. Goddard sent a vase of his seedling, Helen Goddard, previously referred to in the REVIEW. It received a certificate of merit. His seedling No. 19, a cross between Marion Buxton and Helen Goddard, received honorable mention. This took the eyes of the members. It is of a salmon pink shade, fine form, stiff stem, and will be heard from again.

Peter Fisher received a certificate of merit for his seedling white, No. 411, a cut of which appeared in the REVIEW for November 10. This is a fine, full, pure white flower, more double than Wolcott. He also received honorable mention for seedling No. 173, a shade deeper in color than Enchantress. Mr. Fisher also showed Nelson Fisher and other varieties.

M. A. Patten received a certificate of merit for The Mikado, very similar to Prosperity, but said by Mr. Patten to be five times as prolific. Other interesting seedlings came from the same exhibitor, including Tammany Hall, named on account of its resemblance to a tiger, also vases of Pink Patten and J. H. Manley.

Rockland Greenhouses and H. A. Stevens Co. each scored a certicate of merit for Variegated Lawson. That from the latter exhibitor is much heavier striped and quite distinct from Mr. Arnold's sport. Stevens Co. showed a dish of grand mushrooms grown from pure culture spawn, very solid and of extra size. They were awarded a cultural certificate.

William Nicholson, in addition to some fine carnations, showed a vase of splendid mignonette of the Dailledouze strain, which received honorable mention.

Robert Cameron had a large vase of beautiful sprays of Euphorbia Jacquiniaeflora grown from July cuttings, kept in pots outdoors until September and then grown in a rose house.

James Wheeler had a fine lot of poinsettias, both in pots and cut. He stated that for food he uses a 6-inch pot each of bone dust and soot, mixed, in fifty gallons of water, which toned up the plants finely.

Alexander Ogg had a beautiful specimen of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, which merited the cultural certificate awarded.

W. N. Craig showed Lælia anceps and varieties alba, Stella, holochila, Percivaliana, Williamsii, etc., also L. Gouldiana, a natural hybrid between L. anceps and L. autumnalis.

Richmond rose from E. G. Hill Co. came in superb condition and was the star attraction of the meeting. A close scrutiny of flowers, stems and foliage, to say nothing of the delightful odor, led to the unanimous verdict from all present that the new western beauty was "all right" and that Liberty's star would soon set. The committee on awards regretted that a certificate of merit was the highest award in their power.

Mr. Montgomery's new seedling, Wellesley, showed up in fine shape and also received a certificate of merit. Mr. Montgomery stated that it is his son's production, now in its third year and almost a pure tea. He considers that new roses would keep on developing character up till the seventh year. He had found Wellesley a thoroughly satisfactory grower and it took remarkably well at the stores.

In regard to the Fiancee carnation, William Nicholson said the custom of not sending any plants to be grown in the east was a bad one, for most of the flowers sent on after two or three days' journey went to sleep, as a rule, as soon as unpacked. This was unfair to the varieties. Introducers of novelties should see to it that some of their stock is grown in various sections to allow would-be purchasers to see some plants growing, or at least see fresh flowers exhibited.

Peter Fisher, who showed a fine vase of Flamingo, stated his plants were grown inside since May. They were very slow in producing flowers until a month ago, when he raised the night temperature to 56 degrees, since which time there had been a great improvement. The tendency of some of the flowers to come single he attributed to over-propagation and thought a selection of stock would give much better returns another year.

The next meeting of the club occurs on January 16. Introducers of novelties, which have not yet been exhibited before it, should bear this fact in mind.

W. N. Craig.

PRONOUNCING DICTIONARY

COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY FLORISTS' PUBLISHING COMPANY, CHICAGO.

Frequent inquiry as to the correct pronunciation of plant names has led us to compile the following list of names, selecting those in most common use in the trade, and including botanical terms most frequently met with in articles upon plant culture.

In our list we have used the following

NEW YORK DOINGS.

In the issue of December 8 the Review published a note with regard to the opening of a retail store in New York, to be known as the Flower Market, supposedly a project of Jos. Fleischman. The following from the New York Sun of December 21 may throw some light on the project:

A cut rate in cut flowers was begun yesterday with the opening of a flower market in Forty-fourth street, near Delmonico's. The market purports to be the outgrowth of dictatorial methods on the part of jobbers and of overcharging in the business. It is said to be managed by a combination of suburban flower growers, who propose to make the haughty jobbers and retailers get on the low price band wagon or go out of business.

This is a pretty good-sized job to negotiate, as the combination admits, but its members say they are abundantly equipped to handle it. They propose that the flowers shall go direct from the grower to the buyer. There are to be no middlemen to swell prices at any stage of the proceeding.

The new flower market is to be a sort of floral clearing house, where the public will be able to buy flowers at about the same prices which the growers have been getting from the buyers. By short circuiting the connection between the man who grows flowers for profit and the man who buys flowers for pleasure the combine expects to reduce by just that much the price of transmission. Then, again, there will be no fancy rents to pay and expensively equipped stores to keep up.

"We opened at 7 o'clock this morning," said Conright C. Young, manager of the new flower market, last evening, "and we have been doing excellent business all day. We undersell the regular dealers by 50, 75 and even 100 or more per cent, straight through on all flowers we handle. For instance, there are some American Beauty roses. We are selling them for $3 a dozen. You would have to pay from $7 to $10 a dozen for them at any well equipped retail store. There are some Enchantress carnations. Our price is $1.50 a dozen. The regular retailers ask $3 for them. Then, again, there are some Lawson carnations. You may possibly have heard of Lawson. We get a dollar for them; the retailers ask $2.

"This trouble in the flower trade dates back some years. It began with the wholesalers dipping into the retail business. They did it on the sly at first, and then they came out into the open and did it defiantly. They sold flowers right and left in retail quantities at wholesale prices. That and other things demoralized the trade until finally the growers got disgusted and organized this company to handle their own crops. It will enable a good many people in New York to have flowers on their tables who never thought they could afford to have them."

In commenting on the enterprise to a reporter Alex McConnell said:

It is more profitable for a large grower to dispose of his product through a representative jobber in New York than to deal directly with the retail stores. They thereby obtain better prices for their goods. It is undoubtedly more remunerative for the retailer to purchase from the jobber such stock as he requires each day. Another advantage to the retailer is his ability to thus buy the best there is in the market, as each grower excels in some particular product, one making a specialty of roses, another of carnations, another of violets. And by this true and tried system the retailer is enabled to select from the best productions of horticulturists.

SOME POINTS ON PHLOXES.

For years I have raised seedling phloxes and have been delighted with the results, often finding those equal if not superior to the foreign ones. Last year I found the key to success and have been filled with delight at the result. One of the largest and best of our importations is the Crepuscule. It has a flower sometimes larger than a silver dollar. It is white with a violet shading and an eye of carmine purple. It has a rather dwarfish stem and puts all its vigor in the blooms instead of wasting it in wood. It has also a full orbed head and continues a long time in bloom, so you see it has all the points of excellence, and, besides all this it is a variety that impresses itself on its neighbors.

I planted this in the center of a group of other choice ones and last fall planted the seeds and thus have secured at least twenty new kinds which have been the delight of florists. Among those near was the French Coquelicot. This is bright orange scarlet, very striking in color, but nearly worthless in the west because it lacks robustness. It is not healthy and sunburns fearfully and yet crossing this with its neighbor, the Crepuscule, gave the same brightness of color which was its chief merit, a more robust constitution and flowers double the size of the parent, Coquelicot. In short the French variety seemed to have a tremendous influence on all the neighbors, often improving the color and increasing the size. A florist came to see some of my new creations. Taking a silver dollar he laid it on one flower and, measuring carefully, said: "It will take just about $1.35 to cover the whole." In color some were much like the seed parent, others deep red, some maroon and a marvelous variety of tints which came from the fortunate blending.

There is this in seeking gems among the phloxes: You find out in eight to ten months just what you are getting. Save the seed just before the pods burst. Place them in a box with a cover for they will pop out when they open. This is a provision of nature to have them extend their area as far as possible. Plant the seed in the fall; let it lie in the slush and snow. If planted in the spring better plant under a screen and see that the seeds do not dry when germinating. Get the largest and finest phloxes you can find; those that have full symmetrical heads, plant near together and save the seeds. I have secured Antonin Mercie, enormous white flower bordered with clear lilac; Bacchante, very large, in color rosy carmine with purple eye; Daniel Lescuer, violet edges and center of petals white, and many others and I am sure of splendid results. C. S. HARRISON.

BELLEVILLE, ILL.—A. S. Halstead, of the St. Clair Floral Co., has had a busy fall and winter with the new carnation plant recently constructed.

QUINCY, ILL.—Gentemann Bros. report the Christmas business as far and away better than heretofore. They sold out of both blooming plants and cut flowers.

RICHMOND, IND.—G. R. Gause says: "Christmas business with us was fully fifty per cent ahead of any previous year; carnations in the lead, with roses a close second; green moss wreaths and holly sold well. Boston ferns were also in demand. Prices about the same as last year."

The Christmas Market.

The business done in cut flowers and in plants at Christmas was larger than ever before. The quality of the stock sold was excellent and for choice cut blooms, carefully graded, prices were higher than in 1902 and 1903. The demand for flowers of the Christmas color was exceptional. The supply was large but insufficient. Beauties and Liberty roses, Flamingo, Crane and Adonis carnations, euphorbia, poinsettia, and red bouvardia were all valuable stock, the quality bringing fancy prices. The figures quoted as possible in this column last week were practically correct. Fancy Beauties brought $15 a dozen. Fancy Liberties were very few, bringing $6 to $9 a dozen. Flamingo $2 a dozen, Crane and Adonis $6 to $10 per hundred. Good Maids were scarce at $20 to $25. Prosperity carnations brought $12 to $15. Enchantress, with far larger sales, brought $10 to $12. Double violets brought $1.50 to $2, single violets 75 cents to $1. The weak stocks on the list were white flowers. Brides lagged behind Maids. Romans and Paper Whites were not wanted. Carnations never sold better at Christmas. The crop was immense and the quality fine.

The weather, excepting on Friday, was most unfavorable. The large supply and generally good quality reflect much credit to the growers, as does the skillful and systematic manner in which the wholesalers and retailers sold and delivered the product. The stormy day Saturday was bad for transient business, violets suffering especially, but the telephone made up for the weather in many cases. The plant demand, especially for blooming stock, such as Lorraine begonias, azaleas, poinsettias, buttercup primroses, etc., was very heavy, one firm, Pennock Brothers, having to secure an extra supply as late as Saturday.

Pickling was a less serious evil than in past years. Let us hope that this senseless and wasteful practice will soon be a thing of the past. Some of the carnation growers, however, lost money by allowing their flowers to stay too long on the plants.

The retailers, as a rule, had just as much business as they could possibly do with all their skilled and extra help. They showed their appreciation of the superb lines of supplies offered them by investing heavily. The public saw, admired and bought generously of everything from Christmas bells to Christmas hampers filled with pretty plants. Taken altogether, Christmas 1904, proves that the love for and knowledge of plants and flowers is growing; that our people are prosperous and willing to pay a good price for a good quality. We must continue to do all in our power to foster this refining taste.

The Leo Niessen Co. has sent out a beautiful calendar for 1905. It represents a maiden carrying a bunch of Easter lilies.

What the Wholesalers Said.

"Good, all went well, but ordinary grades of carnations."—William J. Baker.

"Extra fine."—John Berger.

"Very satisfactory."—Eugene Bernheimer.

"Best I ever had."—Fred Ehret.

"Almost too much business."—Charles E. Meehan.

"Elegant; good shipping orders."—William J. Muth.

"We did a very large business. Red sold especially well. Carnations were plentiful and went well, except white."—Leo Niessen.

"We are well pleased with Christmas. The quality of our stock was fine."—Samuel S. Pennock.

"We worked day and night for three days."—Edward Reid.

Various Notes.

"Good, all went well but ordinary prosperous New Year.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. have reason to be proud of the way their Christmas novelties took with the general public. Their effort to meet the demand for novelty and variety is meeting with gratifying success.

M. Rice & Co.'s business this season broke all previous records. Notwithstanding the great Christmas rush, they were able to take good care of all rush orders sent them, having large surplus stock to draw from. This year was the most prosperous in their business career. The plans for their new building have been completed and approved and work will begin in the early part of the new year.

D. T. Connor states that Lord & Burnham Co. has lately put in a new Challenge boiler for J. J. Habermehl's Sons, at Twenty-second and Diamond streets, disconnecting two old boilers and connecting the new one in three days.

Myers & Samtman are reported to have had 7,000 Beauties. It is certain that they had an immense crop.

H. H. Battles made a round of the commission houses with his buyer, John McIntyre, late on Friday night. Time being precious, they went in a cab and secured much desirable stock just in from the growers.

Thomas Butler, who represents H. Waterer, the Seventh street seedsman, has had a phone put in his house for the benefit of his business friends. He says business is good. His joyous smile proclaims that this is true. In times of dullness his smile is still there, only it is sadder.

Stephen Mortensen, of Southampton, sent a few very choice Liberties to Samuel S. Pennock.

The Millbrook-Lee Greenhouses, of Whitford, Pa., Maull and Howell, proprietors, have been sending Enchantress, Lawson and other fancy carnations to William J. Moore. The quality of the stock reflects the greatest credit on the grower, John Stanley.

The Flower Market had a great run on their fine Beauties. Among the buyers was Frank P. Myers, who bought a dozen of the best brand, M. & S. stamped on the leaf, evidently for a Christmas gift.

The trade in greens and in Christmas trees was very heavy.

Too tired to write any more this year.

The Christmas Market.

Although there were no sensational advances in prices, as some had predicted, the Christmas trade of 1904 will go on record as very satisfactory. So far as can be learned, it has been equally good for wholesalers and retailers. Of course, the holding back process caused a certain stagnation in one or two lines, but not of sufficient magnitude to be of great importance.

The output of roses was rather larger than had been expected, especially of Brides and Bridesmaids. Prices on these showed no great advance, about $15 to $18 being secured for select stock, a larger proportion going at from $8 to $12. American Beauties brought $100 for long-stemmed stock, 24-inch-stems going at from $50 to $75. Best quality Meteor and Liberty sold at $50. In Killarney, Chatenay, Wellesley and other sorts, price did not rise much over normal figures. In carnations, fancy scarlets, such as Flamingo and Manley, made $10. Enchantress, Harry Fenn and one or two other fancies made $8 to $10. Some extra quality Prosperity were reported to have made $15. Good flowers of other varieties made $4 to $6, inferior stock going lower, whites being the hardest to move.

Violets easily made $2 if of good quality. The supply of these was unequal to the demand. Both double and single were of fine quality. Poinsettias are not much handled in a cut state in Boston. Select bracts sold at 50 cents. Roman hyacinths and Paper Whites made no advance and were, as usual, hard to move. There was a good supply of Lilium Harrisii from Peirce and Roland, these making $15 to $18. Lily of the valley made $4 to $6. Bouvardia, callas, stevia, mignonette and cypripediums made no particular advance.

Plants are not handled largely at the markets. Peirce sold large quantities of azaleas at the Park street market and some other growers had cyclamens, primulas, solanums and Boston ferns. Mann Bros. had a lot of berried hollies in pots, which sold well. At the stores the plant trade was of far more than the usual Christmas proportions. There can be no mistaking the fact that plants are to a considerable degree usurping the place formerly occupied by cut flowers as Christmas gifts. The best sellers appeared to be Lorraine begonias and azaleas. Poinsettias also sold in larger numbers than usual. Other sellers were cyclamens, primulas, ardisias, Aucuba Japonica, holly, solanums, Ericas fragrans and E. hyemalis. Trade in palms, ferns and other foliage plants was rather slow.

The supplies of Christmas greens were pretty well cleaned up on December 24. The quantity on hand was smaller than usual and good stock readily brought high prices. The numerous dealers in Christmas trees, wreathings, etc., on South Market street were cleaned out several hours before the time limit for clearing the street.

Since Christmas supplies have not been very abundant, due to cold, cloudy weather, and good prices have been maintained. Our Christmas weather was cold, temperature standing about 20 degrees above zero most of December 24. A considerable additional snowfall came on the evening of December 25.

The managers of both the Park street and new market report Christmas trade as very satisfactory, with stock of exceptionally good quality.

Various Notes.

The blooms of Fiancee and Cardinal carnations, which arrived a day too late for the club meeting, were on exhibition at the Park street market for several days.

M. H. Norton opened a store at 1 A. Park street a few days ago. We are glad to state that Mr. Norton reports an excellent Christmas trade in plants, flowers and greenery. We trust he may continue to prosper.

John Mutch, Newtonville, at one time orchid grower for J. E. Rothwell and for several years in business in Newtonville, has failed. Liabilities are given as $2,470.30, assets $765. Mr. Mutch grew a considerable quantity of orchids, chiefly cattleyas.

William H. Elliott, of Brighton, was the largest shipper of Liberty roses for the Christmas trade. His cut was of its usual high class quality.

The wholesale growers of decorative plants all report first-class business. Thomas Roland, of Nahant, who grows a large assortment, and grows them remarkably well, reports that he was as closely sold out of all flowering plants as he cared to be. In cyclamens, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, which he grows in immense quantities, and poinsettias, he had to refuse orders for over two weeks before Christmas. Azaleas and primulas also sold well. In ferns Nephrolepis Scottii sold fairly well.

E. N. Peirce & Co. had some 1,500 azaleas in prime condition for Christmas and cleared all out. Leuthy & Co., Roslindale, sold out a house containing 1,200 and had good trade in Begonia Gloire de Lorraine and fern jardinieres. Farquhar & Co. disposed of a big lot of Lorraine begonias, azaleas, primulas, cyclamens, etc. W. W. Edgar sold out a large stock of poinsettias, Lorraine begonias, azaleas, primulas and cyclamens. L. H. Foster estate did a heavy trade in Boston ferns.

Charles Sander has a good batch of the Turnford Hall sport of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine and considers it a fine thing and especially good under artificial light.

William Sim had 100,000 Princess of Wales violets for Christmas, all of superb quality and could have sold many more, also 5,000 of Mont Blanc and Earliest of All sweet peas of grand quality.

William Spillsbury had 22,000 single violets on Saturday morning at the Park street market alone. A Foxboro grower had 35,000 Campbells and all cleared out quickly.

Welch Bros. did an enormous Christmas business, breaking all previous records. In greens they could have sold much more. While bulbous stock and cheaper grades of carnations and roses arrived in surprising quantities and were rather hard to move, the great bulk of the receipts were of the usual high quality handled by this firm and their shipping trade was of enormous proportions, calls coming from all parts of New England. No Boston firm handled so many high class Beauties, Liberties and Queen of Edgely.

N. F. McCarthy & Co., Geo. A. Sutherland Co., and H. M. Robinson & Co. all did a heavy trade in Christmas greens, the last named firm doing a record breaking business. All the commission houses had to work all night Saturday and most of Sunday, although some lines were practically cleaned out on Saturday.

The supply of orchids at the stores, outside of Cypripedium insigne and Cattlya Percivaliana, was quite small. Some Lælia anceps and Calanthe Veitchii were about the only other varieties noted.

Nicholson's Prosperities were superb and netted the grower $15 per hundred. No other carnation brought as high a price as Prosperity and those who grow it well, find that nothing pays them better. Quite a number of fancy carnations made up to $12.

Galvin practically cleaned Edgar and Peirce out of azaleas, selling an enormous quantity at his Back Bay and Tremont street stores.

The first freesias of the season came in time for Christmas. They sold for $6. Myosotis sold at $3.

As usual there was an over-stock of bulbous flowers and white carnations. Quite a number of the latter were left unsold. The growers were a happy crowd at 10 a. m. on December 24, being about cleaned out of everything.

ST. LOUIS.

Christmas Trade.

The busy days of Christmas trade were very trying on the local florists. Most of them report business better than last year, while others say about the same, so taking all accounts together the Christmas business can be classed as very satisfactory all around. The weather was not at all pleasant; though not cold, it was dark and cloudy. Plants were easily delivered without any wrapping, which saved a great deal of work for those who handled a big stock of blooming plants, which sold much better this year than last.

The wholesalers had a great deal of trouble with the express companies in getting their consignments on time, some not coming in until the afternoon on Saturday and they were obliged to send their own wagons after the consignments. Another complaint is that the express companies refused to take back empties until after Monday.

Growers should mark their boxes "This side up," as a great many of them were standing on their ends and the heads of the best stock broken off. As usual, some of the growers resorted to pickling, which showed plainly on some of the stock that came in. But the bulk of our stock was of very good quality and sold at good prices. In roses, Beauties, Meteors, Liberties and Bridesmaids sold well. Brides, as usual at this holiday, were not in demand, but all the colored stock was limited. Prices ruled high on prime stock.

The carnation market was very healthy and a big supply came in, plenty of white and pink, but red was very scarce. Everything sold clean except the so-called held-over stock, which the trade will not buy in these times. The top price on fancy goods was $8 per hundred.

Violets were high in price and the retailers did not take any too well to them, as the general public will not stand for the price they are obliged to ask for them. There was a big supply of Romans and Paper Whites, which sold well at $3 and $4 per hundred. These were about the only items left over at the wholesale houses. Lily of the valley sold fairly well. Harrisii lilies were scarce, also callas. Some good stock in sweet peas was offered at $1 and $2 per hundred. Poinsettias sold well but were not over-plentiful. Smilax and asparagus at normal prices, sold well.

The retailers in the fashionable localities did a big plant trade and greater preparations were made this year than ever before. Azaleas, begonias, poinsettias, orange trees and decorative foliage plants were abundant and of excellent quality.

The holiday business in greens was much better than last year and it seemed that not enough holly could be secured for the demand. Wreathing also sold well, but the price is getting too low for the florists to handle, as the grocer, butcher and baker are handling wreathing at 5 cents a yard and holly wreaths at 10 cents, such as they are.

Various Notes.

Fred Weber's automobile delivery worked overtime on Christmas and came in handy for plant delivery in quick time.

Frank Fillmore received a novel Christmas present; a traveling bag with a complete outfit for the carnation society meeting next month, which he is making preparations to attend.

Frank Fillmore, Sr., is visiting his daughters in Chicago the past two weeks, spending Christmas with them.

Mrs. M. M. Ayers did a big business in both plants and cut flowers, much greater than last year.

George Waldbart, as usual, was sold out early of everything fancy.

The Ellison Floral Co. and Mary Ostertag had all they could do to get through by noon Sunday with their delivering. Everything sold well.

Ed Buechel, of the Riessen Floral Co., spent his Christmas in bed nursing his broken leg, while the company was busy as bees the past week.

C. Young & Sons Co. had the four big delivery wagons going the past week, attending to the wants of the large trade.

The club members should not forget the meeting on Thursday, January 12, as the first meeting of the year is always well attended. A big attendance is looked for. Those going to the Chicago carnation meeting should not fail to be on hand to hear the report of the committee.

DETROIT.

The Christmas Trade.

If a sleepy, tired and worn-out look is any indication of a good Christmas trade, then the florists of Detroit certainly had good business, for they all had that appearance by Sunday morning. My first call was at Breitmeyers', where they had eleven hacks out besides their own wagons, delivering goods before seven o'clock Christmas morning. They report sales about evenly divided between cut flowers and plants, everything in plants selling well except the white sport of Lorraine. All hands worked all night on Saturday, filling orders. Sullivan says it was a plant Christmas, with poinsettias in 8-inch pots in the lead and not enough to go around. He said the price of cut flowers ran too high, but he was buying carnations on Sunday morning, so they must have sold, too. Schroeter did a splendid trade with plants in the lead. With Taepke everything sold and he had plants to suit the purses of all classes, from 25-cent primroses to baskets at $15. The Detroit Floral Co. say the cut flower trade won out in that locality, anything in red selling well. In plants poinsettias and Boston ferns took the lead.

A visit to the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange found everything cleaned up except some late mums and white carnations. All report a very good trade in green goods, especially holly, which was, however, of very poor quality. During the week before Christmas the retailers all were very pessimistic as to trade and many were afraid to stock up, for not many advance orders came in, the result being that when the rush began they had no stock to show their customers, so lost some business which went where the goods were to be seen.

Various Notes.

At the last meeting of the club it was decided to try and secure the appointment of Robert Flowerday as park commissioner and a committee was named to wait upon the mayor-elect to that effect. The florists all feel that the appointment would be a most excellent one, but politics may interfere, or, more properly speaking, politicians.

It looks as if about twenty will attend the A. C. S. meeting in Chicago.

The Market.

Because of differences in dates of cuts and the shiftings of growers, reports vary as to how the total of Christmas sales compares with last year, but where a few may have, for these reasons, done no more than a year ago, or even a little less, others did considerably better than ever before, so that in the aggregate this market made another high water mark. As forecasted in this column for the past two weeks, the supply turned out to be much heavier than was thought possible when the wholesalers first began to figure on Christmas price lists, but the demand kept pace with the supply, so that prices, with a few exceptions, were well maintained and all good stock cleaned up. A noteworthy feature was that the out-of-town business did not show an increase in proportion to the increase in city business and up to Friday things were quiet.

Had it not been for the great numbers of long Beauties used by some of the first-class city stores there would have been a serious over-supply on this item, for the receipts were very great, and as it was, when a customer called for 24-inch stems, sometimes the wholesaler would take a dozen long-stemmed flowers back of the icebox and bring out the required length. The holiday call for Beauties was never more fully satisfied in this market.

The Christmas call is always for first-class stock and a good many more Maids and some more Brides of the highest quality could have been used to advantage. The shortage of this grade made a fair market for the seconds and the "crap" also profited, but there were very few times during the week when plenty of this could not be found. In the end, however, the roses all cleaned up at prices in keeping with the quality. Of course Liberty and Meteor were far short of the demand, as is always the case at Christmas.

Carnations held up to quoted rates, with red and fancy Enchantress bringing top-notch prices, but white had to be forced on the buyers or sold below the price of colored stock, and some were carried over. Violets, next in importance, were very weak, the only item which did not do as well as might be asked. Never before did so many eastern violets reach this market. They came literally by wagon loads and the market went to pieces. The buyer made the price and Tuesday still saw some of Saturday's receipts unsold. The singles did fairly well, considering, but there was little chance for Campbell. Poinsettias, good mignonette, etc., cleaned up well. Paper Whites and Romans hung but valley sold well.

Taking it all in all, quality was as good as can be expected when so much storing must inevitably be done, and prices on good stock held unusually well. There was a little weakening on Friday, but as soon as the city trade started the market for good stuff stiffened again. At least one wholesale house was delivering goods all night Saturday. Sunday saw good business, taking all stock in sight, and Monday, with light receipts, the demand kept up. Tuesday there was not much doing and not much to do with, so that the market continues steady, carnations stiff and long Beauties the weakest item on the list.

The Retail Trade.

The retailers are a unit in declaring this the best Christmas to date. They had all prepared for good business, but few had counted on a record-breaker, and the way they "hollered" for supplies Saturday night and Sunday morning was a pleasure to the, at that time somewhat disappointed, wholesalers. They used immense quantities of cut stock of all sorts and, after the market stiffened from its single slight weakness, did not question price if they were so fortunate as to find the goods they wanted of the desired quality. Many of them worked all night Saturday. Thousands of Christmas bells, wreaths, etc., were sold and many used up their stocks of hampers, baskets, pot covers, etc., before all their orders were out. Every Christmas plant was sold. Indeed, had there been more plants the sales on cut flowers would have been less, for some of the leading stores reported that many customers chose plants in preference to cut stock so long as the supply lasted. Azaleas were very well flowered and the principal item in blooming plants, but poinsettias in pans, also cyclamens, sold well and primroses were popular in baskets and hampers. Aucubas, ardisias and solanums were fairly abundant and took well. Very little ribbon but many pot covers were used.

Various Notes.

George Reinberg had a phenomenal cut of Beauties for the holiday and sold out clean Saturday night. He also had a good cut of Liberty. It was far and away his best Christmas.

John Poehlmann says that their sales for Christmas week were sixty-six per cent ahead of the same period in 1903. They have over 100,000 feet more glass this season, but even at that it speaks for a good cut.

Ed Winterson did not go out of the store Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday or Friday nights.

The staff at J. A. Budlong's store repaired to the greenhouses after supper Friday night and staid there until six o'clock Saturday morning, grading and packing stock for Saturday's delivery to the retailers.

Weiland & Risch had a tremendous cut of Maids of the "double extra" variety.

E. E. Pieser says that the only thing he didn't like about Christmas was the way the violet market acted. They could have used more of everything else.

The World's Fair Flower Show Association on December 23 returned to guarantors the twenty per cent assessment levied late in October to meet preliminary expenses of the St. Louis show. Possibly it was in the nature of a Christmas present. There is also a New Year's gift in prospect.

E. C. Amling says that one of the most pleasing features of the Christmas business was the way the carnations traveled.

An out-of-town buyer cannot lose his standing quicker than by refusing a C. O. D. A buyer in Missouri did this on an order for $37 shipped him by a local house on December 17. The box was ordered returned, unpacked and put in the icebox. On Saturday night, just a week after the first shipment, the stock was sold over the counter to a man with his eyes open for more than it was originally billed out for.

Carl Thomas, secretary of the A. L. Randall Co., says that in his opinion the warm weather Friday took hundreds of dollars of value out of the Christmas stock. A. L. Randall says they had over 60,000 violets sold on advance orders.

Weiland & Risch had an order for shipment yesterday for 475 select strings of asparagus.

Frank Pesternick, who worked for a long time with the Anderson Floral Co. and later with others, is now with E. Wienhoeber Co.

W. N. Rudd has decided to send out two of his carnations this year, Phyllis, light pink, and Chicago white. Winterson has handled both sorts for two seasons and the buyers like them both.

Peter Reinberg is getting a big cut of Uncle John with very fine color.

Wietor Bros. are cutting extra quality carnations.

The Benthey-Coatsworth Co. is getting very fine Liberty from two-year-old plants.

There was a meeting on Tuesday afternoon of the general committee in charge of the Carnation Society entertainment. The preparations will now be pushed, for the meeting is only a month away.

NEW YORK.

Christmas Notes.

Again we have had a merry Christmas and though the great day of reunions, gifts and demonstration of human love and sympathy is but a memory, its lessons of good will and kindness will remain as long as life endures. It is an interesting thing, this gift of prophesy. It does not always work. This year it was a credit to its exponent. Everything came true to name, even the weather. The air was mild. Plants hardly needed an extra protection. The big snow storm held off graciously until about everything was safely delivered.

Prices of all cut flowers just came up to anticipations as quoted in the last issue. The best actually reached the high figures given. There was a great improvement in the freshness of stock, very little pickling, and what little there was receiving the condemnation it deserved. Before long it will be a disgrace to hold and send in aged flowers. By that time no reputable wholesaler will handle such goods at all. This will be retributive justice. "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

It was a splendid Christmas. None has a serious complaint to make. Growers who sent good stock realized good prices, not the unnatural, exorbitant figures of other years, when values were boomed above all reason and everybody was made uncomfortable, but good, fair, advanced rates that were natural and expected and accepted uncomplainingly by buyers. So the growers have reason to say it was a merry Christmas and the wholesalers well may make merry, for when the smoke of battle cleared away on Sunday there was literally nothing left and prices, starting at fair levels, actually advanced as the day wore on.

Retailers paid the figures demanded because they knew they were fair and just, and there you are. And such a retail business. Never were cut flowers so appreciated and cleaned up these many years and plants of every kind, and in every style of arrangement, overwhelmingly in evidence everywhere as they were, were short of the demand. And supplies of green goods, holly, everything that goes with Christmas, including thousands upon thousands of bells of every kind and size and material, from paper to plushine, from silk to immortelles, all were sold.

There would be no use particularizing. Every man in the business would have to receive recognition. It was simply a banner Christmas and notwithstanding the prophesy of the French seeress of widespread disaster in 1905, it looks to our optimistic eyes like the greatest horticultural year the world has ever known.

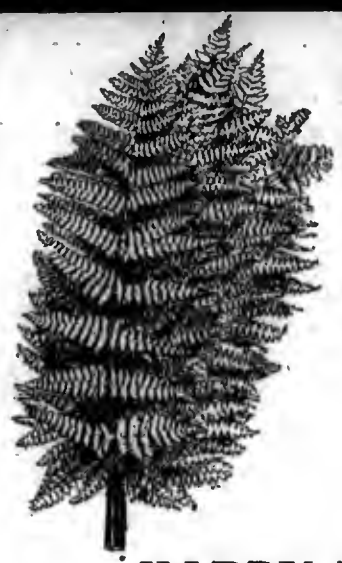
Plant arrangements this year were exceptionally unique and beautiful. The artistic color grouping speaks well for the adepts who in each of the large retail stores make this a specialty. The plants themselves were perfect; they must be to suit the New York taste, and plantsmen in and around this city lead the world.

Among retail Christmas orders, to give our friends in the smaller cities and towns some idea of what the festive season of gifts develops in New York, I know of one order for sixty separate dozens American Beauties at $20 a dozen and one batch of orders for $900 worth of plants in baskets sent out to twenty-five different homes as Christmas greetings.

A visit to the Hinode Co.'s new plant at Whitestone is suggested. The Christmas demand absorbed every tiny Japanese plant, of which not long ago the supply seemed inexhaustible. They are expert growers of Harrisii as well as longiflorum lilies. They are already booking Easter orders.

A horseman clad in ancient armor marched up and down Fifth avenue last week with trumpet extended and banner unfurled. For a minute it seemed as though the days of old had returned, when knighthood was in flower. Everybody stopped to have a look and those who followed the stately prancer were led to the so-called Flower Market on Forty-fourth street, just off of Fifth avenue, where the poverty-stricken millionaires will have an opportunity to buy at the same prices they have always paid, satisfied if they think they are saving money. It's a good scheme, worthy of the advanced advertising age. In the Flower Market itself things look about as they do in any florist's store, only three or four lady stenographers are very busy, the merry click of their machines making a business-like melody, while men clad in long blouses of a blue-gray color, wonderfully like butchers' aprons over in dear old Lunnon, "don't cher know," wait upon the customers very much as do the clerks in the other stores. I didn't see any of the fifty growers, but I didn't go down cellar. I hardly think any of the big fellows on the avenue will close this week, however.

The Begonia Gloire de Lorraine baskets and balls were one of the crowning glories of the season. They were everywhere and yet there were not enough of them. Wonderfully popular they were, plants from 50 cents to $10 arranged in baskets. And bells, bells; it took little imagination to hear them ringing out the glad tidings of good will to men and peace on earth. (Russia and Japan excepted.) The mistletoe did service at the old stand as usual. There are some customs that never grow old. Those orange trees in yellow baskets with yellow ribbons were very pretty and they sold like hot cakes. Poinsettias, ardisias, brilliant dracænas, anything with a tinge of red in it, went without urging.



McConnell's new glass fernery graces many a table today. His English stone vases, of which he is sole arbitrator in New York, attracted attention.

Orchids, the plants with ribbons and baskets to match, were among the choicest items. Never was the heather more worthy of "lore and lay." It was grown to perfection.

"Jimmy" Collins, with Mackintosh, is better after two fights with appendicitis, just in time for some of his fine novelties.

Warren B. Craw, of the Lord & Burnham Co., has been spending the holiday part of his wedding trip at Washington. He will see all the principal cities of the country during his four months' honeymoon and will soon be reveling in the glories of Pike's Peak and the Rockies.

There was a runaway last week on Twenty-ninth street. The boys won the victory over the frightened horse and saved everything but the shaft and harness. It turned out to be Alex. Guttman's charger and not the horse that carried the knight errant over on Fifth avenue, as some suggested.

The superintendent of the Lawrence Estate, at Elmhurst, a Mr. Burkhard, married his employer last week and with her a half million dollars. This should be an encouragement to all superintendents, head gardeners and foremen everywhere. Mr. Burkhard was a widower and Miss Lawrence a spinster of 50 years. Everything comes to him who waits. We congratulate the profession.

Some great balls and public decorations are close at hand. Mrs. Astor's will be, as usual, the society event of the year; 1,200 invitations, the largest ever given in New York. The Arion is close at hand also. The opera season is at its height. The coming January will be the most brilliant month old New York has ever seen. March 4 is very near. There will be something doing every day and night until the great inaugural ball at Washington.

Next week, Monday, January 9, the first of the New York Florists' Club's meetings for 1905 takes place. It will be a great send-off and the president will outline the policy whereby he will beat his own record. There will be many features of interest. Don't miss it.

Alex. Westwood, at one time in the retail florist business on Columbus avenue, is now with J. H. Small's Sons, Broadway, and was transferred to their Washington store for the holidays.

Julius Roehrs, Sr., who has been very ill at his home with bronchial pneumonia, is now considered out of danger.

Here's wishing you a Happy and Prosperous New Year. J. AUSTIN SHAW.

NEWBURG, N. Y.—The Yuess Gardens Co. has been incorporated with $20,000 capital stock, by Robert H. Cathcart, H. L. Force and O. J. Cathcart.

KALAMAZOO, MICH.—J. H. Williams is now in charge of the greenhouses of the Dunkley Floral Co., succeeding M. F. Kyle, who has retired from active work.

PATERSON, N. J.—Ed. Sceery puts up some very fine window displays. For Christmas he had a rustic mill scene and across a valley a church in which a wedding was in progress. It attracted much attention.
